When we use the muscles, they are converting chemical energy into physical energy, in the case of exercise, by using up these chemicals such as starch and glycogen and carbohydrates. In any exchange such as this, there is a waste product left over. With the muscles, it is lactic acid. It is a case of producing the acid faster than it can be taken away by the body's waste removal systems.

When this happens, minerals, particularly sodium and potassium, are thrown out of balance. The result of this is that certain muscles are touched off, causing the muscle to contract and give the aching feel-ing-the spasm.

Sometimes the cause can be more subtle. For example, a pair of muscles used excessively during the day may be unable to contract at rest and the result can be the spasm.

It is not difficult to correct the problem. If a spasm occurs in the foot while lying down, simply stand on the foot. For some reason, utilizing the opposing muscle (muscles are always in pairs) seems to counteract such spasm.

Often a firm massage will help, and aspirin or an equivalent will cause the ache to subside. If spasms occur frequently, a small dose of quinine sulfate (about three grains) will be effective. Your physicians should advise you in this.

Usually a hot tub bath will also stimulate the circulation, and the process of removing the so-called waste product I referred to will take place.

I suspect there will be a number of complaints about muscle spasms in the legs with the advent of the new platform shoes which put some of the people no one ever intended them to be tract and give the aching feel-put in.

The student opened the three of hearts in spite of South's bid of two hearts in response to his partner's Stayman two clubs. The student was looking at five hearts which was one more heart than he expected South to hold.

The Professor, sitting East, played the jack, South won with the king and led his king of clubs.

The student was on lead with the ace. He thought a while and then led the 10 of clubs. He planned to play his nine of hearts. Either East held the queen or South the queen-10. In the first instance the heart continuation would lead the contract; in the second case he would be giving South a trick he was always sure he'd make.

The student was surprised to see the Professor win that second heart with the ten, but not too surprised to overtake the queen and cash the last two hearts for five defensive tricks.

"Isn't the 10 of hearts play correct?" asked the student.

"It is the book play," replied the Professor, "but this is one time when you forget the books and help your partner as much as possible. Had I played the 10 you might not have led a second heart."

U.S. [illegible]-ruled

Locomotives Go to Cuba

DUNNVILLE (CP) — MLW-Worthington Ltd. decided Friday to go ahead with its locomotive deal with Cuba, and Trade Minister Alastair Gillespie promised early legislative action to prevent U.S. intervention in future export sales.

MLW President R. L. Grassby told a Montreal news conference the company's nine Canadian directors over-ruled one U.S. director in a vote to proceed with negotiations with Cuba. Another U.S. director, in New Jersey, did not attend the meeting.

Those two directors had earlier halted progress on the deal pending approval of the sale by the U.S. government under its Trading with the Enemy Act, which outlaws trade with Cuba by U.S. firms and their subsidiaries.

Mr. Grassby said the two new directors are protected from prosecution under that act, one by his opposition and the other by his absence.

He described as a coincidence the resignation before the vote of board chairman E. C. Forbes, a U.S. citizen.

Ottawa, which has always opposed application of the U.S. law to Canadian companies, had supported the request by MLW's parent Studebaker-Worthington Inc. for exemption of the Cuba sale from the U.S. ban.

Mr. Gillespie told reporters Friday the government will quickly introduce legislation designed to eliminate such cases.

He said it will direct Ford Canadian companies from submitting to foreign laws by withdrawing from an export deal.

Officials say that Washington will probably acknowledge predominance of that law over the

ALASTAIR GILLESPIE

The MLW decision to proceed with the Cuba deal, valued by Mr. Grassby at $12 million to $14 million, has reduced the government's concern over the U.S. state department's pending final decision on the exemption application.

One official said the government cares little whether Washington prosecutes the U.S. directors despite their opposition to the sale, as long as the deal is allowed to proceed. That would be a problem for the two directors and the U.S. government.

Mr. Grassby drew a distinction between MLW and its 18.6% parent, which owns more than 53 per cent of the Montreal company.

MLW had not sought U.S. approval for the sale and did not plan to, he said. In fact, its parent made the application.

Fighting Continues On Tense Golan Heights

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Syrian and Israeli forces clashed again today in the central sector of the tense Golan Heights front, a Syrian military spokesman announced.

The spokesman, quoted in a communique broadcast over Damascus radio, said Syrian artillery destroyed an Israeli bulldozer and another vehicle in shelling that erupted, when Israeli engineering units tried to improve their positions.

The communique reported no casualties for either side.

Artillery and rocket fire flared in the same sector Friday, prompting orders for Israeli civilians to stay close to the bomb shelters in their frontier settlements in occupied Syrian land.

Reinforced Israeli infantry and tank units remained on high alert for possible trouble along the rocky ceasefire line left by the October war. There were reports of some Israeli reserve call-ups.

Loss $5 Million?

Commons Boils in Oil

OTTAWA (CP) — The government may lose $5 million on the heating oil it bought last fall as insurance against winter oil shortages, Harvie Andre (PC—Calgary) said Friday.

He told the Commons that the government paid 52 cents a gallon for 25 million gallons of heating fuel it bought in Romania and the Caribbean. Total cost was about $13 million.

With selling prices now down about 20 cents a gallon the loss when the oil is sold will be about $5 million, he said.

Supply Minister Jean-Pierre Goyer, who has not released details of the purchase, made no comment on Mr. Andre's figures. He said he is not in a position to disclose the purchase price.

Mr. Andre said in an interview later that he got his information from several oil industry sources in Quebec City. Some of the 25 million gallons is stored in Golden Eagle Ltd. tanks at Quebec.

Warm winter weather and better-than-expected inventories left the government without buyers for the fuel, Mr. Goyer said earlier in the week.

He indicated then that it will be sold at a loss, something he described as a premium for having the oil as insurance.

When the purchase was made, there was a serious threat of severe shortages, he said. The major worry was supply, not price.

The government was "under tremendous pressure at the time and maybe, politically, they had to buy it," Mr. Andre said Friday.

But Conservatives had warned that the price would be high and developments were proving them right.

"They're going to take a bath on it," he said.

New Government Plan To Expand Book Sales

PORT COLBORNE, Ont. (CP) — State Secretary Hugh Faulkner announced Friday the government will help finance two plans aimed at expanding sales of Canadian books.

The first is establishment of a marketing and sales consortium of domestic publishers to promote their editions in schools and universities in a combined sales campaign.

He did not put a price on the programs.

FBI Arrests Four After Boy Released

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The FBI announced the arrest today of two more men in connection with the kidnapping of an eight-year-old in Hills, N.Y., boy who was released unharmed after payment of a $50,000 ransom. The latests arrests brought to four the number under arrest in the case.

The FBI announcement, made in Washington, said additional persons are being sought.

Agents said after the arrests late Friday that their investigation was continuing and as many as five persons were believed involved in the abduction Wednesday of John Calzadilla, 8, whose parents live in Queens.

The kidnapping was one of several that apparently prompted President Nixon Friday to ask for reinstatement of the death penalty in kidnapping cases where the victim is killed.

After consulting with the president, Attorney-General William Saxbe urged Congress and state legislatures to reinstate the death penalty.

Labor Move Freezes Rent

LONDON (Reuter) — Prime Minister Harold Wilson has called on Britons to get their coats off and work to solve the country's economic problems at his new Labor government makes the first attacks on the rising cost of living.

In a dinner at his Liverpool constituency Friday night, Wilson said that solving Britain's problems "is going to mean an all-out effort by our people."

"We have all got to get sunk-in—the whirlwind now is coast off for Britain."

Earlier the minority government's environment secretary, Anthony Crosland, announced a freeze on all residential rents until the end of the year. It affects about 4.6 million tenants in the public housing and 3.5 million persons in private housing.

At the same time, officials representing most of Britain's shopkeepers offered to cut prices by an average of one per cent at a hearing held by the Price Commission, but the government is putting on pressure for a larger cut.

These measures, plus the ending of the three-day work week at midnight Friday night, did nothing to encourage the London stock exchange where prices plunged to their lowest level in more than seven years.

Prices have been declining since Tuesday, largely through fears that this week's $28-million settlement with the coalminers may lead to a flood of inflationary wage demands.

Nixon Friends Back in Court

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seven men, including four who were former White House aides H. R. Haldeman, John Ehrlichman, Charles Colson and Gordon Strachen; former assistant attorney-general Robert Mardian and Kenneth Parkinson, former counsel to President Nixon's campaign finance committee.

Mitchell, Haldeman, Ehrlichman and Colson were among Nixon's closest advisers in his first term.

The 24-count indictment contained the following charges:

—Mitchell, conspiracy to obstruct justice; obstruction of justice; lying to FBI agents; two counts lying to a grand jury and perjury before the Senate Watergate committee.

—Haldeman, conspiracy to obstruct justice; obstruction of justice and three counts perjury before the Watergate committee.

—Ehrlichman, conspiracy to obstruct justice; obstruction of justice; lying to FBI agents; two counts lying to a grand jury.

—Colson, conspiracy to obstruct justice and obstruction of justice.

—Strachan, conspiracy to obstruct justice; obstruction of justice and lying to a grand jury.

—Parkinson, conspiracy to obstruct justice and obstruction of justice.

—Mardian, conspiracy to obstruct justice.

The indictment alleged a conspiracy to pay hush money to the original seven Watergate defendants to hide the involvement of Nixon campaign officials in the break-in at Democratic national committee headquarters.

Haldeman was charged with lying to the Senate Watergate committee when he quoted President Nixon as saying "it would be wrong" to raise hush money.

Parastreaker

An unidentified Univ. of Georgia student, clad only in tennis shoes and his parachute harness, floats to earth on the campus. He was one of five streaking sky divers who made the jump, later around 1,000 Univ. of Georgia students set what they claim to be the intercollegiate streaking record. (AP Wirephoto)

School Streaker Hides in Closet

WHITBY, Ont. (CP) — A 15-year-old Grade 9 streaker ended up red-faced in a janitor's closet after the school principal confiscated his clothes. Jim Robb, principal of Henry Street High School, said the boy doffed his clothes in a secluded portion of the school and set out for more active areas, but was forced to return because of locked doors. When he did his clothes were gone. "Finally, out of sheer embarrassment he locked himself in a janitor's closet," Mr. Robb said. "But he had to find or ask his schedule. After a short time he was able to borrow a pair of sweat pants to make it to the office. "He did it on a dare," Mr. Robb said. "But I suppose we'll have to suspend him from school, at least temporarily."

Senior Citizen Tries 'Snailing'

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Senior citizens need not feel left out by the current campus fad of streaking. "Snailing has arrived. In Lima, Ohio, 67-year-old Virgil Cleves was arrested Friday for strolling in the nude in the city's public square with a female companion. Also bare, Cleves said he was too old for streaking, the latest college fancy in which youths strip and dash about distances between spectators. He termed the event for older persons "snailing." Cleves and Wanda Gray, 46, were charged with public indecency.

Peronist Killed

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Argentine Terrorists killed a right wing Peronist today, and the Marxist People's Revolutionary Army claimed responsibility. The slaying came as a powerful bomb went off outside the plant of the leftist Peronist newspaper Noticias, injuring five persons and causing heavy damage, police said.

Students End Siege

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Nearly 100 Ethiopian students ended a three-hour siege at their country's embassy today during which they held the ambassador and two other diplomats hostage. Ambassador Yohannes Tiegbe told reporters the students ended their protest peacefully after the embassy transmitted to Ethiopia their demands for Emperor Haile Selassie's abdication and the resignation of his newly - appointed government.

Death Postponed

Store Hours

Municipalities Want Minimum Intervention

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's municipal leaders went on record Friday as favoring minimum government intervention in the establishment of store closing hours, and the observance of Sunday as a common day of rest.

The policy appeared to please Solicitor-General George Kerr, who recently completed a 12-city tour of Ontario gathering public opinion on the controversial issue.

"I think that point is well made," Mr. Kerr said in response to the position stated by Desmond Newman, mayor of Whitby, at the monthly meeting of the provincial-municipal liaison committee.

The municipal position was legislatively placed before the committee by Allen Masson, chairman of Halton region, Mr. Masson said the group favored the current retail practice but with restrictions on "unreasonable extension of store hours" that could be controlled in provincially laid-down guidelines.

Mr. Newman said industry requires "a framework in which to operate and that's why we went for this option."

Mr. Kerr said the justice secretariat will begin compiling a report after a public meeting Friday night in Chatham to help the government formulate a policy on store closing hours and Sunday observance.

The municipal leaders also said they favored the retention of Sunday as a day of rest, but would allow stores that provide essential services, such as jug-milk stores, to remain open. They said the stores should be regulated according to their size and staffs.

Mr. Kerr said the ministry's concern is that large chain stores would establish small operations in order to stay open Sundays.

Intergovernmental Affairs Minister John White suggested one solution may be to allow the various regional governments to set store hours, leaving the province to regulate hours in other areas.

Mr. Masson said the regions would object to having this authority because the problems of each region vary greatly.

Mr. Kerr said the ministry has 5,622 letters to various groups and officials asking for opinions on store closing hours.

Of these, 3,700 opposed wide-open store hours—many of the letters contained more than one signature—and 180 wanted wide-open shopping.

On another issue, Mr. Newman said the municipal leaders object to the government's intention to appoint the chairman to the proposed new authority that will regulate transit in the four regions of Metropolitan Toronto, York, Peel and Durham. The authority is to be composed of one representative from each of the four regions, and a chairman named by the province.

Mr. Newman said this would give the province too much influence on the authority.

Information Officer Appointed

Loyalist College has a new information officer whose duties include liaison with high schools and their students in the four counties served by the college. He is Keith Martin, a 1971 graduate of Sir John Per Collage in public relations.

Mr. Martin attended Moira Secondary School from 1963 to 1968 and finished his high school education in Brampton. Following college graduation he worked for the Ontario ministry of the environment, developing an "ecology puppet show" in conjunction with Hembee as a SWEEP summer project. While with the provincial government he was a special projects officer and an exhibit co-ordinator.

Picton Men Constables

PICTON — Three former Picton men have graduated from the Ontario Provincial Police College in Toronto and have been posted to detachments.

Constable Sidney Devries, a graduate of Prince Edward Collegiate Institute, has been posted to the Kingston detachment of the OPP.

Constable Daniel Sisty, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Sisty, Picton, and Edward Heights, has accepted a posting in Perth.

Constable Neil Fennell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Fennell, Prince Edward Heights, also has a posting with the Perth detachment.

Toastmasters Welcome Women

The art of public speaking is not strictly a male domain. With this in mind women are invited to join the city's Toastmasters club.

The two-year-old club aims to provide its members with an opportunity to speak before the public and have their speech evaluated with hints given on how to improve any weak points.

In Toronto recently a new Toastmasters club was chartered with 28 women and five men.

Last year, Toastmasters International, formerly a male—only club decided to include women members, but left each individual club to make its own decision.

Anyone wishing to join the Belleville club may call Dick Lloyd at 968-5375 or Skip Roberts at 962-9431.

The Past Not Quite Abandoned

Windows of Lakeshore House, once bright with gaiety of bygone era, are now boarded over. But the mansion, once a top recreation rendezvous in Quinte country summers, has not been totally abandoned to time. Provincial government planners are studying feasibility of putting it to use in modern parks setting.

QUINTE COUNTRY

Mansion May See Former Glory

By MARGARET BAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

SANDBANKS — Lakeshore House, hub of Prince Edward's summer social scene in the Gay Nineties, again may become a prominent tourist attraction.

Built at the Sandbanks, overlooking Lake Ontario, the white frame three - storey mansion today is owned by the Ontario Ministry of Natural Resources. It is part of a 600 - acre package of land lying between two of the county's sandbar natural environment parks, Outlet and Sandbanks. The parks staff also owns a century-old farm complete with orchard, sugar shanty and productive sugar bush.

When Lakeshore House reigned as Prince Edward's "in" resort it catered to the recreational tastes of all tourists and local residents. There were tennis courts, an open-air dancehall, billiards rooms, merry-go-rounds, ice cream parlor, horse racing and boating regattas.

Today, the mansion that belonged to an era of long, hot summers spent leisurely at the Sandbanks, is abandoned. Although not architecturally significant on a provincial basis, it is important locally. Conceivably, it could become a place where parks interpretive staff could familiarize visitors with the costumes, fashions and furniture of bygone days.

Park planners are studying this and other possibilities while awaiting an architectural historian's report from the province's parks branch.

A release from the Ministry of Natural Resources last noted the land package, including Lakeshore House, was purchased to join Outlet and Sandbanks parks and to provide a place to relocate and expand nearby park campsite grounds. It is considered that relocation of campsites was a basic necessity.

Since 1956 camping visitors have increased 75 per cent and day users at both parks have increased 200 per cent.

The release observes that the sand dunes are threatened by "the ever-increasing tramp of the tourist, especially in the existing camping areas."

Once disturbed the dunes could begin to shift and blow, according to the parks' report. By relocating the campgrounds, traffic can be reduced and the dunes and their vegetation safeguarded.

As improvements are made to Prince Edward's parklands, plans will be discussed for use of the century-old farm owned by the ministry. It has been suggested the farm could become a working model of agriculture in Prince Edward and Ontario as it was 100 years ago. This would permit city youngsters to see farm animals, implements and processes at close range instead of in picture books.

The operative sugar bush at the farm would be a year-round tourist attraction.

"Lakeshore House might be an interpretive and administrative centre for the whole area, with room for displays on wildlife, vegetation and geology of the county, not to mention the history," suggests the ministry's Wayne Mollon in one report.

Until 1972 Lakeshore House operated privately as a summer resort and was owned by Dr. Lawson Mackie.

When the historic building centre closed, many Prince Edward residents attended an auction sale there and recalled the early days of the gracious white mansion.

Fortunately, the charm and legends of Lakeshore House will be preserved for county residents and tourists to enjoy for years to come.

EMO Exercise Scheduled

PICTON — A peacetime emergency exercise is tentatively scheduled in Picton on March 20 under the direction of Quinte area Emergency Measures Organization co-ordinator Angus Duffy.

Colonel Duffy has suggested in a letter to town council that the exercise might involve a simulated airplane crash. Various types of emergency services and facilities would be required.

Included in the exercise would be a lecture demonstration and practical work.

It is expected that elected officials and various other public agencies will attend.

Sub-Standard Housing

Columnist Vincent Egan has been talking about the continued demand for housing, despite high costs and interest rates.

In this matter of housing the tendency of course is to think of new accommodation.

But what about the conditions under which some people live in Canada — including right here in Belleville.

There is housing in Belleville which by any yardstick must be regarded as sub-standard.

We don't have to pinpoint any of these places, for this is home to some people — all that they have in the way of shelter. Nor are these places tucked away in the backwoods, out of the public eye, and they are not necessarily the places one sees in the older suburbs of any either. They may be seen in areas of relatively modern housing and industry, and indeed, not far distant in one instance from one of the city's newer high-rise and apartment areas. Anyone with his eyes open must be aware of such places in and around the city.

At the very least one must consider the safety of such structures, as we consider for instance the possibility of fire, say from faulty heating systems or wiring.

If this is Belleville the Beautiful . . . the Friendly City or whatever public relations name we may give it, it cannot truly live up to such an image so long as we have some of our citizens living in these conditions.

Perhaps it is time to go to work through to this, toward the end that something better be provided: accommodation that is both worthy of human dignity and of the city's overall surrounds.

Smoking Ban

The action of Scarborough board of health in asking two borough hospitals to separate non-smoking patients from smokers is one that should be noted by Belleville and other hospital authorities.

The Scarborough board has also asked the hospitals concerned to prohibit visitors from smoking in hospital rooms.

In these days of heightened knowledge about the relationship between smoking and cancer, not to mention recognition of the discomfort smoking can cause to others, this sort of step is a logical one. At the very least smoking should not be permitted in patients' rooms.

Put this at a footnote, and a curious one at that, we see that Picton firemen fighting a barn blaze in a rural area were provided with cigarets by area residents who were lending a hand.

Matter of Extremes

There is no accounting for taste. Little did British designer Mary Quant realize that one day the miniskirt which she designed and which became a fashion hit around the world would be frowned on by the czars of the sewing-up countries of black Africa, to the point that it has been banned in some.

Now it is the other extreme — in Chile where the right-wing military government has ruled that girls cannot attend classes wearing jeans, maxiskirts or platform shoes. And for the boys, long hair is out.

Does that mean Chile can expect another revolution on its hands at some juncture, with the young people flocking to Canada to join their far-out-man brothers and sisters up here?

Comic Relief?

People tend to act their age, as witness the latest student fad. It has been a while since the students have engaged in any sort of far-out activity, political or otherwise — and we suppose it does afford something in the way of comic relief in a rather grim world — but seldom have we heard of anything so transparently asinine as the current panting of "streaking." They are even doing it up in Alaska, with the temperature at eight below. Makes a fellow (unless he is a student of course) want to come in from the cold!

Alkenbrack Ready to Confront P.M:

Inflation And Bilingualism Main Issues In Next Vote

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Unless they can smokescreen their election issue, it is going to be a strange-sounding campaign when it hits the trail.

Conservative Leader Stanfield has staked out his issue as inflation, and has been busy mining it for all the votes he hopes it is worth, all across the country.

And Prime Minister Trudeau, when last on the public record with his official proclamation of the issue — and he came down hard on it — said it had to be bilingualism.

Just in time for the new parliamentary session, both inflation and bilingualism have been hotting up.

Not that they ever have 'cooled off' in recent months — it's rather that both have been taking on a more fiery glow.

Mr. Stanfield's latest cause back off the pre-campaign trail by the sober strains of the new session," Statistics Canada has moved the cost-of-living up a few more notches on its consumer price index.

So what Mr. Stanfield has going for them, every Conservative knows, is the fact that while there may be some beaver-wives who are not exactly clear on the Finance Minister Turner's kind of fiscal and monetary policy talk, not one of them does not know about the price of margarine going out of sight.

So what Mr. Stanfield has going for him, every Conservative knows, is the fact that while there may be some beaver-wives who are not exactly clear on the Finance Minister Turner's kind of fiscal and monetary policy talk, not one of them does not know about the price of margarine going out of sight.

It was last spring that the Prime Minister, getting a running start on the campaign expected to come later this year, said the issue must be bilingualism.

He laid it all out in a talk with Quebec journalist and broadcaster Maurice Chaput-Rolland, and his office produced a transcript for all to read.

The plight," read the text, "to make the French fact respected from port to sea is not ended, the battle is not won, and I intend to make sure that in the next election this question will be fully debated."

The Prime Minister went on to say that during the 1972 election he had been naive enough to believe that the battle for bilingualism — begun 15 years ago by former Prime Minister Pearson — had ended in victory with only a small scattering of Canadians still opposed.

"I was mistaken," he went on. "It was still a block in the hearts and guts of many people (who) it must be squarely admitted, did not want a government that believed was progressively dominated by Francophones."

So the fight, swore the Prime Minister then, would be carried over into the next federal election.

Both issue, in the middle ages, might have simmered down — although not likely, especially in such days when public service populated places as the National Capital.

Except that now, it has dared anew with the disclosure that there could be double the bilingual content of the government staff than initially and officially estimated.

Among parliamentarians more than happy, to oblige the Prime Minister in making Bilingualism THE big issue is Leader Ontario Conservative MP Douglas Alkenbrack.

"I haven't minded being called a bigot," he said in a statement, "and so I'll keep on saying that bilingualism is a meaningless fraud — a monumental fraud against English Canadians."

Not only is the Civil Service being "packed" with Francophones, but the Armed Forces and the RCMP, too, he charges. And in such an extent that it is and shook "uncertainty and fear into the hearts of a great many English-speaking Canadians.

"Those of us representing the English-speaking minority in the House of Commons have been growing more and more fed up over the bilingualism. It is time for us to fight back.

"That is why the "The Alkenbrack File" — a six-inch thick file of correspondence from English-speaking government employees — there is reference to the transfer of a French teacher at the federal language school who is regarded as saying: "We had it hard for 100 years — now it's your turn."

And that, says Douglas Alkenbrack, "pretty well tells it like it is with this Government and bilingualism."

Doomsday Gloom Recedes in Britain

By ROD CURRIE

LONDON (CP) — It may be just hopeful wishful thinking, but the British public and press seem to be coming around to acceptance of the idea of a minority government.

After all the hand-wringing that accompanied the near deadlock results of last Thursday's general election, the surprising up-beat reaction of financial circles here and the response in Europe and other capitals appear to have left the stiff Britons that doomsday, after all, is not approaching.

Steeped in the tradition that their much-vaunted system always — or almost always — produces a clear majority government, the initial reaction here was that a Labor administration without a sharp mandate to cope with the country's pressing industrial and economic crises might turn out to be a disaster.

But now, with bedrift of hindsight, the Tory-leading press is lauding the minority government as possibly a blessing in disguise, pointing to the minority or coalition governments of much of Europe and in Canada as examples.

Certainly Britons have been pleasantly surprised by the initial strong recovery made by the pound and share prices on the stock exchange as an indication of confidence in Prime Minister Harold Wilson's stated resolve to come to grips with the crippling coal miners' strike and Britain's economic troubles.

The press may be softening the Labor government for criticism later, but for the moment it is calling for calm and reason to give the Wilson government a chance.

By contrast, even the most conservative-minded newspapers are keeping on former Prime Minister Edward Heath, accusing him of unbecomingly clinging to power during the weekend of indecision before finally stepping aside to make room for Wilson.

The performance of monetary and stock markets is in sharp conflict with October, 1964, when Wilson opened his first period in office. His election then brought heavy pressure on the pound and the stock exchange faltered.

British public opinion seems to have been swayed by the thoughtful press articles emphasizing that a minority government is even preferable to a coalition, which Heath sought unsuccessfully with the Liberal party in the wake of election results giving Labor 301 seats — short of an over-all majority — and the Tories 296.

The theory is that coalition experience in continental governments has shown that the smaller partner, or partners, tend to try to get their way by threats to quit or resign.

In this context, much interest is being focused on Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau's minority Liberal government in Canada.

Patrick Keatley, writing in The Guardian, says for instance that the experiences there has resulted in the restoration of power to the ordinary backbench MP "who is no longer to be seen by party whips as meek and predictable lobby fodder."

He and other commentators suggest that when a party has less than half the seats in the House, it is trying to keep itself in power, strength flows to Parliament and it is the Commons which becomes elected rather than an individual party machine.

Prospects For Northland Appreciation

By DON O'HEARN

TORONTO — The sensations of this session, if any, will be uncovered as the members go their day to day work.

At least there was no spectacular promise in the throne speech.

This document was as dry as it normally is.

One exception was the north.

Northern Ontario got more attention than usually is given to it in this government statement.

From the announcement of upgrading the Sault St. Marie-Sudbury road to the positioning of developing gas from the Polar Bear cap there was quite a bit of talk about this section of Ontario.

It was assumed that this was because PC fortunes have appeared to be on the ebb in the north and that there will be a concentrated campaign to revive them.

Whether this will be, or can be a success remains a question for the future.

The main answer for the north would seem to be new and widespread industry.

And there was little in the government's announced plans to herald this.

Although not absolutely new, one of the more interesting projects outlined in the speech was a development in the Cornwall area.

This development will see an industrial park developed under by the federal and provincial governments.

This could hold considerable promise for the future.

In the past the province has developed some industrial parks on its own, such as at Coburg, and they generally have been successful.

If the federal government is also going to throw in its resources obviously much more can be done and the consequence could be a much better break for some of the economically low-scale areas of the province.

The Cornwall venture is a pilot project.

It is expected in the future to be extended to other areas of Ontario, including the north.

And if well handled it could pay off in substantial dividends.

Management and Labor Squaring Off

By VINCENT EGAN
Robinson and Cressmore' Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Showdowns are approaching rapidly in a number of management-labor negotiations all across Canada.

—Management negotiators in many cases will be digging in and resisting first demands, recalling the undoubted fact that, the business outlook is gloomy and that industry is having to retrench.

—Labor negotiators will demand much more than last year's average increase of 9.2 per cent on the ground that the cost of living is exceeding workers' wage gains and that corporate profits have been soaring.

With each side amassing an impressive array of figures to prove its contentions, serious confrontations are the likely prospect.

How high are corporate profits?

In third-quarter 1973 (late available) they were running at a record annual rate of $14,728 million or 10.5 per cent of Gross National Product. That dollar figure was more than double the low point for the past five years—$7,346 million or 8.4 per cent of GNP in the first quarter 1970 at the trough of the government-induced anti-inflation recession of 1969-70.

Labor income was $63,800 million or 53.5 per cent of GNP in July-September, 1973, vs $47,376 million or 50 per cent in October-December, 1970.

Major labor contracts (covering more than 500 bargaining members) coming up for renewal this year cover some 730,000 employees across Canada, down somewhat from 1973's 825,000.

But there will be strong pressures from other unions—citing today's unexpectedly high rate of inflation—to re-open contracts that would normally extend beyond 1974.

Some companies have even anticipated that the unions will voluntarily added an inflation premium to the wage increases they had already contracted to pay this year.

This has been done, for instance, at some subsidiaries of a major base-metal mining and processing company—a company enjoying gradual increases in its revenues as a result of soaring world prices of metals.

But other industries find themselves in the opposite position. As users of those high-priced commodities, they face big increases in the energy and material costs on the one hand, and stiffening consumer resistance to higher price-tags on the other hand.

It is in these industries that a tough fight can be expected before any new contract is signed.

Contracts covering nearly 15,000 plasterers, lathers, teamsters and construction labourers expire March 31. A month later, contracts run out for more than 25,000 carpenters, plumbers, electrical workers, metal workers and related crafts.

June 14 is the last day of the current contract covering 20,000 West Coast woodworkers. August 4,500 in the same trade, working in the province's interior, have contracts expiring at the same time.

One of the hardest fights may well be in the British Columbia mining industry. The impact of the proposed Mineral Royalties Act remains clouded, but the government and its early friends to take a 'much bigger share of the mining industry's revenues.

It's time for all parties — labor, management, government — to take seriously the recent warning of Marc Lapointe, chairman of the Canadian Labor Relations Board:

"Management and labor in Canada are the rivalling their system of arbitration. The results is a return to the primitive ways of settling disputes through strikes and lockouts."

Bilingualism A Costly Package

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

To the great delight of the francophones, the English-speaking Canadians continue to submit to bilingual bondage. Now over 220 million North Americans speak English; while educators, scientists, businessmen and diplomats throughout the world acquire proficiency in English-speakers allow ourselves to be forced to disburse millions of tax dollars in order to finance a sure-to-fail second-class citizenship.

Does performance mean anything? Does one see when we buy a car or an electrical appliance. We become irate when we have to pay for poor workmanship. We question the honesty of companies and governments when gasoline prices hit 45 cents a gallon. But what do we do when the leaders of the major political parties parrot the absurd, vote-grabbing myth that "Canada is a bilingual country"? We accept it as Holy Writ — and we pay up.

It's time for us to look at the results of bilingualism. It has been a dismal, costly failure in every country that has tried it. It will fail here too. Belgium as a country torn apart by bilingualism showed disunity and dissension. Is that to be our future?

To date, the Pearson and Trudeau regimes have squandered half a billion of our tax dollars on bilingualism (over 300 million dollars in the federal civil service alone). Those 500 million dollars would be better spent on with urgently-needed new schools, hospitals, homes for the aged, and rehabilitation centres. But all we have to show for this huge expenditure is increased dissension throughout the nation.

We English-speakers (72 per cent of Canada's population) have been duped. The entire country is currently promoting our interests when in fact we are to restore sanity and majority rule in Ottawa we must first destroy our only financial muscle.

We can do this by rallying to the support of Canada's fastest-growing political party: the Confederation of Regions Party!

DOC party members support electoral candidates who oppose compulsory bilingualism.

DOC's motto is "One Official Language—One Canada." DOC believes in the west and now has members from coast to coast. The Trudeau government is well aware of DOC's growing power. So are Alberta's Liberal members who have been decimated in the last federal election.

The Dominion of Canada Party stands for a united, English-speaking nation; the return of the Red Ensign; retention of the monarchial system of government; private enterprise; freedom of the mid-majority to come tax (it CAN be done!); friendly relations with the United States; and the right of citizens to keep this country free from communism.

Do we English-speakers meekly accept the latest francophone-dictated, upward spiral of civil service bilingual job to-be-filled? Or do we rid ourselves of our bilingual ball and chain, and join Canada moving forward again — in step with an English-speaking world? The time has come for us to make that choice.

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

In what way, before that I read a letter in The Intelligencer, in which a fine lady, who is contributing freely of her time to help the children in our community learn how to live in love and brotherhood was viciously — and most critically — put by, I find, a person who is quite the opposite of a Christian.

One of my sons was taught by this lady, and thinks there is no one like her. When he graduated, she gave him a lovely picture of Christ. And as a young boy on his voyage through life, He never left him.

My younger son is at present being taught by this lady, who her does more to instill that religion is than many "so-called" spiritual people will ever be able to do.

I could sit and be sad and have this situation remain as it is.

This lady not only talks about her faith — she lives it! Many children have learned by her example and will grow up to be good citizens because of her.

I hope she will not become discouraged by this attack, but know that there are many people who admire and love her.

Charleyhorse Could Build Character?

By MAURICE SWITZER
Managing Editor

Who would have guessed there were so many athletic supporters in Belleville?

When a Page Five column recently suggested that perhaps mental education should take priority over the physical types our school system offers, the protests started flowing in.

Not since the days of the "Save-Snoopy" campaign has the community been so stirred to action.

One of the basic points to the whole discussion has been overlooked. Physical education, in itself, is not an "educational evil. But should it be compulsory?

The only mandatory exercise of any sort I can recall from elementary school days was fire drill. And if you think lacrosse or hockey are rough body-contact sports, you haven't been trampled by 120 screaming pre-adolescents down three flights of stairs.

There must be many a retired public school principal who dives under the nearest table when an alarm clock triggers traumatic flashbacks.

Then came secondary school phys-ed which, for some of us, was compulsory.

Well, not exactly. Those students who preferred not to participate in outdoor intermural sporting events had the odious option of cleaning out the Latin teacher's stables.

Few students confessed to such classical leanings, however, and wound up gotting their youthful tendons hamstrung all over skewered football grids that looked so green and billowy . . . until you landed.

Beneath that emerald foliage was a surface that would defy jackhammers. A fumble would rebound off that green concrete like a helium-filled hare.

Granted, nobody tried to brainwash you into believing that all those charleyhorses were helping round out your character, if not your spine.

But school spirit was paramount. Anyone who broke his leg in athletic combat could get the school crest chipped onto his cast.

Coaches were masterful at getting boys "up" for the games. One teary-eyed tutor once asked his team to win one for his nephew, his uncle's team's biggest fan, who at that very moment was dying of an incurable disease.

Sure enough, after the win, the boy recuperated remarkably, although he suffered mysterious relapses before each game throughout the season. The ball much like Christian Scientists with shoulderpads.

Another coach had a pep talk for every occasion, and could rattle off a stirring motto like: "It's not the size of the dog in the fight, it's the size of the fight in the dog." Unfortunately, few opposing teams had apparently heard such sayings, because they didn't play like they believed in them.

But things have changed. Today there are ambulances in attendance for most high school football games.

And they are usually needed, since few high school coaches know more about the sport they teach than anybody who watches television. The fact that a high school phys-ed department member was tight end for Temiskaming U. doesn't mean he can properly condition OR teach a game's fundamentals to a group of teenage athletes.

If there is one positive development in school sports, it is the introduction of such activities as archery, golf, and tennis — games that can be carried on long after graduation.

After all, one can only play touch football just so long after his school days without looking like some overweight, undertalented pen-pusher trying to relive his youth by wearing an old sweat shirt.

Roughly translated, it means "healthy body — healthy mind."

As the students used to say, take your pick.

School Exercise Tires Pupils So They Fidget Less in History

By WAYNE CASSELMAN

FICTION — What is physical education? What should it be? How should it be taught? As a matter of scholastic subjects, the teacher should be attempting to reach as many students as possible within the confines of a 40-minute period.

Let's begin at the beginning. In most elementary schools in Ontario, the same classroom teacher who teaches math, science and English, also teaches her or his class physical education.

At time slot is all too often looked upon as a "spare" period by the teacher. It is something most don't prepare for. In many cases, the physical education period will not be related in content to the last or next one. It is just a time for games.

The the kids out and they are more willing to sit and listen to a history lesson later in the day instead of fidgeting. Also, many of these classroom teachers have never taken any specialized courses in physical education.

Fortunately, some schools are now having the grade five, six, seven and eight classes relate to a physical education teacher for their lessons.

One child, yet to be overcome by many schools, is the tendency to have the boys and girls take their physical education classes separately. If the physical education class is aimed properly at the various full levels of movement education, body awareness, space awareness and self awareness, then the girls and boys blend beautifully and compliment each other in many of their movements.

How to look at secondary school. They have most of their classes segregated. Unless philosophies have changed drastically since I graduated, (1969, Quinte S.S.) the bulk of the courses are aimed at making achievers out of people who already are above average physically. Games, competition, and stress are all over-emphasized. I loved it when I was in it, because I fit my role perfectly. However, I can think of many of my cohorts at who hitched to hate the major sports because they couldn't come up to our level of achievement and from one were failures in the eyes of the instructor. I know I hated gymnastics because I couldn't do a headstand.

Too often the teacher will have Joe Jock do a neck spring off the box horse and then he'd say, "There, that's how I want it done!"

If only every child could learn to succeed at some little thing without meeting criticism and ridicule. Every student is capable of achieving to some level and he must be judged by that standard, not by someone elses.

The fat grade eight kid who was just tired his hardest and has finally managed a front roll on the mat is worth a lot more to me than the jock who can do handsprings all day but never gets forth that extra effort.

I'm not saying ignore Joe Jock just because he's naturally good. I am saying concentrate on helping every student in the class reach his own level of achievement. If Joe Jock wants extra work on his routine, let him get it after school at the gymnastics club practice, not during school hours when the others have a right to the instructor's time as well.

Physical education classes are for everyone to enjoy. Let Joe Jock dominate after school when the school teams are practicing.

As for budget, I also feel that more emphasis should be put on activities such as swimming, tennis, golf, softball, bowling, and other forms of recreation that the student may want to participate in after graduation.

Very few graduates go on to participate in football, the biggest budget eater on campus.

Once again, I loved the game when I played it, but, looking back on it, I find it hard to justify the cost.

The cycle to me has also been high. I have one bad shoulder, a bad back, and two bad knees.

Most ex-high school stars have paid the price.

Household Irritants

Wonderful World of Widgets Drives One to Distraction

By D. P. SLOAN

I know it isn't the war of the worlds but the irritant factor adds up to a fairly impressive point on a scale from one to a hundred.

The component part syndrome, we call it. An infinitesimal plastic widget falls out of the inside of the refrigerator door — disappears — and there after the metal rail won't stay on. Every time you open the door some package or other falls off the shelf, fetching you a sharp blow on the ankle.

Pieces of plastic break off the setsphere on which the crispers and moist trays slide, leaving same with a pronounced list. Eventually an equal and opposite piece breaks off — at which point the jig is up with the meat tray — which can't hang it in the air. The crispers just sink down and sit there on their damp bottoms.

A divided door on that otherwise unusable corner of the kitchen cupboards can provide a break in the monotony any day. On the third or fourth pull it breaks right down the middle. There you stand holding half a door while the screw-nail from the hinge goes last forever.

Kitchen drawers these days look great but they have a poor track record. When the plastic ball bearings go — forget it. Ever thereafter it's grind and bind all the way. The metal strips on the sides of the baking board loosen and spring away and not only will it not glide in and out smoothly — it won't even just stay in there doing nothing.

Pop-up toasters have a fun lot of little capers for you. Ours has to be forced to the standing on a chair and dropping the bread into the slot. Mass times velocity thus gives the necessary momentum to activate the weight-controlled spring and make the bread drop down so that the toaster will come on. We watch closely from here on in lest the bread turn to charcoal or the crumbs are placed over the chair.

Steam-type curling irons are equipped with a small plastic plug which fits into a opening about one-third of an inch in diameter. The plug exists to cap the opening. The plug holds water, which in the fullness of time boils and steams.

The container's capacity is a fixed dose. The iron is ready to use after two minutes — presumably the water is boiled. When you've done a head of hair wound up to the desired tension you push down the plastic button and out comes a whoosh of steam.

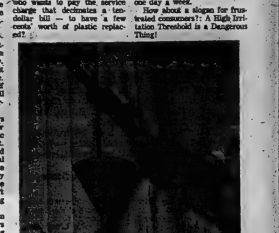
Unfortunately, this pressure has a tendency to open the iron at the hinge. Then you get a neat flesh burn. While you apply ointment the six drops of water have evaporated and have to be replaced, and believe it or not you have a very small funnel.

When the plug goes — so goes the iron.

For years we haven't been able to run our clothes dryer on High and if we try to shorten the wash and wrap cycle on our washer we blow a fuse. Our steamy iron won't steam, the clock on the stove no longer tells time — ergo the automatic feature of the oven is gutted and the rotisserie won't turn.

The metal part that used to close the drain in the bathtub seized up and had to be extracted. Temporarily, we find that a nice old-fashioned rubber plug does the trick nicely.

It would be so easy to replace the appliances in into but they aren't really worn out. The problem is how do you describe these weird little fastenings so that you can order new ones? Is one dispatched and ordered who wants to pay the service charge that decimates a ten-dollar bill. Do we have a few cents' worth of plastic replacement?



Dealing with the bigger components such as clocks, timers, and automatic controls can run into a sizable slice of a weekly wage.

A survey of the average household would probably prove that almost every family has a few mechanical apparitions that limp along doing half the job.

Why don't consumers start a drive to have manufacturers enclose a package of thingamabobs with every appliance that has thingapassbobs in its makeup?

Furthermore, we should get smart and refuse to buy the latest features which eliminate simple processes such as turning off a switch on a TV, or automatic timers on ovens "if we are only out of the kitchen one day a week.

How about a slogan for frustrated consumers?: A High Irritation Threshold is a Dangerous Thing!

This curling iron is just one of a number of modern appliances that can cause more trouble than they're worth.

They Said It.

"Our problem rests id overnutrition, overindulgence, and under-activity. If we can solve the last problem, we'll be well on the way to solving the first two." — Fitness expert Lloyd Percival addressing the annual Belleville YMCA dinner.

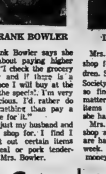
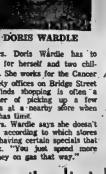
How Do You Tackle Today's High Food Costs?



ROBY WOOD

Mrs. Roby Wood shops for a family of four and estimates she spends about $80 a week on groceries. "I've done nothing about cutting food costs. There's nothing you can do. I shop at the same store usually because it's close by. I make use of frozen foods when I shop and find I had to cut down on roasts when I buy food," said Mrs. Wood.

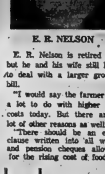
MARGARET RILEY



Mrs. Margaret Riley just has to shop for herself and her sister but she too is conscious of higher food prices. "I check the grocery ads beforehand to see which specials are on," she add. "I don't buy the expensive cuts of meat that often and make up dishes that can be frozen." said Mrs Riley.

MRS. FRANK BOWLER

Mrs. Frank Bowler says she scrimbles about paying higher food bills. "I check the grocery ads closely and if there is a big difference I will buy at the store with the special. I'm very price conscious. I'd rather do without resemble than pay a higher price for it."



Mrs. Bowler and her husband and myself to shop for. I find I had to cut down on luxuries such as veal or pork tenderloin," said Mrs. Bowler.

DORIS WARDLE

Mrs. Doris Wardle has to shop for herself and two children. "I check the grocery ad Society offices on Bridge Street so finds shopping is often a matter of picking up a few items at a nearby store when she has time."

Mrs. Wardle says she doesn't shop according to which stores have specials but generally each week. "You just spend more money on gas that way."

E. R. NELSON

E. R. Nelson is retired now but he and his wife still have a deal with a larger grocery bill.

"I would say the farmer has a lot to do with higher food costs today. But there are a lot of other reasons as well."

There should be an extra clause written in for wages and pension cheques allowing for the rising cost of food."

Physical Education Helps in Development of Complete Individual

BRUCE FAULDS

By BRUCE FAULDS

The World Health Organization, a branch of the United Nations, defines health as a state of complete social, emotional, intellectual and physical well-being not just the absence of disease.

An individual who qualifies as being completely healthy under this definition is a rare breed. The concept of such an individual is one toward which we all should strive.

To be completely healthy, one must enjoy well-being in each of the components mentioned. If you place emphasis on one aspect, to the exclusion of one or all of the others, your state of health will not be at the highest level.

Your health and its components may be compared to a square. To be a square, all sides must be equal, and the angles must be 90° at corners. Change the angles or the length of one side, or indeed drop one side completely and you no longer have a square. The ratio of the square is a delicate balance between the four sides and the angles of their relationships one to the other. So it is with health.

To be completely healthy, each component requires equal emphasis — a constant relationship one with the other.

Change one and the process is gone; the balance which makes us a healthy human being is destroyed.

Education and the community have a responsibility to aid to the fullest, the complete development of every individual. To do this, the educational system must be involved in all four aspects of human development, mental, social, emotional and physical. Further, it is important to educate the student concerning the inter-relationships of each component.

Early education placed emphasis on mental development to the exclusion of the other components. Physical training was introduced to support the physical aspects of living, but no attempt was made to integrate the two aspects.

In recent years, the emphasis in education has swung toward a focus on the complete individual; one only are we concerned with what is learned, but also with how, and in what subjects. Not only are we concerned with what is learned, but also with how, and in what order. Not only are we concerned with how and in what environment, but also, are attempting to deal with all four aspects of the student and with their interdependence.

Physical training gave way to physical and health education. The physical education classes became the means for developing the physical aspects of the individual and the health education classes the vehicle for teaching the values of physical exercise and the inter-relationships between the four components of health. Physical and health education has become an integral and important aspect of public education, and cannot be dropped for financial or -any other expediency.

The physical education classes in most of the secondary schools place, emphasis on the skills of team games, gymnastics and dance in the lower grades and offer courses in the higher grades which develop skills in sports designated as carry-over sports, such as badminton, tennis and golf, which students can make use of to continue their physical development after leaving school.

Students tend to be graded on the basis of their own individual development rather than in comparison with their peers.

Physical Education departments in the schools of Hastings County are continually re-evaluating their programs and, as a result, are modifying these programs to better meet the needs of the students and the community.

We welcome community investigation, involvement, and constructive criticism. What better way to improve?

Making Business 'Joyful Experience'

In what its chairman calls the spirit of fellowship found among early Christians, the first annual meeting of the new Board of Congregational Life of the Presbyterian Church in Canada took place in Toronto last week.

The board, actualized in January after two years of planning, replaces committees, church congregational hierarchy which a simple structure encompassing all facets of congregational life.

Its chairman is Margaret Taylor, of Belleville,veteran lay worker for the church.

Mrs. Taylor, widely known for her acchlitous and successful fund drive to build Ewart College in Toronto, says earlier congregational structures were fragmented and overlapping.

"They were designed to serve the church but in the end the church was nearly serving them."

"In this time in history we need to be flexible."

The board integrates the Board of Christian Education, Board of Evangelism and Social Action, the Board of Stewardship and Budget along with men's groups and youth work committees.

The 30 member board is composed of eight synod representatives, nine ministers and nine laymen appointed by the Church Assembly and four members representing special groups like the Women's Missionary Society.

...The Women's Missionary Society still exists separately, Mrs. Taylor says, although most other groups have been integrated.

Ed of Congregational Life

"That mission concern certainly needs to remain strong," Mrs. Taylor says, "but the way society is going, specific men's and women's groups are integrating in a common purpose to be of service to the congregation."

The first woman board chairman for the church in 1958, she headed up the missionary and deaconess training school and the drive to replace its outdated Toronto facilities with a new $600,000 structure.

"I guess I've been something of a pioneer. To put it another way, they always give me the tough jobs."

Mr. & Mrs. Taylor, a minister's daughter, has filled many administrative posts for the 200,000 member Presbyterian Church in Canada.

Through it all, she's retained a desire to keep away from the "corporate" image of big church business and to return to simple structure that can function with flexibility.

"The board of congregational life has to be what we define a congregation as: a group of caring Christians. We must do business but we've tried to make it a joyful experience."

One of the ways she tried to fulfill that was to ask board members to "share with me a daily bible study for a month prior to the conference".

"Not everyone did it but it made a difference" at the conference. You could feel it."

Prayer was on the agenda every day.

"It's the taking valuable time from business. I think it facilitated business," Mrs. Taylor says.

"It's an exciting time in the church," she adds, "there's a feeling of renewal ... we're hoping the board can help it along."

Mrs. Taylor admits that restructuring itself can't bring new life to the church. However she believes that, providing personal, accessible and practical help to congregations through resource development and leadership committees and advisory committees of task board members, a spirit of renewal will prevail.

"We've committed ourself to be a sensitive and listening board," she says.

"... ON AFRICA'S BURNING SHORES"

"We must always have old memories and young hopes." — Arsene Houssaye.

* * * * *

Now and then a news flash, be it on TV or in the newspaper, suddenly ignites a long forgotten memory, and for a moment, splashes the present with brightness.

Such as this account, in this morning's paper, (at time of writing) of the end plight of Thomas Gatch, American balloonist, whose safety concerns the army authorities of Spanish Sahara at El Aaiun. (May his fate be fortunate).

El Aaiun — an old town we had never heard of, let alone ever dreamt of visiting — yet did just that four years ago this very month, one day while holidaying in the Canary Islands.

Bear with us if you will . . . Ah, here's our diary, which reads :

Our party left our hotel there at La Puerta de la Cruz, Tenerife, at 7 a.m. and reached the airport — to wait until 9 a.m. when we boarded a small "Canadair" type of plane, whose captain piloted us "wither-away" in his shirtsleeves, while two smiling, young Spanish hostesses tempted everyone with taffey and orange juice.

The Grand Canary Island passed beneath us before coming to the coast of Africa. Then, but unbelievable as the tawny gold sand of the Sahara, began immediately where the sea, blue as a sapphire, caves off! The hostesses allowed two passengers at a time to stand behind our pilot, to see the view, passage — windows being tiny, we could.

We touched down on Africa at El Aaiun, Spanish Sahara, around 10:05 greeted by a tall, dark - eyed Sheik, dressed in a dark Confessionen blue robe, who shook each of our party by the hand.

A waiting bus took us past an armed military base (no pictures), on to El Aaiun with street lined with low, yellow and cream colored adobe houses. Nor did we stop but passed on to visit a Beduuin's home some distance away, where we stopped before a tent alone in the desert. Nearby was a camel.

The Bedouin lifted each guest over the camel's saddle and before one was nicely settled, the camel recklityrose, and thus swayed and tettered his passenger before settling into his stride — and four.

Removing our shoes before entering the tent which was richly carpetted with many and various Turkish and oriental rugs, we met the three wives and their children. One of the wives her face completely hidden by a dark scarf as were the others, rose from their sitting position. After our party was nicely sitting on the rugs, and chose various dancing partners by first putting a bead necklace over their heads. Then, the Bedouin then danced with the ladies of our group.

We departed shortly and next were driven to a row of silversmith shop filled with hand-wrought jewellery. Then on to an Arab Market-Place overflowing with tempting treasures of the East. A long, narrow room within furnished with tables along the walls and surround. A w.. cushions was now filled by our party, (shoes removed before entering), for this was a restaurant.

Here superb food was served, soup in glass bowls.

A casserole of crushed-corn and carrot spiced with raisins and chicken was delicious, as well was a skewer filled with cubes of meat—camel meat we learned later,— to be dipped into a dish of hot sauce made from red peppers. And dates for dessert.

After this repast, back again into the waiting bus, for a twenty-five mile drive into the dessert. to have tea with another bedouin living in an oasis complete with palm trees.

We were led to seats that ran around the wall of a small structure especially built for such occasions. At one end sat our host making the ceremonial tea — of crushed dried mint leaves, real tea leaves and coned sugar cubes, which he broke into small pieces with a special silver hammer This was then all put in a pewter pot over a small fire fanned by bellows. When ready, the tea was poured by him into tiny glasses arranged on a tray, with a rhythm and grace to behold.

Each guest was served a second glass. The two glasses represented welcome and love, a gesture and mark of their hospitality.

After tea, a walk to a spring, the only one within a radius of 100 kilometers. After which again boarded the bus to drive to El Aaiun to a Spanish parador or hotel where rooms freed an inner garden, regardless of the desert, and rest rooms and lounges were sumptuous and comfortable.

Despite the rapidly approaching switch to metric measurement, most of us are still operating with recipes calling for a pound of this or a half-pound of that. You think supermarket meat managers and clerks would know that.

Since most people shop in stores which pre-package meats, they're getting socked a little harder at the checkout counter when those meats are packaged in all kinds of peculiar weights like 1 pound 3 oz. and 2 pounds 9 oz. When you want a pound of ground beef or stewing meat, that's what you want and the extra ounces just add extra.

Do you believe the stores don't know any better?

Revenue, Canada, Taxation, in Ottawa, publishes a series of booklets designed to help you fill out your income tax forms as painlessly as possible.

An Introduction to Canadian Income Tax is specifically designed for new Canadians or persons entering the work force for the first time. Income Tax and the Senior Citizen deals with information of help to pensioners and Income Tax and the Student deals with tax matters affecting students. Trust and their Beneficiaries is another available booklet.

You can obtain these booklets by telephoning the district taxation office at 962-8811 or writing National Revenue, Taxation, Federal Building Belleville.

They'll answer specific questions, too, but won't fill out your form for you.

If you bought in imported Italian chenille berel recently, check the label for "Dyed and Sanforized" by manufacturer number CA 00493 at the bottom of the label. Sanforized at the top, you're wearing a dangerously flammable hat. They are currently being removed from stores. See the merchant about a refund.

Another recall: The Longines Symphonette Society is recalling a combination clock-lamp-radio after a St. John's, Nfld consumer awoke one morning to find the thing smouldering. The product had not been approved by the Canadian Standards Association. The model number is LCR 532. If you have one, contact the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. Wonder what kind of like insurance to buy? You can make a toll-free telephone call to the Canadian Life Insurance Association in Toronto which has instituted a consumer information service.

Dial 1-800-261-8663 with questions about relative costs and merits of policies, meanings of terms or even complaints. The bureau won't recommend a specific agent or company nor does it sell life insurance. On the other hand it is a trade association representing most life insurance companies in Canada, so don't expect anyone to tell you not to buy insurance.

The association also publishes an information booklet "How to Compare" which answers a number of the most frequently raised insurance questions. It's available without charge from CLIA, 1 King Street West, Toronto M5H 1E9.

Oil Shortage Affects Carpet Manufacturing

TORONTO (CP) — The oil shortage, already affecting feedstocks, the energy shortage, may affect your choice of carpet for a new home.

Ian Boyd, vice-president of Burlington Carpet Mills, says 96 per cent of all carpet manufactured in Canada is made of synthetic fibres.

Synthetic fibres such as nylon and polyester are derived from petrochemicals that are dependent on supplies of raw petroleum feedstocks.

In a release from Burlington, Mr. Boyd said carpet mills are already running short of nylon and polyester.

He said mills may have to put out fewer color choices and raise prices.

"Carpet mills, depending on how plentiful they are about their supply of fibre, will make the decision of shorter color lines or not.

"A company that finds itself in short supply will cut certain colors. No one will stop making carpets in greens and golds or rusts, which are very popular. On the other hand, some companies will surely drop colors like plum, pink or rose.

"It could be a long wait for peach for a homemaker who has matched a particular carpet from a particular mill.

"Prices will probably climb later in the year, as cost increases are passed on. Right now, carpet is a bargain for the consumer."

Mr. Boyd said the shortage may force carpet mills to step up their research for new materials and new methods of manufacturing.

"This is the time to produce look-alike carpets. Carpet is a fashion business, and consumers shopping for carpet will have the results of some genuine and significant technical advances, some which have come as recently as four months ago.

"Patterned shags and plushes and increasingly sophisticated color plants are things to look for."

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a girl, 17, and I like the way you answer some of those crazy questions. I never disagreed with you until now.

You printed a letter from a teenager whose parents criticized her friends because they never said hello or good-by or thank you when they left. That made sense. But when you told teenagers, both boys and girls, should stand up when an adult enters the room—that killed me. Either you are an ignorant fool or you think teenagers are. It's like asking us to kiss your feet when you walk by. Granted, we should show respect, but stand up? I'd spit first.—Disgusted in Tecumseh, Nebraska.

Dear Disgusted: Not at all. I'm not asking you to stand up for every adult who enters the room. I'm talking about your parents' friends who come to your home for the first time and I need your help.

I am asthmatic, under certain conditions, and smoke bothers me to an alarming degree. If friends smoke in my residence room I have to sit up the rest of the night to breathe. Smoke at the dining room table makes me positively ill. Some of my students actually smoke in class and this can be a real problem if it's the person in front of me.

How can I request smokers not to smoke when they are around me without looking like a neurotic or (worse yet) a demanding person? Please instruct me on how to handle this situation. All I want is clean air for my lungs. But I also want to keep my friends.—Smoked Out in Waterloo.

Dear Lee: Any person who would smoke after you told him (or her) that you are asthmatic and smoke makes you very ill is not worth having for a friend.

As for smoking in class, I feel the idea is a real bummer—even though I know some schools permit it.

For my money, the best way to show respect for elders is to be courteous, considerate and kind. Standing up when they enter the room is fine if you're in the mood, but it's not necessary.

Dear Ann Landers: The other day, a girl I go to school with was telling me how sad she was because she had lost two of her best babysitting customers (they moved away) and she hadn't been making enough to buy her mother a birthday gift or her grandparents a present for their 50th wedding anniversary.

When I suggested that she give them a gift of "time" she was amazed, and, I might add, very appreciative. I explained that often the gift that cannot be bought in a store is the most meaningful gift of all.

Older Children Need 'Mothering'

Much that underlies La Leche League philosophy ("Good Mothering through Breast-feeding") is relevant for as long as we live. I know how it helps me, reassures me, and moves me, in trying to recognize and meet the needs of my older children who are now 11, nine, and eight years old. I remember the time when picking up a little one, nursing him or rocking him, would take care of most upsets, and I'd often come from such moments as refreshed as my child. Now that they're older, the holding or touching is still important, though it often requires an emotional and intellectual component that can be hard to come by when I'm feeling pressed or weary.

I remember hearing a founding mother of La Leche League saying that as she looked back she remembered how much easier it was to give a night nursing than to sit up with an older child who was telling her all about the evening he had just spent. She found herself struggling, not only to stay awake, but to be alert and interested at the same time!

Older children express basic needs in many different ways and our responses must be modified to deal with these. They bring the world to us in new forms, with their individual points of view and experiences, and we are invited to observe and respect. Though we may feel very old some days, their relationship with us can be mutually stimulating and a means of keeping us very much in the picture - - very much alive. Within this framework too, our children are invited to observe and respond to the ideas we as their parents bring to the family.

Our children sometimes need more than we can give; or we give the wrong thing; or they can't accept what we offer - - but life is like that. It's a safe place to learn to these limitations is within their own family where they know they're loved.

We are finding, my husband and I, that the generosity and tolerance with which we are trying to relate to our children, does come back, albeit in fits and starts so far, to show itself in their dealings with others and with us.

Would you believe that my husband and I can take our tea to our bedroom after supper and not have to worry about being disturbed for quite a while? If we want to talk by the fireplace on our own, or linger over supper to talk privately, it is quite easy now to make some time for ourselves, even as we have always made time for our children.

It's as if, with time, everyone is learning to respect each other's personality and needs a little better.

Someone seems always to be going through some major or minor crisis, and it's a drag at times. But it is in coping with mistakes, disappointment successes and failures that we come to better know and value ourselves. Indeed, our sense of worth is founded in our early family life.

Trichinosis Declines

CHICAGO (CP) — Trichinosis, a serious illness contracted from infected pork, has declined dramatically in the last 25 years but the Journal of the American Medical Association says it still is advisable to cook pork thoroughly before eating.

In its February issue, the magazine reports on two small outbreaks of the disease in New York involving Thai immigrants who ate raw pork in foods popular in their native country.

The outbreaks in 1971 and 1972 affected 23 persons, all Thais. Most were seriously ill and one died.

The article said 115 cases of trichinosis were reported in the U.S. in 1971, compared with a high of 393 in 1961. A federal regulation in 1953 requiring the cooking of garbage fed to swine started the decline.

A medical textbook recommends that pork be cooked to a temperature of at least 140 degrees for 30 minutes per pound of meat to make certain it is safe.

All Saints Carved Smiling

VANCOUVER (CP) — Al Owens carved hardwood statues of Christ and the saints that are radically different from those one remembers from church or school.

For Al Owens' wooden statues all bear a striking resemblance to Al Owens and they all wear a smile.

"All my saints are smiling," he says.

"I don't see any point in them not smiling. It comes out that way."

Mr. Owens even found a bright side to the gruesome story of St. Stephen who was martyred by being "stoned to death."

"Instead of stoning him causing his last breath under a pile of rocks, I show him on his way up to heaven," Mr. Owens said.

As for making the statues in his own likeness, Mr. Owens admits it's true, but says it's an accident—a mere slip of the chisel that leaves the figures with his thin-lipped mouth and pointed beard, but without the baseball cap he wears indoors and out.

The self-portraits put him in excellent company. The 19th-century engraver Albert Dürer drew his portrait as Christ and Canadian artist Jack Chambers once painted himself as a tormented Jesus in angular El Greco style.

And he's modest about his talent. Because of any liking for wood as artists.

"I'm not with the wood-working crowd, or the art crowd, or anybody," he said.

In fact, Mr. Owens has had little formal training—a year of instruction at the Vancouver School of Art and only a year's carving experience. But he's been whittling for years.

"I always have a jack-knife in my pocket," he said, adding that he usually carries around a piece of wood to whittle on in spare moments.

"I've been collecting wood for years," Mr. Owens said.

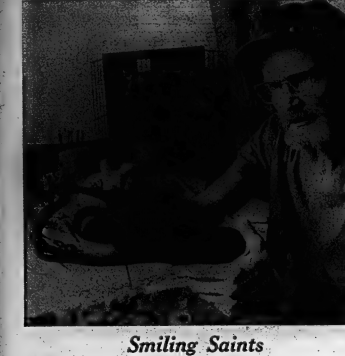
"I've cut down trees. People call to say they're cutting down a tree and would I like some. People are very good about that sort of thing."

A crucifix he carved last year came from a piece of cherrywood he's had for 20 years.

"I've got lots of that one left, in the basement under the stairs, everywhere," he said, gesturing at his cluttered workshop, crammed with wood remnants, branches, walnut blocks, door slits. "I've got more wood that I can foresee using . . ."

Mr. Owens specializes in obscure saints, with St. Genevieve of Paris typical.

Parisians credit her with saving Paris from Attila the Hun and his crowd. Because of her, they went off to Orleans and left Paris untouched. How? Her interession with God, naturally. They claim that.



How did Mr. Owens get interested in religious art?

"I've always had the thought that I didn't like most of the religious art I was surrounded by" he said, adding that he was brought up in the New Westminster, B.C., orchanage of the Sisters of Providence, where religious art abounded.

"Well, it struck me as a child that it was kind of phoney, you know, that people are always looking up to heaven. They're always suppious. That kind of thing can turn you off religion."

Mr. Owens has a backlog of orders for his sculpture, but bemoans the fact they're mainly for the conventional saints.

"I've done two St. James in the past year and three St. Peters, and all my St. Peters are in teak."

Smiling Saints

Al Owens of Vancouver carves a statue of Jesus Christ, one of the religious carvings in which he specializes. However, unlike most religious statuary, Mr. Owens' saints are all smiling and all bear a striking resemblance to the artist.

Comfort of Christ's Peace Said Greatest Gift of All

By DR. GORDON C. SMYTH

"Good Grief!"

The sorrows of life are hard to bear. Job never discovered why he had so much trouble: The psalmist never found out why the wicked flourished. The question, "Why has this happened to me?" has no academic answer.

Jesus taught, "Blessed are those who mourn, for they shall be comforted" (Matthew 5:4). He meant in the first place, that we should accept adversity and, learning all we can from its particular experience, make the best of it.

C. S. Lewis once said that a period of prosperity is "excellent camouflaging weather for the devil". Ours is such a period for many people, inflation notwithstanding.

However, if difficult times produce fewer active church members, they produce more dedicated ones. The influence in the denomination to which I belong, contributions to the Mission and Service Fund were up in 1973, although Sunday attendance was down.

In the second place, Jesus meant that comfort is the portion of those who identify with their neighbors' plight. It is not enough to obey the law by paying an income tax form which governments establish protrants for the needy. How far must the rash of kidnappings spread, in defiance of the law, before it is realized the poor are crying out for evidence that the more fortunate care personally?

It seems to me clear that, in lands of churches and belfries at home, too few modern understand the vital significance of Calvary. Perhaps I should rather say that Protestants have wrongly desired the Crucifix, for the Cross is empty, since Christ is risen.

The Crucifix, however, tells of the heart (through the eye) of implications from love of the Heavenly Father who so deliberately, solemnly and completely shared the suffering of his children. We resume this view! The sentimental lectures read in too many pulpits nowadays are a dull substitute for preaching "Christ crucified" (1 Cor. 1:23).

Let us not become so intellectual that we cease to be intelligent. An intelligent study of history shows the Crucified One at its centre, giving wings to faltering tongues, making ordinary folk extraordinary in influence, interpreting life to those round about who, perhaps possessing more talents, have yet to be possessed by the greatest gift of all: the comfort of Christ's peace.

Corbyville Couple Killed

PETERBOROUGH — Two Corbyville residents, Wallace Joseph Morton, 67, and his wife, Alberta Anne Morton, 66, were killed early this morning when their car collided with a truck driven by a Belleville man four miles east of here.

Officers at the Peterborough detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police say that the Mortons were killed when their eastbound car collided with a westbound truck driven by Garth Fraser, 38, of 198 College Street, Belleville.

The accident occurred on Highway 7, just west of the junction of County Road 34, at 11:12 a.m.

Bodies is reported to be in fair condition at St. Joseph's Hospital in Peterborough.

Damage as a result of the accident was estimated at $5,000.

Neighbors Ease Loss

Residents of this area Tuesday night held a furniture shower for Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Morton, whose house, two miles north of the community, was destroyed last week by fire.

The burned-out family are moving into a vacant house in the area and reports are that sufficient furniture was donated to make further purchases unnecessary.

Mr. and Mrs. Morton will rebuild the farm house lost in the blaze.

Patio Planned For Loyalist

Loyalist students will get a patio outside their student lounge this summer. The 14-by-85-foot patio will cost $41,-000 an increase of $7,000 over the original estimate made two years ago, Dalton Engineering, the firm that condemned the college's permanent buildings, will return to the campus to build the patio.

The cost of construction is being borne by funds from capital works on the college buildings recently completed. Despite the desire of the government to put the money into playing field facilities, the money cannot be transferred to other projects.

One of the reasons for the increased cost, said administrator Nick Fraser, is the high cost of concrete blocks. A 10-inch block and the mortar required to set it is now priced at $1.50 in the Belleville area.

Scouts Need Expert Help

Stamp collectors, Coin collectors, Bird watchers, If anyone in Belleville has a hobby categories or has skills in, similar areas then it is today's District Council of Boy Scouts is looking for you.

District Council is seeking volunteers to aid in the examining of badges awarded to scouts who have become proficient in these areas.

If anyone has such a hobby or skill and wouldn't mind helping scouts earn their badges, they are asked to contact Len Rodgers at, 968-2343.

Streaker Hits Napanee

Napanee has done it — can Belleville be far behind?

An unidentified streaker was observed at midnight Thursday loping down the town's main drag in the vicinity of the public library. The temperature was 41 degrees. The streaker was reported to be a long-haired male.

The same night, in Kingston, Queen's University students claimed the Canadian record for streaking as 75 unadorned males staged a pep rally lasting about two hours. They were joined by about a half-dozen co-eds wearing nothing but bathrobes.

Grant Made

TRENTON — The provincial government Friday announced an $8,000 grant to be applied to Trenton's riverfront greenbelt project.

The announcement, released by Quinte MPP Dr. R.T. Potter and natural resources minister Leo Bernier, provides for the purchase of a parcel of land on the bank of the Trent Canal, will be included in the overall development scheme.

Of the entire project, the province picks up 65 per cent and the Lower Trent Region Conservation Authority the balance.

Because Trenton benefits most directly from the scheme, the municipality contributes 20 per cent of the conservation authority's share.

Sir Mac Report Cards Are Unique in Province

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

A Belleville senior elementary school staff has come up with an apparently foolproof report card — one that satisfies teachers, parents and students.

The Sir Mackenzie Bowell report card is probably the most complicated document a parent is ever faced with from a school. It also takes the longest to prepare of any now issued. And it is unique — it was tailored by the school staff to fit the needs of that particular West Hill senior elementary school (Grades 7 and 8 only).

"I think we have satisfied the needs of everyone," says principal Lyle Sutherland. He was referring to the parental parental demand for marks indicated in percentages "so I'll know exactly where my child stands."

Sir Mackenzie Bowell expresses marking in terms of A (above average), B (average) and C (below average). But the analysis of which student is so classified that no one complains of the lack of numerical percentages.

The Sir Mackenzie Bowell report card comprises six sheets — nine for each of the subjects taught in grades 7 and 8 and one sheet for a graph of the student's level in relation to standardized tests used across Canada.

On each subject sheet the student is marked in three categories. The first is the student's attitude, achievement measured against his own abilities in the subject. A very bright student who is a chronic under-achiever could score very low in this category while still getting high marks in the second category, the one that records his standing against the standard for his grade level.

The third category on each subject sheet is an anecdotal comment by the teacher on the student's attitude.

"If a child has a good attitude toward school he will succeed," asserts Mr. Sutherland.

He regards the attitudinal report as the most important part of the report card.

"Many parents don't know what grade their child's in," says Mr. Sutherland, intimating that this factor is the major cause of parental complaints about report cards.

The 180 sheets sets that straight. Twice a year, in fall and spring, Sir Mackenzie Bowell's two guidance teachers administered the Canadian Tests of Basic Skills to students. This indicates at what grade level, to the exact month, the student is operating at. For instance, if a student in the end of November in grade 7 has a vocabulary like that expected of the average Canadian child by May of his grade 8 year, that student is functioning well above the average level.

The graph paper records the student's level against the Canadian norm in vocabulary, reading, language, work-study skills and math.

Summing up the report, Mr. Sutherland says it illustrates the student's growth in learning, not merely whether or not he is passing or failing according to some arbitrary expectation.

This is the second year the new system of reporting has been in effect at Sir Mackenzie Bowell. Surveys have been conducted each year to determine parental reaction and the response, with more than 80 per cent of parents responding, has been overwhelmingly in favor.

Parents aren't a sympathetic panel observed: "I like it except I wonder if it is just a lot of extra paper work for the poor teachers!"

It is. Each teacher spends 35 to 40 hours a year on report cards.

But, explains Mr. Sutherland, the school doesn't hold the usual three-times a year parental interviews. One professional development day a year is set aside by the Belleville Board of Education for parents who want to see them. And teachers are always available at any time for a discussion with a concerned parent.

The time saved in regular interview sessions goes into preparing the report cards.

The time saving is appreciated when you realize that each student has seven teachers, one for each subject.

Among the 93 per cent of parents reacting favorably to the report was one who came from North York, widely regarded as the showcase system of Ontario.

"As we have five school-age children and have recently moved to Belleville from Toronto, I find these progress reports most informative and understanding compared to previous reports," the parent wrote.

"We try to assess whether or not your child is using his potential to the fullest," says Mr. Sutherland in his comments to parents on the report. This is one of the purposes of the Hastings county board of education and one of the main goals of our school."

The reports, sent home three times a year, are kept by the parents. The manila envelope in which they are enclosed is returned to the school with the parents' signature.

Education Beat

Parents Have Big Influence

By LENNY WILLIAMSON

Parents count.

That's the good word from a survey of students who elect to attend community colleges instead of going to university, taking jobs or "humming around for a while."

Parental influence and that of teachers and sisters is the most important factor in choosing community college students in their choice of post-secondary education.

The statistics are detailed in a report to the provincial Council of Regents for Colleges of Applied Arts and Technology.

Parents, brothers and sisters, have 70 per cent impact on the future of high school graduates, says the report.

It is to them we should direct our advertising," says Lloyd Elsegood, college director Ernest Kneisel. "This implies use of media (radio, TV and television and newspapers).

Currently, colleges can expect to enroll about 21 per cent of high school grads in the province in any given year.

Those who don't go to community colleges have several reasons.

Some are enrolling at universities. Others want to get a job as soon after high school graduation as possible. Others intend to pursue part-time education.

The students grade 12 graduates give for going to community colleges rank perfectly with the aims of the colleges.

The students are interested in "getting a job", "getting a job with higher income" and "being better able to understand and appreciate ideas."

Another mutual self-interest indicates that somebody along the line of creation of 22 institutions has done a good job of selling the right idea.

High school guidance teachers in three student cases out of ten discourages high school students from continuing education.

College representatives to high school have a poor reputation for accuracy among high school guidance staffs.

Loyalist considers itself to have the inside track here, with the appointment of a special high school liaison and information officer — a public relations graduate of Humber College.

Says the survey, "since 1971 a greater proportion of grade 13 students are avoiding full-time jobs, universities and are entering institutes and colleges of applied arts and technology for part-time studies or full-time study off from education instead."

Five Die In Fire

TORONTO (CP) — Four men and a woman were burned to death Friday when fire in a three-storey rooming house that had no fire escape and only two exits.

The blaze broke out shortly after 7 a.m. and 20 persons including two firemen were injured.

The two-alarm fire was extinguished in about two hours. Cause has not been determined.

None of the victims has been identified.

The fire occurred in a building that was made up of two semi-detached brick houses. Damage, excluding contents, was $30,000 to one rooming house and $15,000 to the other.

Later, Ald. Dan Heap told a news conference that orders for structural changes were issued in 1972 for improvements to a rooming house and city officials were searching records to determine whether the orders had been followed.

More than 20 persons, generally transients, lived in the 75-year-old building, police said.

A number of survivors were rescued by ambulance drivers Roland Cowley and Wilbert Tricio, police said. They will be recommended for civilian citations.

Richard Chambers, assistant deputy fire chief, said in an interview there are many houses in the city which have not been either registered as rooming houses or inspected.

"But they are not officially known," he said.

Firemen become involved, he said, only after building inspectors are called in because of complaints by tenants or when owners apply for approval of a lodging house.

Trenton Complex Cut Back

TRENTON — Prohibitive cost for land was the reason given for the cut-back modifications and slimming of plans for a major downtown development.

Area Colbourg-based development firm, announced last month it would be spending $7 million to $8 million and a half dollars in Trenton through construction of an apartment-commercial complex.

Chuck Bilger, of the firm's real estate division, said land costs in the area are "prohibitive," and that the anchor store for the complex was being deleted from the plans.

Mr. Bilger says this cutback should not jeopardize the project which is still scheduled to proceed.

Multi-page Report Records Progress

Sir Mackenzie Bowell School in Belleville has designed its own report cards, the most detailed account of student progress now going home from Hastings county schools. The 10-page document includes a graph that indicates the student's level in relation to standardized tests and a page for recording standing in each subject taken by the student. English is further broken down to record proficiency in reading, creative writing and grammar, spelling, listening and speaking. The report is issued to parents three times a year

Picton Bureau

Shoreline: Public Assist Justified

By MARGARET HAYLOCK

PICTON — Removal of shoreline debris in Picton harbor has been declared by town council as the problem of individual property owners.

This decision to shift responsibility for cleanup to shoreline residents was triggered by a letter from former councillor and Picton merchant Colin Carter.

Mr. Carter, a homeowner on Hill Street overlooking the harbor, asked that this year's high water level had deposited debris along the shore. He suggested that "from the standpoint of appearance and hazard from floating timber later on in the season, this project deserves the attention of council."

Councillor Russell Alexander, chairman of the public works committee, immediately seized the feasibility of a shoreline cleanup. He said that extra labor was not available from town forces. He pointed out that shoreline property owners are "lousy" if anyone places on their property and suggested they might remove the debris themselves.

Deputy-reeve Larry Richardson examined the question from a different viewpoint. He noted that the running to the Picton's harbor should be maintained presently for tourists as well as local homeowners.

Council's refusal to remove debris along the water may be perfectly valid when based on cost and availability of manpower. The relevance of permitting picnickers to dine on private property seems questionable.

The lots on Hill Street overlooking the harbor do not slope to the shore. They plunge sharply and many are overgrown with small trees and brush. It is extremely difficult to imagine most of any of these embankments as a desirable place for ants and picnic lunches.

Why should Mr. Carter or any other owner of property running to the water's edge be expected to approve of "strangers on the shore?". Picnickers or hikers may be litterbugs. They may also be careless with matches or tramp heedlessly through the property owner's backyard to reach the shoreline.

To suggest that shoreline owners are "funny" because they may object to persons crossing their land to picnic seems unfair. Are owners of lots in the centre of town expected to welcome uninvited picnickers on their lawns?

Because the lots along the harbor break so steeply to the shore it is difficult to imagine shoreline cleanup as a do-it-yourself project for homeowners.

When the question of responsibility for snow removal in Picton was discussed by council this winter it was observed that snow was an act of God and was not put there by the taxpayer. Similarly, most shoreline debris floats in by chance, not at the direction of the ratepayer who owns the lot. Removal of this litter should not be considered the complete responsibility of the property owner.

On at least one occasion town council did authorize its public works employees to embark on a winter harbor shoreline cleanup. Extra labor was hired for the job and a hatchet-happy crew loosed along the shore.

No form of vegetation seemed immune from the campaign, as workmen removed shrubs, small saplings, lilac bushes and other growth. This vigorous spirit did remove much of the unsightly litter along the shore.

Workers pulled the brush and burned it on the ice. Several Hill Street residents were alarmed when the fires along the shore threatened to smolder and spark long after it had grown dark and workers had left the scene. The fire department was called and the burning brush-heaps died down.

This was the town's last large-scale drive to beautify the harbor by removal of shoreline debris.

The harbor is the boater's entrance to Picton and, if tourism is to be fostered, should be kept clean and attractive.

Homeowners should be encouraged to cut brush and maintain their shoreline. But an assist from the public works department would be welcome.

If, and when, town council does agree to help with removal of debris work crews should not be unleased with orders to saw every sapling. Property owners should be consulted about trees that the workmen may wish to cut. Some persons may actually like the lilac bushes along the shoreline. Others may feel that the scrub cedar holds the loose soil on the bank.

Proper safety measures should be taken when brush is burned and all fires doused before workers leave the job.

A littered harbor shoreline is not a reflection on the individual property owner who may lack the agility to scale a steep bank to collect debris. A progressive community, eager to capitalize on its assets, will not quibble over possible objections to picnickers. It will recognize a potential eyesore and work with residents to eliminate it.

Compulsory Arbitration Said Strike Answer

TORONTO (CP) — Rev. Charles Edwards, spokesman for a group of York County parents and students who demonstrated at Queen's Park Friday, said compulsory arbitration legislation is the only way to end a 36-day-old teachers' strike.

The Anglican minister from nearby Sutton and other representatives of the 900 demonstrators met for two hours with Premier William Davis and Education Minister Thomas Wells.

The premier gave no promise that such legislation will be introduced, Mr. Edwards later told the demonstrators.

He said the discussion made it clear that York County is being used as a test case for the province and he urged parents to continue pressing for legislation.

"My feeling is they want the parents to say loud and clear that this is what they want."

He also urged demonstrators to seek province-wide support for a petition calling on the government to put the York County board of education under trusteeship.

Mr. Edwards said the parents and students blame neither the teachers nor the board for the dispute which they want to end, but the government.

But he said the board has reached an impasse in negotiations and called on the branch of the association to begin serving teachers March 15 at "stalling" tactics.

Parents and students are not willing to wait that long, he said and confirmed parents' plans to attempt to register students in Toronto schools Monday.

"My feeling is at this point our children will not be back to school before the end of June" unless compulsory arbitration is imposed, said Mr. Edwards.

The demonstrators carried signs demanding immediate opening of the schools and the resignations of trustees and Mr. Wells.

Mr. Wells gave the crowd no indication whether he would introduce compulsory arbitration legislation but restated his hope for negotiations between teachers and board representatives to resolve the strike.

The 19 busloads of demonstrators left Bowes Sutton, Unionville, Richmond Hill, Markham and Newmarket left the legislature after three hours of protesting.

Chamber Backs IDB Seminar

Small businessmen can learn a few tips on managing their affairs better as the Industrial Development Bank holds a one-day seminar March 27.

The seminar starts at 9 p.m. and will take place at the Black Heath Motor Inn on North Front Street.

The event is sponsored by the city's Chamber of Commerce from whom further information can be obtained.

Zikopoulos Heads Y's Men

John Zikopoulos was named president of the Y's Men's Club this week.

Other members of the executive are Harry Collins, vice-president; Gerry Shea, secretary; Hugh Watson, treasurer; James Galway, youth committee chairman; Cecil Risser, membership committee chairman; Will Roberts, financial services committee chairman.

Feeding Time

Belleville's newest pet shop, down town Tropical Gardens has a few new additions in the past few weeks. There's Harvey, Jerry and Lester. That's Harvey, the talking mynah bird being fed by 14-year-old Joseph Iannello. Jerry's another mynah bird and Lester is an 8½-foot, 45-pound boa constrictor. Store owner Mel Sherwood says he's already sold a smaller boa as well as a few piranhas. He plans on getting more piranhas as well as an alligator.

Goaltending Could Be the Key To Playoffs for Flames, Kings

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Sound goaltending could be the key to playoff berths for Atlanta Flames and Los Angeles Kings in the West Division of the National Hockey League.

Right now, Flames — who Thursday night when the Kings defeated Chicago Black Hawks — to take over third place and Friday night Phil Myre was "in" for Atlanta when they beat Minnesota's North Stars 3-1.

They've moved the Flames back into third spot, one point ahead of the Kings, who were idle.

In the only other game Friday, Buffalo Sabres clipped Vancouver Canucks 4-2 to fan their playoff hopes, although they are still eight points behind Toronto Maple Leafs, who are fourth place in the East Division.

"If we get the goaltending, Flames have certainly getting right now, I think we can stay in third place," said Flames' coach Bernie (Boom Boom) Geoffrion.

Myre was also in goal Tuesday when Atlanta upended the Boston Bruins 6-5.

"The way Myre was playing tonight we couldn't have gotten a less goal," said North Stars' coach Parker MacDonald.

Myre, said a shutout would have been nice, "but I don't gamble.

"I just play for shutouts. There were six minutes left when they got their goal, so we had to go for the win."

Minnesota's only goal came on a power play when Bill Goldsworthy scored his 36th of the year.

Randy Manery opened the scoring early in the second period. Bobby Leiter's breakaway and another three minutes later by Keith McCreary lunged Atlanta into a 3-0 lead midway through the final period.

Buffalo 4 at Vancouver 2

Richard Martin was the big gun in the Buffalo attack with two goals—his 41st and 42nd goals of the season. He scored early in the second period to give Sabres a 2-2 tie and added Buffalo's fourth goal early in the final period.

Rene Robert and Craig Ramsay were Buffalo's other marksmen. Dennis Ververgaert and Bobby Lalonde connected for Vancouver.

MEET FOR TITLE

HALIFAX (CP) — Windsor Ont., AKO's and Simon Fraser University junior varsity squad have been installed as the championship game of the Canadian Amateur Basketball Association national junior playoffs.

Simon Fraser defeated Halifax Rebels 84-61 and Windsor defeated University of Manitoba Bisons 89-76 in semi-final action Friday night to advance into the title game.

Defences Take Break

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The defencemen died and offence thrived in four Quebec Major Junior A Hockey League games Friday night that saw a total of 69 goals scored.

Lloyd Hitch Hawks scored the most by one team, burying Hull Festivals 11-4, but Quebec Remparts came within one of matching the Hawks' total in a 10-4 victory over Laval Nationals.

Montreal Juniors settled for a 7-4 conquest of Shawinigan Dynamos, and Sherbrooke Beavers took an 8-5 win on fact they were trailing 3-1 mid-way through the second period to defeat Chicoutimi Sagueneens 5-2.

Gilles Bisaillon opened the scoring for the Beavers at Chicoutimi, but Yves Preston and Jean-Guy Dufour put the Saguenéens up 2-1 before Michel Brisebois, Daniel Martel, Daniel Chicoine and Alain Chaput brought the Sherbrooke players ahead.

In games Sunday, Laval Nationals are at Cornwall Royals, Chicoutimi is at Montreal, Shawinigan travels to Sherbrooke and Drummondville Rangers are at Sorel.

Heard, Weiskopf Are 1-2 in Doral

MIAMI (AP) — Jerry Heard said he didn't feel good. "I didn't play like something that didn't sit quite right with me," he said. "I didn't feel bad, but I didn't feel good."

And his partner, Tom Weiskopf, got positively ill when he drove into the water off the first tee.

But Weiskopf salvaged a wet par, Heard started fading later when he holed out from a sand trap four holes later, and they went on to the two top positions halfway through the $150,000 Eastern Open golf tournament Friday.

Heard had to post his seventh consecutive round in the 60s, a four-under-par 68, and a 133 total, but still crept ahead of Weiskopf 65 and a 134 total; 16-under-par figures on the 7,065-yard course.

Defending champion Lee Trevino and Australian veteran Bruce Devlin followed at 136, each with second-round 68s.

Jack Nicklaus three-putted from 25 feet on route to a par 72 that left him 10 strokes off the pace at 145. Jim Simons dropped off 73-142.

Ben Kern of London, Ont. posted a 74 after an opening round of 69 for a two-day total of 143. Wilf Hoenmuis of Winnipeg missed the cutoff with 75-71—146.

Defencemen Lead Scoring

Defenceman Dave Maloney picked up two assists, tying him with Mike Robitille for the team record for assists by a defenceman.

Robitaille, now with Buffalo Sabres of the National Hockey League, has assists in 51 games in the 1967-68 season.

Maloney has played 60 games this season.

"Pete Driscoll scored the loss Kingston goal.

In games Sunday, London takes on the Greyhounds in Sault Ste. Marie, Peterborough plays in Oshawa, Kingston is at Toronto, Ottawa at Hamilton, and Kitchener at St. Catharines.

In tonight's action, NY Rangers are at Montreal, Philadelphia plays at Toronto, Detroit Red Wings go to NY Islanders, Boston Bruins are at Los Angeles, Chicago Black Hawks play in Vancouver and Pittsburgh Penguins visit St. Louis Blues.

In Sunday's games, Philadelphia visits Buffalo and St. Louis plays at Minnesota in afternoon games and at night, Montreal is at Pittsburgh, NY Islanders continue NY Rangers, Boston is at California and Atlanta plays in Detroit.

Inconsistency Is Problem For Edmonton Oilers

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Inconsistency has been a problem for Edmonton Oilers of the World Hockey Association all season.

The Oilers hit one of their low points Friday losing 4-1 to Los Angeles Sharks, last-place team in the West Division.

Consequently, Edmonton remained in a tie for third place with Winnipeg Jets, who lost 4-1 to Cleveland Crusaders.

In the only other game, New England Whalers widened their lead over the idle Toronto Toros in the East Division to seven points by thumping New Jersey Knights 7-2.

The Sharks broke a six-game losing streak as Brian McKenzie and Jerry Byrnlak opened the scoring against the Oilers with goals in the first period. Ron Anderson scored at 6:12 of the second period for Edmonton, but Bart Crashley raised the Sharks' lead to 3-1 before the period ended and Byrnlak added another goal for the winners in the final period.

Cleveland 4 at Winnipeg 1

Veteran goaltender Gerry Cheevers was the stumbling block against the Jets before a Winnipeg crowd of 6,103. Although the Jets held a territorial command in the first period, they were outscored 2-1 as Cheevers twice stopped Bobby Hull on one-on-one situations and turned aside close-range drives from both Norm Beaudin and Fran Black.

Billy Heindl and Grant Erickson gave Cleveland a 2-0 lead before Beaudin scored for Winnipeg with 27 seconds remaining in the first period.

New Jersey 2 at New England 7

John French and Ol Kirlander each scored a goal and earned two assists in the Whalers' victory, but it was the final New England goal by John Cunniff that caused Knights' coach Harry Howell the most anguish.

Murphy Upholds WHL Suspension of Forey

LOS ANGELES (CP) — World Hockey Association president Dennis Murphy said Friday that Chicago Cougars will not be allowed to use Connie Forey, a player suspended two weeks ago by the Western Hockey League.

Forey was suspended until the WHL season end ordered to pay at least $10,000 to a referee he struck in a WHL game Feb. 20.

But Thursday night, Forey showed up in a Chicago Cougars uniform and the WHA team said he was on a five-day trial and would be signed to a contract if found capable.

However, Murphy announced the Cougars would not be allowed to play because the player is still under contract to St. Louis Blues of the National Hockey League.

"The WHA respects and will continue to recognize existing contracts," said Murphy.

"We have been informed that Forey is under contract to the St. Louis Blues of the National Hockey League. We are respecting that contract, and he is not permitted to play in our league until his legal playing status has been clarified."

Forey had appealed his Western League suspension and fine and his move to the Chicago game as a surprise. WHL president Ed MacFarland said when he handed out the suspension that he had sent a letter to Murphy asking the WHA to recognize the penalty.

Clippers Seen Almost Unbeatable at Home

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

For Baltimore Clippers, nothing beats playing at home.

The Clippers stretched their home unbeaten streak to 18 games—11 wins and two ties—with a 6-3 American Hockey League triumph Friday night over Springfield Kings.

The win enabled Baltimore to move into a first-place tie with Hershey Bears in the South Division, both with 78 points, one more than idle Cincinnati Swords.

It was also the Clippers' 25th home triumph, a club record, compared with 10 wins on the road.

In other games, Rochester Americans defeated New Haven Nighhawks 6-4 and Providence Reds blanked Virginia Red Wings 6-0.

Clippers 6 Kings 3

Bob Cook's third three-goal night of the season paced the Clippers before 3,702 fans. Michael Compared with 10 wins on the road.

Americans 4 Nighthawks 4

The Americans—leading the North Division with 86 points, six more than the Reds—scored three goals in the second period and two in the third for their win.

The loss extended New Haven's winless streak to 12 games, 10 defeats and two ties.

Larry McKillop scored two goals and Gary Inness added four for the Americans. Jake Rathwell, Henry Herrell, Gary Breslin and Ron Graham shared the other Rochester goals before 5,-000 home team fans.

Bert Wilson and Larry Sacharuk combined for two goals to coast the Reds to victory before 2,939 spectators in Norfolk, Va.

Goalie Curt Ridley stopped 41 shots—21 in the final period—to earn the shutout. Providence goals for the Reds.

Andre Peloffy, who also had two assists, and Gerry Teeple got the other Providence goals.

Tonight's schedule has Cincinnati at Baltimore, Springfield visiting Hershey and Richmond at Virginia. Rochester it's Richmond at Boston, Hershey in Jacksonville, at Haven in Halifax to meet the Voyageurs, and Providence at Rochester.

Forresters Dump Terriers 4-2

BRANTFORD, Ont. (CP) — Brantford Foresters held off a third-period rally to defeat Orillia Terriers 4-2 in the only Ontario Hockey Association Senior A game Friday.

Brantford led 2-0 going into the final period, but Orillia came back to narrow the margin to 3-2.

Al Osborne scored the clinching Brantford goal at 16:04 of the third period.

Wings Upset Petes 5-3

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hamilton Red Wings scored five consecutive goals, four of them in the final period, to down skimping Peterborough Petes 5-3 in Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A game Friday.

The win was Hamilton's first at home since Jan. 4 and only its third of the club's schedule.

The Petes, in first place most of the season, relinquished top spot in the 11-team series Feb. 21, and now are tied with a back of league-leading Kitchener Rangers and three in back of St. Catharines Black Hawks.

Paul Evans, Bill Evo and Bob Watson scored first period goals for the Petes to give them an early 3-0 lead.

Glen Richardson and Mike Hobin scored Hamilton goals in the first minute of the third period to tie the score, then Greg Hickey scored the winner at the 13-minute mark of the final period.

Dave Norris scored an insurance goal for the Red Wings with only a minute left in the game.

In other games Friday, the Toronto Hawks edged Oshawa Marlboros 5-4, Sudbury Wolves downed London Knights 5-1, and the Rangers routed Kingston Canadians 11-1.

Hawks 5 Marlboros 4

St. Catharines scored two second period goals in the five shots and added the winner early in the third for the victory.

A Toronto crowd of 8,304 saw the Marlboros outshoot St. Catharines 16-5 in the second period and 40-32 on the night.

Wolves 5 Knights 3

Two third-period goals by captain Mike Marson was the margin of victory for Sudbury in its hometown win.

The Wolves led 1-0 at the end of the first period, and 3-3 after 40 minutes of play.

Geoff Green scored the other Sudbury goal.

Kitchener continued its drive towards a first-place finish with its convincing win before 4,383 Kitchener fans.

Mike McGregory scored three goals and Ron Sedlbauer and Rick Vaughanbauer added two each for the Rangers.

Robitaille, now with Buffalo Sabres of the National Hockey League, has assists in 51 games in the 1967-68 season.

Maloney has played 60 games this season.

Pete Driscoll scored the loss Kingston goal.

In games Sunday, London takes on the Greyhounds in Sault Ste. Marie, Peterborough plays in Oshawa, Kingston is at Toronto, Ottawa at Hamilton, and Kitchener at St. Catharines.

New League Discussed By CFL Last March

MONTREAL (CP) — Sam Berger, owner of Montreal Alouettes, said Friday a meeting was held in March, 1973, between himself and other representatives of Eastern Football Conference clubs to discuss the possibility of forming a new professional football league.

Mr. Berger was commenting on a report on a Toronto radio station which said he met in Toronto last year with John Bassett Sr., owner of Toronto Argonauts; David Loeb, owner of Ottawa Rough Riders; and Sam Hamilton Tiger Cats' general manager, Ralph Sazio.

Mr. Berger said in an interview that the four football executives met "chiefly to fend off" any invasion from American teams coming into Toronto and Montreal.

"There was a threat of that," he said. "There's always been a threat.

He said they wanted to take the "initiative" in exploring the possibility of forming a professional league, which would consist of American franchises but the four EFC teams.

He confirmed that New York financier Bob Schmertz attended the meeting.

"We explored the idea," he said, "but eventually it just died."

"We considered it but decided we had better not go ahead with it."

Game Six Sunday

Cats Drop Squeaker

By MIKE BRADSHAW
Sports Staff

The Belleville Bobcats found it tough to get going in Pickering last night and by the time they did they were playing up to form, well, it was too late.

Belleville lost a chance to put the Pickering Panthers out of Metro Junior B semi-final action when Pickering edged them 5-4. Some consolation for the loss, however, is that the Cats still have a 3-2 series lead and do have two more opportunities to oust their counterparts on Sunday.

"We had some good chances to score in the first period," said Cat coach, Moe Hunter, "we just didn't capitalize on them and that's what beat us."

Panthers coach, Sherry Bassin, commented, "It was an uphill battle all the way and neither team could seem to take advantage of scoring opportunities."

The locals outplayed the home team in the first period and did have much better opportunities to score.

Belleville held Pickering in their own end for most of the opening 20 minutes of play, but the Panthers got some excellent goaltending from Ray Pilon.

Pilon not only held the Bobcats off the scoreboard to the first period, but made many fine stops throughout the contest and was awarded first star selection for his prowess.

Rob Duncan proved equally as talented in the Belleville goal and captured the second star honors.

There was only one real scoring threat posed by the Panthers in the first period and it was excellently supressed by Duncan and three other Cats. Only four Cats were involved in the supression because of the time of attack Belleville had two men in the penalty box.

Tim Yohn received an elbowing penalty at 9:32 and at the same time the Bobcats were assessed a bench penalty.

Once again the Belleville blueline corps — Dave Taylor, Dave Flesch, Tim Yohn and Vern Abney — proved to be the outstanding players for the Bobcats.

All four performed extremely well in their respective positions, but the front lines of the Cats were unable to do much offensively.

It was the Panthers defence that did the trick for Pickering, breaking up the Cats scoring punch with solid body checks.

Belleville's scoring punch was somewhat subdued to begin with as Marg Crates sat the game out with a stomach ailment.

The lack of punch the two teams had was denoted by the scoreless tie at the end of the first period.

The Panthers took command of the second period and only a goal by the Bobcats broke up an impressive offenseless display by them.

Pickering had gone ahead 10 at 11:01 as the Panthers production line of Gary Murphy, Jim Scetsgard and Bernie Saunders came through. Murphy was the scorer.

Both teams skated off the ice at the end of second with one goal each. Belleville's goalie, Duncan, somewhat the worse for wear and the Panthers somewhat frustrated. Pickering outshot the Cats 17-8 in the second period.

The third period proved to be best played and the most important for the Panthers.

At 13:32, Bernie Saunders scored the second goal for Pickering to win the game for them.

His linemate, Jim Snetsinger took a faceoff in the Cats end, flipped the puck to Saunders and Gerry raced it back to Saunders at the head of the faceoff circle. Before any Cats could move from their faceoff positions, Saunders had slapped the puck past Duncan.

The Cats pulled their goaltender in the last minute of the game, but to no avail. A sixth attacker was potent, but ineffective as far as the scoreboard was concerned.

There were two penalties assessed in the game, eight went to the Panthers. The Cats infractions included a five minute major for fighting and a 10 minute misconduct.

Pickering outshot the Cats 42-25.

Action resumes Sunday night at 8:30 in the Memorial Arena. The Cats will be looking to wrap the series up at home, but the Panthers will want to keep their hopes alive.

Sherry Bassin Said

"You don't put the coffin in the ground until you hammer in the nails," commented Pickering Panthers coach, Sherry Bassin. "I think they came into this one a little overconfident after trouncing us in the last two games."

"We had our backs to the wall and we had to win. They had us buried before we were dead," added Bassin.

"Our boys have got it under pressure," said the Panthers coach. "They perform just as well behind the eight ball as we can in a nothing game."

Bassin cited the goaltending performances of Ray Pilon as an example.

"He made some key saves for us tonight. Key saves are the kind that can really pick a team up. The difference between a good goaltender and a great one are the key saves."

Pilon, a 14 year-old was playing in his first game of the semi-final series and Bassin feels, "he was the one that was in for us. We were getting good goaltending before, but Dave Hulmes wasn't making any key saves, they did."

Sherry observed that was the reason Moe Hunter was starting Rob Duncan every game rather than Bob Moore.

"I think this win has probably turned the momentum of the series around," said Sherry, "We've got our poise back and that's going to make us even harder to beat."

The fifth game Sunday night is going to be a heartbreaker for one of us. We're under pressure to win and they're under pressure because if they lose they don't have to try to beat us back here.

There might be a little added pressure on them because I think they're reminiscing the finals of last year against the Young Nats."

"The only thing I regret about this series is that one of us is going to get beaten out. I think the winner is going to take all-Ontario. It's too bad that the two of us had to meet here," said the coach.

Moe Hunter Said

"We should have won that one," said Bobcat coach Moe Hunter. "They killed us in the first period. We had a lot of good chances but nobody could get it in the net."

"We really missed Mark Coates over there," added Hunter.

Coates is leading the Cats scoring attack in the playoffs with 11 goals and 10 assists in eight games. Right now Mark is suffering from a stomach ailment.

Coates sat in the stands and summarized the contest by saying, "We just couldn't put it in the net tonight. I think we were too sure of ourselves when the game started."

The Cats had dumped 19 goals into the Panthers net in last three games while Pickering had only scored nine.

"We should beat them at home Sunday," said Hunter, but he edged with caution, "I sure don't want the same thing to happen as what happened last year."

Last year the Cats were beaten out in the finals by the Toronto Nationals 4-3 after holding a 3-0 lead.

Birt's Take Opener

Birt's Handyland, Trenton's Juvenile representative, are on the way to a possible repeat of last year's Ontario championship.

Friday night the Trenton squad defeated Lindsay 6-4 to take a 1-0 lead in their best of seven All Ontario quarter final series.

"It was a rough, tough game," said Birt's assistant coach, Roger Drake, "both teams played well all the way through."

Lindsay took 12 of the game's 23 penalties.

Wayne Calberry led the way to victory for Trenton scoring two goals. Don Armstrong added a goal and picked up a three assists. Jeff Baker, Curt Mclean and Bill Glover each scored once for the winners.

Lindsay had a 1-0 lead at the end of the first period and the score was deadlocked at 1-1 at the end of the second.

Between the 9:16 and 12:49 mark of the teams traded a total of six goals.

"The turning point in the game," said Drake, "was when we tied the game 3-3 on a power play around the 11 minute mark. From then on we took control of things."

Pat Lynch fired two goals for the Lindsay with Brian Soodom and Bob Ballace getting one a piece.

The series continues Sunday night at 7:00 when Lindsay comes to the Community Gardens.

CHECKING: WHAT IT MEANS

People don't realize what checking is. It's not knocking people around the rink and it's not pulling players through or over the boards. To check an opponent doesn't mean to run at them.

Checking is getting in a player's way and taking him out of the play. I always tell youngsters not to be afraid of the bigger players when they have to check them. I just tell the little guys to stand in the way of the bigger fellows.

I stick check much more than I body check. One has to be very careful when stick checking because one might reach too far forward and lose his balance. This allows a player to get by very easily because you're usually standing still and he's coming at you with greater speed.

Any kind of stick check requires not reaching out to show the opponent how far you can point your stick but keeping the stick close to your body so that if he beats you there'll be enough balance for you to recover and pursue. It's also wise to make sure that if you miss with a stick check you've put yourself in a position to get the opponent with your body.

The NHL had two excellent body checkers in Lee Bolvin and Bobby Baun before they retired. The hardest checks I ever saw were delivered by Chicago's Doug Jarrett and Boston's Fred O'Donnell. Jarrett really hit Peter Stemkowski a few years ago while last season, O'Donnell belted Montreal's Bob Murdoch.

There are a lot of excellent checkers in the league who prove that you don't have to run people out of the rink. Jean Paul Parisse of Minnesota is a strong checker. He and Toronto's Ron Ellis, are examples of players who just take players out.

Philadelphia's Bobby Clarke is one of the greatest forecheckers I've ever seen. Dave Keon and Derek Sanderson are also excellent. Don't forget, checking is standing in the way of your man so everybody should be able to do it.

And Don't Come Back!

Belleville Bobcat defencemen have been more than effective at taking Pickering attackers out of play in the Metro Junior B semi-finals. Dave Flesch is just one of defensive four who have proven themselves capable of protecting the Cats' goalies. Flesch unquestionably removes Pickering's Jim Wells (7) from the play with a slight of the elbow. If Wells had a double chin, he doesn't now. Despite Dave's efforts the Panthers won the game 2-1 and to set the stage for Sunday's sixth game. Belleville now leads the best of seven series 3-2.

Ursel Will Battle Gervais in Final Draw

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Jimmy Ursel will battle the odds and the rocks today when he matches wits with Rec Gervais in the final draw in the Canadian men's curling championships.

Ursel, Montreal skip of the Quebec rink, has drawn the controversial red rocks on the 13-sheet at London Gardens in a match with Alberta that could force a playoff.

He'll also be looking at the score on C sheet where Paul Savage's Ontario four from Toronto has drawn Larry McGrath of Kindersley, Sask., in the final round.

Savage, one of the pre-championship favorites in the 11-stitution "but I haven't signed it" because the rocks really hadn't given me any trouble — until tonight."

Several curlers have complained about the red rocks on C sheet giving them similar trouble.

In games Friday night, Savage had been brought its record to 7-2, the same as the Gervais rink from St. Albert, Alta., by going 12 ends for an 8-5 win over Wight Pedley Dillon of Charlottetown ended a seven-game Prince Edward Island losing streak, 7-6, in the expense of Barry Shearer's Nova Scotia rink from Halifax. Jim Armstrong of Richmond, B.C., drew today's bye, head

Frederickton's John Clark, 10-4, to eliminate New Brunswick as contenders and Don Bear of Cochrane, Ont., beat Charles Rose of Sudbury, Northern Ontario's challenger, 9-3.

Quebec leads the leaders with a 6-3 won-lost record, B.C. finished at 5-4 followed by New Brunswick, Ontario and Manitoba, each with 5-4 marks.

Northern Ontario goes into the final round at 4-5 with Nova Scotia and P.E.I. both 3-7 and Newfoundland, 1-9.

Besides the two key games today, New Brunswick plays Manitoba, P.E.I. faces Newfoundland and Nova Scotia goes against Northern Ontario.

Savage, delighted with his win over Gervais in the afternoon draw, promised he'd help Ursel, now asked if the Impairs- the Albertans in his games ments to the stones could be caused by ice or were they wan, and made good on half the promise Friday night.

"I can't see it's normal weather," he said. "It could be a frost. I've had knock Saskatchewan maybe, "in the fixing of them. down to three losses," he said. you know, when they refrid Herb Olsen of Edmonton, who then

Injuries Slow Down Northern Ontario Rink

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The Tales of Sudbury, who form the front end of Chucker Ross' Northern Ontario rink in the Canadian men's curling championships are having their share of troubles.

Rusty Tate, the 30-year-old lead and the big sweeper on the rink, reached into his pocket to get his hotel room key Thursday night and a package of safety matches burst into fire.

The injury was confined to the middle finger on his right hand but since Rusty is a southpaw it adversely affected his delivery in the early ends of Friday afternoon's 11-6 loss to Jim Armstrong of Richmond, B.C.

An old eye injury flared up during the night and almost forced his 36-year-old brother, Bob, to sit out Friday afternoon's game with B.C.

Curling officials had a designated sweeper standing by in case doctors were unable to arrest the ailment and open the right eye which had swollen shut.

But the injuries were not serious enough to sideline the Tate boys.

"It could have been worse," said Rusty of his injured finger, "but not enough to keep me out.

"It affected my delivery early in the game because it was stiff and I begged four shots. But it'll be okay I, uh, hope."

Bob's old injury, suffered during a hunting trip when a branch snapped back into his face and tore the retina several years ago, could have been the more damaging ailment.

"Fortunately the doctors were able to fix it up," Bob said. "It seems the tear ducts don't function normally and when it drys it irritates around the eyelid."

Meanwhile, the proprietor of a building supply store will be wearing dark glasses to protect his one eye from the television lights at London Gardens.

Russian Pair To Dance In '76

MUNICH (CP) — Ludmila Pakhomova and Alex Gorshkov of the Soviet Union won the dance title at the world figure skating championships Friday and then gave some bad news to the rest of the competitors.

They will still be dancing in 1976, the first time ice dancing has been part of the World/Olympics.

"We hadn't considered our future before we heard that dancing will be in the Olympics," said Ludmila. "Now we have heard the good news we have decided we will be there."

And that could only be bad news for the rest of the world's dancers because the husband-and-wife team wrapped up an unprecedented fifth world title with a display that showed they weren't slowing down any after eight years in the world championships.

Hilary Green and Glyn Watts of England won the silver medal with Soviets Natalya Linichuk and Gennadi Karponosov third.

Louise and Barry Soper of West Vancouver, B.C., finished ninth, the same position they achieved in both 1972 and 1973. Barbara Berezowski and David Porter of Port Perry, Ont., were 10th, the same position they had last year.

Pertor and Miss Berezowski said their finish was satisfying although they had hoped to move up, perhaps into the top 10.

But the Sopers were bitterly disappointed and said the decision place may have marked the end of their careers as skaters.

"We skated our very best tonight, but couldn't move up," said Barry. "We were disappointed earlier in the week with our ninth place after the compulsory dance. . . . It could be that our style isn't accepted by the judges. It may be time to seriously consider our future."

"We thought we should be higher than ninth," said Louise.

Barry said the trend in ice dancing seems to be towards the powerful and physical skaters while the Sopers tended toward the traditional style.

Louise said she didn't think she and her husband could change, even if they wanted to, if they did. "I think we'll be losing something."

Pakhomova said she thought she and her husband were improving with age.

"We have had this program for a few years now, with a few minor refinements, and we do it as well as we think we can. Next year we will have something new."

In their program Friday night they performed intricate steps which no other skaters attempted and injected a number of original lifts that thrilled the crowd of about 3,000.

In the free dance they received one perfect mark of seven, a six and eight 5.9s for composition. For the way they presented it they got seven perfect marks and a 5.9 and a 5.8. The crowd whistled derisively at the 5.8.

Today the final title of the championships will be awarded, in ladies' singles. Christine Errath of East Germany holds the inside edge after moving into first place Friday following the two-minute compulsory free skating program.

Lynn Nightingale of Ottawa finished 12th in figures, but was third in the compulsory free skate. However, she didn't move up and the best she can hope for is a fifth-place finish. Experts say she is certain to make the top 10.

Barbara Tyrpenning of North Vancouver moved to 13th from 14th by finishing 11th in free skating, and also hopes to move into the top 10.

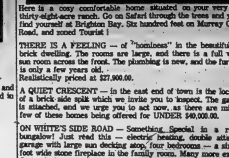
FRASER & O'NEIL REALTOR



Here is a cozy comfortable home situated on your very own thirty-eight-acre ranch. Go on Safari through the trees and you'll find yourself at Brighton Bay. Six hundred feet on Murray Canal Road, and zoned Tourist 1.
THERE IS A FEELING — of "hominess" in the beautiful old brick dwelling. The rooms are large, and there is a full width sun room across the front. The plumbing is new, and the furnace is only a few years old.
Realistically priced at $27,900.00.
A QUIET CRESCENT — in the east end of town is the location of a brick side split which we invite you to inspect. The garage, is attached, and we urge you to act now, as there are mighty few of these homes being offered for UNDER $40,000.00.
ON WHITE'S SIDE ROAD — Something Special in a raised bungalow! Just read this — electric heating, double attached garage with large sun decking atop, four bedrooms — a sixteen foot wide stone fireplace in the family room. Many more extras. Just ask, better still, have a look.
WEST END OF CITY — Cosy 4-bedroom home. Bungalow with good size living room and dining room. Features deep lot, only $18,900.00.
We do have other beautiful homes, too many to mention each one each night. We most likely have one in the area in which you would prefer live. A call will tell you.

GUARANTEED SALES PLAN

Transferred or finding your present home too large or too small? Concerned about selling your existing property before buying the new home of your choice in another district . . . or even in another Canadian city? If this is your situation — and it's one that happens to most people — it would be well worth your while looking into JOYCE REALTY'S Guaranteed Sale Plan.

The JOYCE REALTY Sale Plan, which is the only truly national guaranteed sale plan of its kind available in Canada, is designed to guarantee that you will have funds available when required to complete the purchase of your new home. Also, to ensure that you will have no continuing worries or expenses in connection with your existing home.

QUESTIONS ABOUT THE PLAN

1. What is a Guaranteed Sale Agreement?
2. Will I obtain as good a price for my home by going along with JOYCE REALTY'S Guaranteed Sale Plan?
3. How can I be sure that you will try to obtain the best price for my house in the shortest possible time?
4. How is the "Guaranteed Price" arrived at?
5. How do I get my money?
6. Will JOYCE REALTY be able to tell me what the guaranteed price will be before I make an offer on my new home?
7. How can I make an offer on my new home without knowing the guaranteed price on my existing one?

For the answers to these and any other questions you may have regarding this plan, call the experienced JOYCE MAN of your choice.

THE UNEXPLAINED

by Allen Spraggett

By ALLAN SPRAGGETT

The latest menace to privacy in this Watergate era may be telepathic "bugging."

At any rate, a young psychiatrist who research indicates that people - not only those who know each other but even total strangers - can pick one another's brains by ESP. And with alarming accuracy, it seems.

This raises, besides the spectre of extrasensory eavesdropping, some bizarre possibilities.

Is violence caught like the measles? Are there telepathic Typhoid Marys among us who spread violent thoughts by psychic contagion?

And, just as there are people who thought they were going crazy until the voices they heard turned out to be police radio calls picked up on their dental bridgework, there are others considered insane because they hear voices, who may actually be subject to telepathic receivers!

Such questions now seem, in the light of Dr. Howard Eisenberg's startling telepathy experiments, much less crazy than they once did.

The experiments were done at McGill University, Montreal, where Eisenberg received (in 1972, when he also got his M.D.) the first graduate degree in psychology awarded by a Canadian university for research in extrasensory perception.

Previous telepathy experiments generally had used people who knew one another well - professor and student, friends, family members - and the most common were card-guessing tests in which the "receiver" tried to think of the correct card being looked at by the "sender," against chance." (For comparison, in medical research generally odds of 100 to one are considered significant.) . . . In some cases, the correspondence between what the sender was shown and the receiver described" was so close that both might have been watching the same movie.

"I see a young man coming out of a house. He's wearing a cap and his collar's turned up. Near the sidewalk is mud. The mud is very dark - like black. The look on the young man's face is very evil."

For all this proven flow the target film could have been a Walt Disney cartoon, but, as Dr. Eisenberg commented, "he correctly described the murderer as a young man wearing a cap and with his collar turned up.

And there's a long sequence in in which the murderer strangely stares at his face in the mirror and the subject refers specifically to the man's evil-looking face.

The reference to blood is, of course, strikingly relevant."

In another session, the film clip showed two children playing outdoors and the receiver said: "I keep getting thoughts of two kids playing outside."

Most experts in ESP probably would have expected the pairs who knew each other to get better scores than the strangers, but this proved not to be so. However, one significant scoring difference did emerge.

Those who believed in ESP were more successful than those who didn't. The stronger the belief, as a rule, the higher the score.

Bronchitis Cure Depends on Cause

By G. C. THORSTEEN, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteen: A young man where I work suffers from chronic bronchitis and everybody in the department suffers. He is almost constantly coughing, clearing his throat, making sounds as preparing to spitting, blowing his nose. . . .

When someone has an ordinary cold it isn't annoying because it is known that the person will soon recover. But this young man's disease has not improved after four or five months.

Perhaps I am being unsympathetic but I find this hawking and spitting more than I can bear. There should be something to relieve him--and us. How do you treat chronic bronchitis?--L.F.

You have my sympathy. Whether the young man deserves the same fingers without knowing what made the finger sore.

In a good many cases a combination of factors, rather than any single one, is responsible. There are, frankly, cases of chronic bronchitis in which not a great deal can be done to help.

In others, much can. The young man most certainly should go to a physician and remain a patient long enough to give the doctor enough time to make a thorough evaluation of the probable causes. Just one or two visits, in my experience, won't be enough to do any good.

Irritant fumes or pollutants in the air can, quite obviously, be a factor in bronchitis, but since he has the trouble and none of the rest of you do, he'll have to look further.

Does he smoke? Some 75 per cent of chronic bronchitis patients are heavy cigaret smokers. If he smokes, and hasn't bothered to stop, he needs to expect somebody else to cure his trouble for him.

Chronic bronchitis also is worse in damp, cool climates, but there is little, practically speaking, he can do about that.

If a secondary infection has developed, antibiotics can help temporarily, but finding the underlying cause remains.

Finally, allergy is a very common cause of chronic bronchitis, so common that in my opinion every patient with such bronchitis should have a searching study to diagnose allergies.

In your young man's case, his smiles strongly suggest an allergy -- his blowing and throat clearing. If he really wants to do something constructive, I would suggest that he see an allergist for tests to determine what things he is allergic to.

Dear Dr. Thosteen: I heard a report on TV that it is impossible to have cancer of the uterus unless you have had intercourse. For someone who does not have sexual relations is it necessary to have a Pap smear?--M.I.F.

If anyone really said that on TV, he was very much mistaken. So, yes, it is wise to consider periodic Pap smears.

Dear Dr. Thosteen: Is it true that aspirin is bad for people with bronchial asthma?--Mrs. W.P.E.

No except for the relatively few who may be sensitive to aspirin--in them it could initiate attacks.

Dear Dr. Thosteen: I had a Pap smear and the doctor's nurse called and told me the results came back and I was Class 2 and I should have another Pap test in three months.

From what I understand this means I have cancer cells in my body and they wait to recheck and see if they've grown or are growing. Am I correct?--B.I.C.

No, you're not.

Class 2 means that some abnormal cells were found in the smear but not enough to be cancerous. Since they were abnormal, the sensible thing is to wait a few months, then test again and see whether the abnormality has corrected itself, is getting worse.

Class 1 means normal cells. Class 2 means highly suspicious. Class 4 means definitely cancerous. But Class 2 is an in-between which may mean nothing or may mean nothing, so another look is in order.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Sunday, Mar. 10

Aries (March 21-April 19). You will get a hidden urge to get in touch with one you haven't seen lately. Do so. It will prove satisfying.

Taurus (April 20-May 20). Doing for others will give you the greatest satisfaction today. Be willing to serve. There is a surprise in store.

Gemini (May 21-June 20). Someone interesting and unusual is likely to cross your path. There will be very good vibes between the two of you.

Cancer (June 21-July 22). Though you may be spending today around the house it won't be dull or uninteresting. A "no" friend will pop in.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) It will regenerate you if you can find some time today to work on your favorite hobby or something of a creative nature.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Continue to keep your eyes peeled for situations where you can turn a profit. They are available. Keep looking.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Someone will be telling of a good thing that they have some inside information on in advance of others. Hear them out.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You will get a bright insight today regarding an improvement you can make for the home. It should pleasure your mate as well.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) A person you care a great deal for would be very pleased to be surprised today with a little remembrance.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Benefits will come to you now from a task you find rewarding mentally. It appears difficult to others, but not you.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Kind words from you have a much greater effect on one who admires you that you realize praise.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) Be prepared for a change in your schedule today. You won't do much of what you had, but you will have more fun if you make the switch.

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Monday, Mar. 11

Aries (March 21-April 19) Be selective as to whom you tell your good news to today. A certain friend isn't all that happy to hear about how he helped another. Let her do the boasting.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) A friend is going to profit from one of the big hearts of from you, but you won't appreciate the way it's done.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) An opportunity of a material nature will be available. However, it looks like you won't develop it as well as you should.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) Help solely on your biggest project today. Do things as you feel they should be done, rather than try to guess what would please another.

Women's Centre Planned

TORONTO (CP) — Women in transition, a new refuge for women in crisis situations, is to be opened here in February, Natalie Hoffman, 30, co-ordinator of the project, said the centre will help women who leave their husbands or who have been deserted or thrown out on the street. "We give them a chance to make decisions and let things cool. The centre will also help find housing for women in such circumstances."

Listings Changed

Daily program listings for the Global TV network will be shown in The Intelligencer as being presented on Channel 3 beginning with the Tuesday, March 5, issue. Previously, the programs are received on Channel 2 by viewers with TV antennas but since 85 percent of TV owners in this area subscribe to Cablevue service and receive the programs on Cable Channel 3, it has been decided that the listing should be shown as it applies to the majority of homes.

Opening lead—♥9

By Oswald and James Jacoby

Remember the boy at the zoo who warned the lion? If the hippopotamus was male or female and the keeper's reply "It doesn't make a bit of difference except to another hippopotamus."

Today's hand gave expert South and undeserved top, in a regional open pairs, but is only of interest to another duplicate player since four spades is ice cold.

South made an overtrick as a result of a bad third-hand-high play by East. The result is unimportant in rubber bridge, but the principle involved is important. Sometime the trick lost by the bad play will be the contract trick.

West didn't have any attractive opening lead and finally selected the nine of hearts. Doubleton leads have been known to work out but this one didn't.

Declarer called for dummy's queen. East, who had been taught both to play third-hand-high and to cover-as-honor-with-an-honor put up his king. Declarer won; drew trumps; even finally discarded his three of clubs on dummy's last heart and made five odd.

East had an automatic play of a low heart. His partner had clearly led top of nothing. The king if held back would eventually be able to stop dummy's fourth heart, force scoring a trick and South would have worked up making just four spades for an average score.

The CARD Sense

The bidding has been:

West	North	East	South
			1♠

You, South, hold:
♠ 10 8 5 4 ♥ A K Q 8 5 ♦ A J 8 6 ♣ 6
What do you do?
A—Bid one spade. With two five-card suits right lead to see earlier bid the better ranking first.

TODAY'S QUESTION

Your partner responds one notrump. What do you do now?

Answer Monday

USED FOR PENCILS

Red cedar, found sparingly in Ontario, is used for pencils and kitchen chests.

Doctor Claims Gas Not Factor

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — A coroner's jury was told Friday there was no evidence that inhalation of nitrous oxide contributed to the death of a five-year-old boy at Sudbury General Hospital last summer.

Brian Vaillancourt died at the hospital Aug. 14, less than two hours after being hit by a truck in front of his home here.

Dr. D. E. Sutherland, Sudbury's only neurosurgeon, testified he was called to the hospital shortly after the unconscious child was admitted. He ordered x-rays and decided to perform an exploratory operation after diagnosing a skull fracture.

In the emergency x-ray room the child stopped breathing, Sutherland said. He suffered a cardiac arrest.

Prior to suffering the arrest the boy had received medical gas from a portable oxygen cylinder which had been hooked into the room, the doctor said. He was revived and his breathing resumed.

But a second cardiac arrest occurred within five minutes after an endo-tracheal tube to aid breathing had been placed into the boy's throat, with the tube connected to an oxygen wall outlet at the head of the child stopped breathing, Sutherland said. He suffered a cardiac arrest.

Doctors and nurses spent 20 minutes trying to revive the patient for a second time, but Dr. Sutherland said he pronounced him dead shortly afterward.

Dr. A. R. Forrester, on duty when the ambulance arrived with the child, told the jury that the patient did not receive medical gas from wall outlets in the first room where he was treated.

The inquest, investigating the circumstances of 23 deaths at the hospital last year, had been told in earlier sessions that some oxygen wall outlets at the hospital were found to be emitting nitrous oxide.

However, in the case of the Vaillancourt boy, Dr. A. E. Massarella performed an autopsy and concluded that death was caused by a downward protrusion of the brain caused by swelling resulting from the skull injuries.

The report indicated there was no scientific evidence of injuries outside the skull or possibility that inhalation of nitrous oxide contributed to death.

Elmer Sopha, lawyer for the Vaillancourt family, asked Dr. Sutherland whether he thought the boy's change of conditions in the x-ray room was sudden and unexpected.

"Sudden, yes," Dr. Sutherland said, "and unexpected in the sense that when the patient left the emergency treatment room his condition was not that hopeless."

Of the child's death, the fifth to be investigated since the inquest opened Jan. 4, will be examined further Monday.

Accounting Change

CBC Costs More Money

OTTAWA (CP) — Parliamentary appropriations for the CBC in the new fiscal year starting April 1 will jump by $298.8 million from $258.8 million this year, government spending estimates show.

However, the $50-million increase is not all new-found money for the nationally-owned radio and TV broadcasting service. There is an increase of only $2 million in normal operating budget.

The bulk of the $50-million represents a change in government accounting procedures, which the CBC has long advocated.

In the past, the government has asked Parliament each year to vote money for the CBC's day-to-day operating expenses, net of whatever commercial revenues the CBC can earn. Then, in addition, it has asked Parliament to make a loan to the CBC for annual investment in new studios and equipment.

These loans amount to $24.4 million this year, compared with $20.4 million in the fiscal year that ended last March 31. The loans have been piling up, year after year, and the CBC is charged interest on them—interest payments which add to its operating cost.

The CBC has complained that the loans and interest charges distort the real cost of operating the networks and studios, and has asked Parliament to end the complained repeatedly that the ban system is improper since it is not likely that the CBC ever will be able to pay off the loans.

By the end of last fiscal year the outstanding loans amounted to more than $151.2 million.

The new year's estimates do away with the old system and bring in a single general vote to cover the funds needed by the CBC for both its operating and its capital expansion needs.

The new estimates also include $7.3 million for preparations for the 1976 Olympics in Montreal, at which the CBC will act as host for foreign broadcasting services. This figure is up $1.2 million from the current fiscal year.

The capital expansion budget of the CBC for the new year will amount to $54.6 million, which includes $27.8 million for extension of broadcasting services and $13.2 million for additions and replacements to plant and equipment.

The CBC's new budget for operating expenses is $234.9 million for 1974-75, an increase of less than one per cent from $232.8 million in the CBC fiscal year.

Ontario Incentives Aimed at Mine Slump

TORONTO (CP) — The provincial government announce tax incentives in next month's budget to check a major decline in mineral exploration, Natural Resources Minister Leo Bernier said Friday.

The minister said in an interview the incentives will be offered to non-mining companies to encourage them to invest venture capital in prospecting.

"I think that there are many non-mining companies that would like to throw some venture capital on the exploration field and possibly there is a field only, but they don't have some incentive through tax write-offs, in the exploration field only," he said.

"This will be spelled out in the provincial treasurer's budget."

The budget is expected in the first week of April.

LARGE DISCOVERERS

Mr. Bernier said incentives to the mining industry in the 1930s and 1940s resulted in the discovery of huge ore bodies.

However, the government is worried about a sharp decline in prospecting.

The government's 1973 review of metals, tabled in the legislature Friday, says there was a dip in claims in Ontario for the 1969-1973 period.

"It is a fact that in 1973, the number of claims staked was less than 40 per cent of the total for 1965," Mr. Bernier said in his report.

In the interview, Mr. Bernier said that in order to have a healthy mining industry, exploration should be about $25 million a year. This figure is how via getting about $15 million worth of exploration now.

The minister said the danger was not for the immediate future, but for the years when present reserves have been used up.

The minister said the lack of prospecting and exploration is common across the country.

Other countries, he said, have attacked some of Ontario's exploration dollars and the decline in prospecting has been further accentuated by uncertainty about federal mining tax action.

Legal Aid Extended?

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP) — Prepaid legal services are a logical extension of the concept of legal aid and not the Canadian Bar Association (CBA) is studying the matter, Neil McKinnon, president of the CBA, said Thursday.

Mr. McKelvey, of Saint John, said the CBA has a committee working to make proposals two years plan available to all. He made the comments in an address to the annual meeting of the Social Services Council here.

He said prepaid legal services are a form of legal insurance similar to medical insurance programs. It would be for those who can afford legal services but not enough to pay all they have enough to finance a major legal battle.

Jobless Rate Steady

NEW YORK (AP) — There was encouraging news about the unemployment rate in the United States this week, even though the figures may fail to precise and may not establish any trend.

The labor department's Bureau of Labor Statistics said the unemployment rate in February held steady at 5.3 per cent, with 4.7 million Americans without jobs.

It was the first change in the rate that began with the Arab oil embargo last November. Energy shortages linked directly or indirectly to the embargo have cost as many as 500,000 jobs since November, the bureau estimates.

The February figures obviously did not prove that a trend is starting. The bureau pointed out, that the picture may be affected by a half-a-margin of calculation error or the possibility that the January figure was overstated.

Herbert Stein, chairman of President Nixon's Council of Economic Advisers, said the job losses since November have not spread significantly into industries outside energy problems. This, he said, is evidence of the underlying strength of the economy.

The bureau said that while manufacturing employment had been hit by energy-induced layoffs, "non-farm payroll employment was up in February" last month.

Construction employment was up 157,000 and service industry jobs rose by 218,000.

The sometimes hazy chain of economic cause and effect is being followed by analysts for what they say are losses of more than $200 a head on animals they sell to meat packers.

The cattle feeders say they are losing that much on each of high feed costs and fat profits for cattlemen are up. Meat prices cattle prices are down.

Cattle and dairy producers says they are working out a plan to demonstrate their profits by selling beef cattle on the New York City streets at $1 per pound when prices there are charging.

However, Clarence Adams, president of the National Association of Food Chains, contended that the profits are dangerously low and that declines in beef prices are temporary.

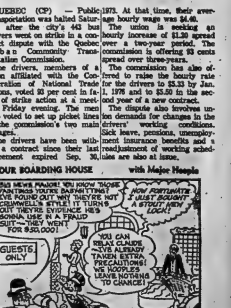
Quebec Bus Drivers Walk Out on City

QUEBEC (CP) — Public transportation was halted Saturday after the city's bus drivers went on strike in a contract dispute with the Quebec Urban Transportation Commission.

The 1,200 members of a union affiliated with the Confederation of National Trade Unions, voted 93 per cent in favor of strike action at a meeting Friday evening. The union also voted to set up picket lines at the commission's two main garages.

The drivers have been without a contract since their last agreement expired Sep. 30, 1973. At that time, their average hourly wages was $4.69.



The union is seeking an hourly increase of $1.30 spread over a two-year period. The commission has put 92 cents spread over three-years.

The commission has also offered to raise the hourly rate for the drivers to $5.01 on Jan. 1, 1976 and to $5.20 in the second year of a new contract.

The dispute also involves union demands for changes in the drivers' working conditions. Sick leave, pensions, unemployment insurance benefits and a road assistance of working schedules are also at issue.

Wilson Faces Trouble

British Liberals Want Labor Out

LONDON (Reuter). — The Liberal party, which holds a potential balance of power in the British Parliament, has pledged to bring down Prime Minister Harold Wilson's minority Labor government "as soon as possible," possibly as early as Tuesday.

The threat tempered the optimism in government and industry over today's return to a five-day work week and the return to work of the 270,000 coal miners after a four-week strike.

Concerted opposition by the Conservative party of former prime minister Edward Heath, who lost office after his party was defeated in elections Feb. 28, plus the small parties like the Liberals, could upset Wilson's fragile hold on government. The danger was expected to influence the House speech to be read to parliament by the Queen Tuesday.

Sunday night, Liberal member of Parliament Cyril Smith told reporters his party has sounded out Welsh and Scottish nationalists, as well as Northern Ireland members to seek support for a vote against Wilson over the House speech.

"Mr. Wilson has no mandate to govern either in terms of seats or votes," Smith said. "We in the Liberal party take the view that our task is to get a Labor government out as soon as possible."

He said if Britain is to borrow funds abroad, it needs a government with a majority, not just 15 seats short of a majority.

An economic program to inspire international confidence is report card: "The dawn of legibility in his handwriting reveals his utter incapacity to spell."

Britain was expected to highlight the throne speech. But the Labor party commitment to renegotiate terms of Britain's entry into the European Common Market also is likely to be featured.

The prime minister is likely to sweeten his policy program with vote-catching proposals to increase women's rights and to show interest for self-government in Scotland.

Old-age pension increases, price curbs and food subsidies are predicted on top of a freeze on rents and mortgage increases.

The overnight shift of miners clocked on at 10 p.m. Sunday night, ending the strike which originally led to the election and the defeat of Heath's anti-inflation policies with their holddown on wages.

The miners' settlement, worth £224 million, was approved by all the 20 areas of the miners' union.

It will still take several days to get the pits in full production and shortages in steel and chemicals resulting from the strike and the three-day week are likely to delay the resumption of full production in industry.

York Teachers Given Ultimatum

TORONTO (CP) — Education Minister Thomas Wells said Sunday he is giving striking York Region teachers until 9 p.m. Monday to agree to voluntary binding arbitration in their contract dispute with the York school board or face possible legislative action.

He said a proposal for arbitration that would require teachers to return to classes has been accepted by the board but rejected by negotiators for the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation.

He refused to speculate on what action cabinet might take at a meeting Tuesday morning but said legislation forcing teachers to accept before an arbitration board would be considered.

The minister told a news conference that his proposal for arbitration came Friday night after he realized negotiations had reached a stalemate.

Issues to be arbitrated include salary, pupil-teacher ratio and length of the work year.

Wells said he was pressured to sign to back contract demands with the school board, leaving 14,000 high school students without classes.

Mr. Wells said arbitration was first suggested Jan. 31 but both sides decided that negotiations were "the best way out of the situation."

"They've gone on for five weeks," he said. "My assessment is that they've reached a stalemate and that in order to get schools open in full now, the best way is to send the matters in dispute to arbitration."

The minister said his main concern is to get students back to school. He said the walkout is having a "harmful effect" on students.

They have missed 10 per cent of their school year, he said, and are concerned about marks and admission to universities and colleges.

Vincent Matthewson, chief negotiator for the teachers, said in an interview the teachers rejected Mr. Wells's proposal because it is not considered "a viable means of solving the situation."

If arbitration was forced on the teachers, their provincial executive would meet to decide what steps to take.

When asked whether arbitration legislation would result in a province-wide strike, Mr. Matthewson declined comment.

Mr. Wells told reporters that he suggested a general meeting of the teachers be held to discuss his proposal.

But Mr. Matthewson said the teachers met Friday and voted to support the negotiators and "their really isn't a justifiable reason to hold another meeting Monday to say the same thing again."

"Education does not lend itself to arbitration," he said. "In industry, you have a product, a commodity and then there are tangible items and they could be arbitrated."

If it was just money that was keeping us apart, that could be arbitrated."

John Honsberger, chief trustee negotiator, said the board agreed to arbitration after it agreed not to dispute the right of arbitrators to decide on pupil-teacher ratio.

Manitoba May Decide Teaching Contracts

WINNIPEG (CP) — A move is afoot in Manitoba to establish provincial bargaining between teachers and school trustees.

Harvey Kingdon, president of the Manitoba Teachers' Society, said Sunday some rural teachers are unhappy with the current local bargaining system and have prepared resolutions on provincial negotiations to be presented later this month at the society's annual meeting.

Mr. Kingdon was speaking to the annual convention of the Manitoba Association of School Trustees (MAST).

He said some teachers are questioning the sincerity and good faith of trustees at the negotiation table.

"They feel boards aren't prepared to make decisions and would rather go to arbitration.

"It's important to teachers that we bargain with our employers, the school boards, or with those controlling the purse strings, the provincial government."

But the suggestion ran contrary to another subject discussed at the MAST convention: a complaint that other forces including the provincial government are continually nibbling away at local autonomy.

Joe Stangl, the outgoing president of MAST, said local control is being seriously threatened.

"Trusteeship will become little more than a titleheld appointment if trustees do not rise to meet the challenge."

Mr. Stangl said in an interview school boards are not being informed before decisions affecting them are made by the provincial government.

Unfortunately, he said, trustees know very little about financing in education and have never played a role in forming curriculums or course content.

"In the past, the decisions have been made by a relatively few people, two remote, too ignorant of local conditions, too ... corresponding to change.

News Briefs

Still Coalition

BRUSSELS (Reuter) — Belgium headed for another coalition government today following Sunday's general elections. But gains registered by the Christian Socialists, one of the traditional governing parties, raised the possibility that at least one partner may be dropped from the next government. This would reduce the risk of internal splits like those which led to the resignation last January of Edmond LeBurton's three-party cabinet.

Amnesty Supported

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former army Secretary Robert Froehlke said today that since President Nixon can't grant amnesty to Vietnam war draft evaders, the United States Congress should if it legally can. Froehlke was reiterating his long-standing News before his scheduled appearance before a House of Representatives judiciary subcommittee conducting hearings on legislating amnesty. Froehlke was President Nixon's army secretary from 1971 until last spring.

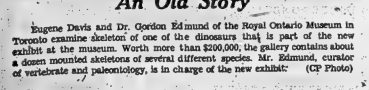
Crisis May Pass

MADRID (AP) — The Spanish government has indicated that its crisis with the Roman Catholic Church may be cooled off by the church's statement that its Episcopal Conference meant no attack on national unity when he urged more freedom for the Basque. A government source said the statement issued by the conference of bishops was "conciliatory."

Four Die in Fire

STEINBACH, Man. (CP) — A family of four died early today when fire engulfed their home near this community just southeast of Winnipeg. Fire department spokesmen said the fire was believed to have originated in the area of the furnace. Names of the victims were not immediately released.

Fares May Rise



GENEVA (Reuters) — Representatives of the world's airlines will meet in Montreux, Switzerland, next week to discuss the possibility of another fare increase to offset increased fuel costs, a spokesman for the International Air Transport Association (IATA) said today.

A Goalie's Life Is Hectic

For a few seconds, it appeared as though Belleville goalie Rob Duncan was lacking protection in front of his net as he was buried by Pickering rusher Gary Murphy (11). As it turned out Murphy was the one who was the loser. Gary forgot to take the puck with him. Panthers' goalie, Ray Pilon, gets obvious protection around his crease, right. Pilon's defenceman, Bruce West, hits Bobcat Andy Ricketts with everything he's got to keep Ricketts out of the way. Pilon didn't get protection all the time, though, as the Cats defeated the Panthers 4-2 here Sunday in their best of seven semi-final sprie and pulling Pickering out of the Metro Junior B playoffs 4-2. Euromart New Deal Labor Aim

LONDON (AP) — Foreign Secretary James Callaghan said Saturday the new Labor government will carry out its campaign promises for renegotiation and referendum on the European Common Market even though Labor lacks a majority in Parliament.

In his first official speech as foreign secretary, Callaghan told a Labor party audience he will seek to renegotiate Britain's membership terms in the Common Market. He will then ask the public in a referendum whether Britain should remain in the community or withdraw.

Callaghan said Labor's first priority will be to look at the effect of Market policies on food prices in British shops.

Solzhenitsyn Influence Irks Brezhnev

MOSCOW (AP) — Communist party chief Leonid Brezhnev said Sunday that exiled Soviet author Alexander Solzhenitsyn cannot "be allowed to slow" international co-operation and relaxation of tensions.

It was his first public comment on the Nobel laureate, who was stripped of his Soviet citizenship and expelled last month after weeks of attacks on his new book about Stalinist labor camps, Gulag Archipelago. Solzhenitsyn now is staying with his lawyer in Zurich, Switzerland.

Brezhnev was questioned by a group of French correspondents who met with the party general secretary two days before his meeting with French President Georges Pompidou.

Sadat Is Unable To Halt Embargo

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

President Anwar Sadat was unable to get all the Arab oil ministers to a meeting in Cairo holding out for the pullback of Israeli troops facing the Syrians on the Golan Heights.

Tension remains high on that front.

Syria said its gunners shot down an Israeli reconnaissance plane Sunday and that it crashed near Hasem, in Jordan.

Body Found Of Minister Amin Fired

KAMPALA (AP) — The body of the foreign minister President Idi Amin of Uganda fired last month was recovered from the Nile River during the weekend.

The Kampala newspaper Nation says his death "raised a sense of profound fear in every citizen."

"The question now in most minds is 'What about the others?' " the paper says.

The government radio announced that the former minister, Lt.-Col. Michael Ondoga, would be buried today. But the announcement didn't say what the autopsy Amin ordered found about the cause of death. Ondoga disappeared last Thursday.

Ondoga, a former ambassador to the Soviet Union, was replaced as foreign minister by Elizabeth Bareza, the former Princess Elizabeth of Toro.

Arab oil ministers are meeting in Cairo

Unless a last-minute agreement is reached between Arab oil ministers meeting in Cairo and the United States, the Arab oil embargo will be lifted Tuesday.

Instead, Algeria and Libya, who want to continue the embargo, forced a delay in the meeting until Wednesday and insisted it be held in the Libyan capital of Tripoli.

Sadat's failure Sunday was considered a blow to his chances of getting the embargo lifted. The Cairo newspaper Al Akhbar said the holdouts have agreed to discuss Sadat's proposal in Tripoli. But some observers doubt the oil ministers will take the issue unless it has been resolved at a higher level.

After a week of conflicting announcements about the place and time for the meeting, six oil ministers—from Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Abu Dhabi, Bahrain, Qatar and Egypt—were in Cairo Sunday, Algeair, Libya and Syria stayed away.

The six who came met for 90 minutes and announced they will go to Tripoli. An Egyptian spokesman said there was no talk of the oil embargo.

A communique said Egypt had offered to be host for the meeting because of a shortage of accommodations in Tripoli due to an international fair. But it said Libya has managed to provide facilities for the meeting.

Sadat has championed an end to the ban in exchange for

Ale Drinkers Will Buy Pub

YORK, England (Reuter) — Some 500 dedicated beer drinkers voted Saturday to buy their own pub—and to pay out dividends in either cash or beer.

The decision came at the first annual meeting of the Campaign for Real Ale which has 11,500 members anxious to prevent the gradual disappearance of traditionally-brewed draft beer.

The meeting later adjourned for field research.

Newfoundland Trying to Buy Brinco Shares

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — The Newfoundland government is attempting to buy all the shares of Brinco, the developer of the massive Churchill Falls hydroelectric project, Premier Frank Moores said today.

A statement by the premier said the government was meeting in London with Rio Tinto Zinc Corp. Ltd., Brinco's controlling shareholder, to discuss the Newfoundland offer to buy all Brinco shares.

It said the Canadian securities commission and the Montreal and Toronto stock exchanges have been requested to cease trading in Brinco shares.

The Montreal, Toronto and Canadian stock exchanges announced the halt in trading of Brinco this morning.

Mr. Moores' statement said the action "is the most important resource decision ever made by a Newfoundland government."

It said the major reason for the purchase of the shares is to buy back control of Labrador hydro rights.

The government planned to co-ordinate upper and lower Churchill power generation and to link their output into a regional power grid.

Churchill Falls (Labrador) Corp., a Brinco subsidiary, developed the $950-million project at Churchill Falls and the company holds the development rights to the Lower Churchill River which has a potential of three million horsepower.

The government plans to develop the Lower Churchill with power eventually being made available to insular Newfoundland by undersea cables across the strait of Belle Isle.

Streaker Spotted

A female police constable was dispatched to the Smith Crescent area Friday night to chase down a streaker.

Police Chief Douglas Grobbelaar said that his department received a call at 10.40 p.m. Friday saying that a man was seen running naked along Smith Crescent.

The female constable was the closest officer in the area and she was sent by the dispatcher to investigate the incident.

The police did not find the phantom streaker, however.

The telephone caller told police that the male streaker was described as being "male, white and large." He was wearing just a toque and a pair of boots.

College Tour On Agenda

Belleville Rotarians will meet April 8 at Loyalist College, where the hotel management students will be in charge of a dinner for the club members, visitors from clubs in the surrounding area and governors.

The invitation followed an informal survey at a Rotary meeting that revealed only 15 of 85 club members had ever been to the new Loyalist College president Herbert Young assured the board of governors that other service clubs (a full-four counties) served by the college will be given "equal time".

Following the dinner, the Rotarians will be given a guided tour of the college buildings.

Springbrook Herd is Tops

Springbrook area farmer, Harry Dunford, has won the Toronto-Dominion Bank award for having the top herd in the Hastings county dairy herd improvement program.

The award was made on the basis of average records for the 1973 production year.

Mr. Dunford not only had the top herd in the progress report but also had the top producing cow and heifer.

Ross Kerr, RR 3 Campbellford won the Hastings dairy Service Club award given to the owner - sampler making the greatest improvement during the year.

The awards were made at the annual Hastings County DHI Awards Banquet held March 6 at Westminster United Church.

Union Carbide: Night Shift Ends, Strike Starts

Union Carbide Workers Strike

About 25 production workers manned picket lines outside Union Carbide this morning. They were part of 120 Union Carbide workers who agreed this weekend on strike action.

The workers, members of Local 380 United Rubber Workers began their four-hour picket duties at 8 a.m. today.

At a union ratification meeting on Saturday, members voted 74-32 in favor of strike action. Talks between the union and the company were last held a week ago today.

Production at the plant came to a standstill with workers off the job this morning. The only operation running is the formaldehyde run which couldn't be stopped and is being done by supervisory staff.

Work at the plant stopped as workers finished their midnight to 8 a.m. shift.

The union and the company are meeting today at 10 a.m.

Power Tools Stolen

Belleville police are investigating a break-in that netted thieves approximately $500 worth of power tools during the weekend.

Police Chief Douglas Grobbe reports that thieves stole the tools, a skil saw, a drill, a chain saw, an electric screwdriver and a flashlight and tool box from a garage at 131 Dalferin Street.

The theft is believed to have occurred sometime between 12.01 a.m. and 6 a.m. Saturday.

to discuss their differences and the meeting is expected to last most of the day.

Earl Taylor, president of Local 380, said that wages were the key issue in the negotiations which had involved 16 meetings, including mediation.

The company's last offer was 80 cents an hour, to be equally divided over three years. The union has been asking for a $1 an hour increase over a three year term.

Mr. Taylor said the average hourly wage at the plant now is $3.35.

The union wants a one-year contract because of inflation. "We need the raise. The cost of living is going up each year," said Mr. Taylor.

A company release issued by R. S. Zalkowitz, business manager, said that production operations necessary to the plant will be operated by staff personnel.

The memo mentioned that a memorandum of agreement for a two-year contract was reached between the union and management negotiating committees on March 4 with the assistance of the ministry of labor mediator. O. Mancini.

Bruce Palmateer, union spokesman, mentioned that this year marks the 25th anniversary of Union Carbide in Belleville. It's a nice anniversary present the company has given us, no money."

Members of the striking workers were high this morning even though the weather was a bit brisk outside. One said it was hard to say if it would be a long strike but they would be prepared for it.

Busy Two Weeks Recorded at ANAF

The annual President's Executive dinner and social was held on Saturday night in the Tartan Lounge, Duke of Edinburgh Unit 201 ANAF. Special guests besides the incoming and outgoing executive of both the Unit and Ladies Auxiliary, included past presidents of both units. President Hank Ford acted as master of ceremonies following the dinner, introducing the guests while Ladies Auxiliary vice-president Jean Northey thanked the unit for the kind invitation to the lady guests and also introduced her for the Ladies Auxiliary. Entertainment chairman, Stan Melbourne announced the names of his two committees for the coming year and also thanked Mrs. Ed Jordan for her gift, in memory of her late husband, which will sponsor two youth at the citizenship training program to be held at RMC in Kingston this summer.

Past President, Cecil Brown, in his usual copious manner expressed thanks to the Unit for the very successful evening on behalf of all the invited guests. He also announced that the past presidents would be discussing a youth at the citizenship training program in July.

President Hank Ford and executive members, Good Brown, Ray Featherstone and Stan Melbourne visited OSD last Wednesday evening to present the unit trophy to the four bowling all-star team champions. The new youth medallions were also presented to Dr. J. G. Gibbs, sports chairman Doug Sherman, the dates of the presidents, coaches and olayers on both teams participating in the series finals.

At the general meeting to be held on Sunday March 24, delegates will be picked to attend the Dominion Convention to be held in Halifax August 19 to 30. The president asks that as many members as possible attend this important meeting which will be preceded by an initiation of the new members at 7.30 p.m. The general meeting will commence at 8 p.m. sharp.

Alex Elliott was elected by his fellow associate members as their representative to the executive for the coming year, at a well attended meeting held recently.

Entertainment chairman Cliff Ouderkirk has come up with a real find in the person of Gladys Smith who thrilled her audience in the lower lounge on Friday and announced that she will be back again on March 23. As Lewis returns for another engagement this coming Friday with entertainment commencing at 5.30 p.m. for the members in the lower lounge, a big St. Patrick's Dance is planned for Saturday, Mar. 16. In the Tartan Lounge with music by Hart and Soul. Admission is $2.50 a couple and tickets are now on sale at the bar.

Mixed darts on Saturday evening March 2 drew another large number of contestants. Mary Davis and Bill Stevens were the winners, with June and Bob Brooks as runners up. The next mixed dart tournament will be held this Saturday commencing at 8 p.m.

A mixed dart competition has been the members of the ANAF; the Cpls' Mess and their ladies is being arranged. The first visit to the Cpls' Mess CFB Trenton will be on Sunday Mar. 31 and all interested persons are asked to place their names on the list and the sports bulletin board for further details and the date of the return visit to the unit.

Darling Jean returned from a two-week vacation in beautiful Barbados, the land of sun and rum, we were indeed elated to know that our weekly column was missed during our absence. Thanks to all the members for their friendly greetings and handshakes upon our return to the club. Our visiting Australian friends Gord and Doris Lee were joined on numerous occasions by club members George and Bunny Christopher, Vic and Hilda Allen and former city-residents Mr. and Mrs. Ted Lee also Mr. and Mrs. John Seabeck for an evening of entertainment. Perhaps in future years we could form a satellite unit on the island for visiting members of the ANAF.

Ladies auxiliary president Alice Storms and Marg Campbell left on Saturday for a 23-day bus tour of California, Nevada and New Mexico. Bill Storms sees as they left. Alice has enough sense to save a condition of her winnings in LasVegas to pay for a divorce in Reno. Bill Campbell says he has his hands full just feeding their dog Sunday and alone trying to feed himself.

Sick comrades in Belleville General Hospital are: Herb Campbell, room 204; Ralph Crawford in the intensive care unit while Roy Foran is in Queen's Self Care Unit 3.

Due to many requests we repeat a sermon from last year which seems appropriate for this time of year. Sam's Sermon; Canada is the only country where it takes more brains to make out the Income tax return that it does to make the income.

Moira Authority Program Planned

Project SWEEP (Students Working in an Environmental Enhancement Program) will again be operating in the Moira River watershed this year.

This is the fourth year that the aggregate will have operated in the authority and, as part of the Ontario government's Experience '74 summer student employment programs, projects of a public nature or those directly benefiting the general public will be initiated.

Periods of employment for post-secondary and secondary level students will range from 10 weeks for laborers up to 18 weeks for senior supervisors and for leaders for clerical staff.

Applications for senior staff positions (senior supervisor, technical advisor and clerical) must be received by the Moira River Authority by April 8. Students must be 18 years or over on the first day of their employment.

Employment periods for phst-secondary and secondary level students are as follows: Senior Supervisors, Technical Advisors — 18 weeks, commencing May 6, 1974 to September 6, 1974. Clerical — 10 weeks, commencing May 6, 1974 to September 13, 1974. Foremen — 12 weeks, commencing May 27, 1974, to September 6, 1974. Laborers: Post-secondary — 13 weeks, June 10, 1974 to Aug. 30, 1974. Secondary — 10 weeks, June 24, 1974, to August 30, 1974.

Meeting Tuesday

A film narrated by Tennessee Ernie Ford will be featured at the Tuesday night meeting of the Quinte Chapter of the Association for Children with Learning Disabilities.

The meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. at Bayside Secondary School under the chairmanship of Mrs. Carol Bancroft, vice-president.

The film outlines some of the problems encountered by the learning disabled child and how a normal child can be of assistance.

UIC's New Lock Called Outrageous

From The Ottawa Bureau of The Intelligencer

OTTAWA — If information is supposed to flow freely from the Unemployment Insurance Commission, why did the UIC find it necessary to put on a special extra strong duty lock on the Belleville Regional pay centre?

This question was posed Friday in the House of Commons by Jack Ellis, the Conservative MP for Hastings who is a persistent critic of the UIC.

Robert Andras, Minister of Manpower and Immigration, said he was not aware of this lock until he read Mr. Ellis' speech in Hansard just minutes before the question was posed.

The minister said it is a matter for the Commission's administration and expressed confidence in its judgement. He assumed "it was done for a very good reason".

During the Throne Speech debate earlier, Mr. Ellis said the UIC has a very secretive approach and its affairs are not open to public scrutiny.

"The approach has been to install new locks, to change the keys of the existing locks and in the case of the Belleville Regional pay centre, to put on a massive lock costing $80, which prevents anyone on staff from entering the executive suite. The cost of the lock and the cost of installing the lock alone is outrageous," Mr. Ellis said in his answer to the Throne Speech.

Obituaries and Funerals

DELBERT CLARENCE MCCONNELL

Funeral service was held Saturday March 9 at the John R. Bush Funeral Home for Delbert Clarence McConnell, who died Friday, March 8. He was 58.

Mr. McConnell, who lived at 770 Coleman Street, died at Belleville General Hospital after a short but serious illness.

He was born in Cordova Mines, Ontario and had lived in Belleville for 23 years, having resided in Point Anne previous to that.

His wife, the former Martha Anne MacDonald, predeceased him on February 28, 1973.

He leaves a son, Earl of Belleville and two daughter, Mrs. Edna (Jean) Clarke in Belleville and Mrs. Albert (Ila) Whitehead of Toronto.

He is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Gladys Bonnell and Miss Estelle McConnell, both of Toronto. Also surviving are Mrs. James Peoples of Belleville also a grandson.

Mr. McConnell worked as a cartpenter at Canada Cement before retiring.

He was a member of AF and AM Lodge No. 222 in Marmora.

How Can They Learn to Cope?

By COLIN BRUCE

I don't hate kids but I do hate those red lights on the back of school buses.

It is ridiculous that four lanes of Highway 2 commuter traffic has to pile up around a school bus that seems to stop at every driveway depositing its precious cargo piece by piece.

What's happened to our youthful appreciation of fresh air, exercise and the love of all things natural.

Why can't the students use their God-given legs and take a lot of strain out of that 18 miles of motoring madness between Belleville and Trenton.

I can't find it in my heart to believe motorists in the Quinte area are such mutants that students feel intimidated walking from a central dropoff point to their homes.

We're coddling our children. We're wrapping them up in cotton batten by making the traffic stop, allowing them to sashay across the road on a red light carpet.

Teach the kid how to handle traffic. Don't stop the traffic so he doesn't have to learn.

For at least the secondary school pupils, it seems incredible that during the week, all stops to provide for their safety but the same student — come the weekend — is out there on the side of that "screaming artery" thumbing a lift.

You can talk all you want to about the safety of our children and use all the cotton batten in the world but what about the motorists?

Does it really make sense to baby our children that way?

Are they learning a single, blessed thing when they're given the red carpet treatment.

Kinsmen Science Fair Attracts More Entries

PICTON — Prince Edward Collegiate saw many students competing for the second annual Kinsmen Science Fair Championships on Saturday afternoon.

The Science Fair, according to the chairman of the committee, W. Boulthee, was more successful this year than before. Many elementary school's entered this year, making the fair's exhibits cover a wider area of subjects.

The students who entered exhibits were from Wellington Consolidated Public, Pinecrest Memorial, Queen Elizabeth, Sophiasburgh, Athol Central, Ronte and Prince Edward Collegiate.

An example of the variety of entries was a water purification exhibit that Johnny Sorenson and Danny Newell of Athol Central demonstrated to the public in the afternoon. The two boys have always been interested in the project, but have never had the opportunity to construct one until they were notified of the Science Fair.

Nora Conley, a grade eight student at Wellington Elementary School felt "The fair gives us experience in personal workmanship and public presentation. If we didn't have the fair we would not have the chance to display our exhibits."

Mrs. Hart from the Board of Education presented the first prize trophies and Ed Ray, president of the Kinsmen presented the second, third and fourth prize awards. The champions from each category will be entering the Belleville Rotary Science Fair in April.

Champions of the categories are:

Junior Individual Earth and Environmental Sciences, Henry Nyman, Wellington Public School.

Junior Group Earth and Environmental Sciences, Ross Price and Steve Allan, Pinecrest Memorial Public School.

Junior Group Physical and Engineering Sciences, Colin Campbell and Donald Hall, Pinecrest Memorial.

Junior Individual Life Sciences, Timothy Vanhecke, Pinecrest.

Junior Group Life Sciences, Gordon Hall and Robert Armishaw, Memorial.

Several others received awards for honorable mention. Another award was presented by Mrs. Hart to John Lounsberry, who was named Grand Champion of the Fair.

John Lounsberry, a grade 12 student at PECI worked for four months on his electronics exhibit. He said "without this fair I would have had the chance or the opportunity to build my exhibit or research the transistor in depth." He plans on making electronics his career when he graduates.

The Kinsmen are planning to sponsor another fair next year and hope to involve more and more local students so they will have the opporunity to experience public competition and so they will be able to apply their knowledge of subjects in the construction of exhibits.

Top Speakers

Local girls advance another level in the Legion public speaking competition, on the left: Maureen O'Connor, grade 7 Marmora Sacred Heart Public School; Cathy Carscadden, grade 10, Trenton High School with Zone chairman, Harold Vaughan, Belleville; Bonnie McIsaac grade 12, BCI; and Barbara Wilson, grade 4, Ronte School, look over trophies and scrolls won at the district speak-off held in Port Perry Sunday. With the exception of Bonnie, who placed second, the girls qualified to compete at area level next Sunday in Ajax

Welcome Home,

Just after a three-week sun flight trip to the Barbados Vi Lindgren, saleslady for Gerald Joyce Realty Ltd., and her husband John, already anticipating another visit to the sunny south.

Only their pets will be for free.

Mrs. Lindgren and her husband returned home from the south last Friday night only to find a letter in their mail notifying them they had won a one-week holiday for two to the Barbados.

The trip was won on a draw conducted in connection with a membership drive by the Ontario Humane Society.

Mrs. Lindgren said she would be contacting Thomas Hughes, director of the Ontario Humane Society, to see if the timing of her next trip south can be scheduled for autumn.

A raffle on a donated hassock brought in $240 for furnishings for Belleville's Cheshire Home over the weekend.

The made-made leather hassock in a maple leaf design was made by Mrs. George Weymark to raise money for the John St. home for handicapped young adults.

Cheryl Sullivan, one of the first three residents of the home, made the draw for the winning ticket Saturday afternoon. Winner was Miss Pauline Lindsay of Belleville.

Belleville Has Streaking First

Belleville has been added to the list streaking communities.

As a matter of fact, Belleville has a first in the streaking fact.

Last night at the Belleville Memorial Arena, Gary Murphy put it all together, in his allbuttens, and streaked the ice surface at the arena becoming the first known Canadian hockey player to indulge.

Murphy, a left winger with the Pickering Panthers, took up the challenge from the members of his team and at midnight donned his skates and a smile and careened around the ice.

Gary's team had been beaten 4-3 by the Bobcats and also lost their semi-final series to the Cats 4-3 with last night's defeat.

About 30 people were on hand to witness the daring feat.

The streaker won $40 from the players on his team by taking the dare and commented upon his return to the dressing room, "For $40 I'd streak down Yonge Street."

Supernatural Meeting Topic

The Hastings County Historical Society will hold its general meeting Wednesday, March 13, at 8 p.m. in the auditorium at Glanmore House.

The topic to be discussed during the meeting will be "the supernatural in local history."

The discussion period will be followed by several business discussions centering around the drawing up of a number of committees to assist in operating the museum in 1974.

The society's directors will also present a list of executive officers who will direct the society during the coming year.

Gerald Boyce will continue as president of the society, while Judie Carty will serve as vice-president. Cecil Becker will be the treasurer and Dick Midlane will act as

Damage Heavy In Collision

A two-car collision at the intersection of Highway 2 and Montrose Rd. caused an estimated $2,500 worth of damage Friday night.

P.C. Garney Brown of the Belleville detachment of the Ontario, Provincial Police reports that the cars, driven by Sheldon Davis, 44, of 65 George Street, Trenton, collided around 8 p.m.

The Davis car was westbound on Highway 2, in the driving lane, when it collided with the Thomas vehicle in the passing lane.

No one was injured in the accident.

Low Fitness Rating

The man who has become synonymous with the ideal of fitness in Canada, Lloyd Percival, told it on the line to Belleville audience recently. He said if Canadians don't act soon to improve their fitness, the country will be getting very low on what he termed "people energy." The ability to sustain health and withstand tension will decrease.

That point of course to a large extent is already with us and unless the Toronto Fitness Institute president's advice to Canadians to start (slowly at first) working on the objective of a healthy physique is taken seriously we can expect a further deterioration in national fitness.

Consider a recent University of Saskatchewan study indicating that the city of Saskatoon for one, and presumably all Canada is a wasteland of the physically unfit. And it goes on to point out that young women are the least fit.

Forty-seven per cent of women scored in the low-fair fitness category, compared with 40 per cent of men. The lowest fitness rating — 54 per cent in the low-fair category — was for women aged 20 to 29 years.

The poor showing of the women, according to the report, was because of the lack of recreation facilities available to them. And to this the growing number of young women taking up smoking and we have a really sorry picture.

Mr. Percival meanwhile has some suggestions. At a recent reception for some of Canada's top athletes he said that in a matter of weeks — and for little money — Canadians could have ten physical fitness centres doing the same job as fitness testing and evaluation as the Fitness Institute. He noted for instance that the Government spends more money on research studies than it would cost to build the centres.

Something must be done to get people more fitness conscious. But in the last resort it is a matter for the individual; a great deal can be done on this basis, by giving up smoking, doing a little jogging and so on.

Nationhood

Author and journalist Pierre Berton, always a prominent figure on the Canadian literary scene, has enhanced his reputation further with The National Dream and The Last Spike.

Now these sagas of Canada's national development and the forging of the east-west rail link that gave impetus to nationhood have been adapted for television.

It is a stimulating series and one which, like Expo 67, should serve to remind Canadians of their pioneer origins and of the courage and determination that went into the making of this nation. Author Berton has done as much as anyone to interpret the significance of the Canadian fact for his fellow citizens.

Coal from Poland

Because of the energy crisis there is renewed interest in coal and last week it was announced that Poland is becoming an increasingly important exporter.

Joan Beckley, in an interesting article in The Bancroft Times, says Poland may eventually export 50 million tons of coal annually.

We read somewhere too that the Polish miners are paid more than most and working conditions are good. Meanwhile, writer Beckley notes that even before the energy crisis the government had decided to expand port facilities to handle exports.

This is not surprisingly, is looking to Polish mining potential. According to Ms. Beckley, the two countries recently signed a $240 million deal to develop copper resources in western Poland. Japan will provide the machinery and equipment for two refineries which Poland will pay for in finished products.

For a "three-week expert," which is all the writer claims for her knowledge of Poland, Ms. Beckley nevertheless displays considerable insight. Even in this short time she says she gains some perspective about the country, and exhibits this in her article.

An example is this observation: "With its sensitive, sophisticated and cultured people there is a majority like this of old wine or aged cheese! The people have lived through generations of war, intrigue and hatreds —there are still dark scars of the occupation here and there covered with the scabs of civilization, but the present is very much alive and the future looks promising."

"Change Slow In Coming"

The Hewers-Of-Food-And-Drawers-Of-Water Syndrome

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service
Hewers of wood, drawers of water.

Canadians adopted that description a generation ago as a cynical description of a major part of our economic activity—exporting raw materials for others to process into manufactured goods.

But any change in that role has been slow to come. Some provincial regulations have been introduced in recent years to encourage greater domestic processing of our minerals, but a large part of our base-metal ores, wood pulp, oil and gas are still shipped abroad in raw form.

This month, the federal government has at last taken the first steps that could ultimately empower it to halt any more processing of those raw materials in Canada.

No one could argue with the intent of the proposed amendment to the Export and Import Permits Act—the establishment of more smelters, refineries and other processing plants in this country, so that our major exports will have a higher labor content and added value.

But the proposed new government powers will have to be applied with discretion, and with an eye on the economic realities of world markets.

Canada holds no monopoly on raw materials, and we must be careful not to deal ourselves out of the marketplace—and then destroy jobs rather than create them.

Nor should we expect that legislation will be a magic wand that will bring processing plants into existence. Equally important are the availability of capital, labor, and markets for processed materials.

The key is at it, Trade Minister Alastair Gillespie—the sponsor of the amendment—might do well to consider parallel legislation to promote a more even distribution of raw-material processing within Canada.

Some parts of the country have very little industrial activity, not only in relation to their raw-material output but also in relation to the processing industries in other parts of Canada.

It is no doubt inevitable that processing should be concentrated in heavily populated areas of Canada, because that is where the big markets are—but economic opportunities will never be in balance until industry is more evenly spread across Canada.

Just as there is general agreement on the need for greater Canadian processing of raw materials, so too is there general agreement that Canadian subsidiaries of U.S. companies must be governed by Canadian rather than U.S. law.

Clearly, the Canadian government could not allow U.S.-controlled MLW-Worthington Ltd. of Montreal to turn down an export order for locomotives for Cuba because of the U.S. Trading With The Enemy Act.

The controversy over the locomotive exports has cast Cuba in the sympathetic role of the underdog. But our government, in its laudable determination to show Washington that it can't do that to us, ought to look a little more deeply into the export order.

Is it really in Canada's interest to strengthen so greatly the economic infrastructure of Cuba—a country that ignores Canada's legitimate request for the extradition of the hijacker of a Canadian passenger plane, that harbors the kidnappers of James Cross, and whose declared policy is to "export revolution!"

Some would argue that it is only through trade contacts that better relations can be established with Communist regimes.

Perhaps—but let's not be blinded by resentment of American foolishness.

Governments That Work On A Tightrope

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Governments in democratic countries have been in trouble recently trying to stay in power by reorganizing existing cabinets, going through elections which end up indecisive.

In Britain, France, Italy, Israel and earlier in Denmark elected governments have unsuccessfully gone to the polls in efforts to win new strength, more certain mandates from electorates to solve the mounting problems facing all countries these days.

At this point only the Italian parliamentary crisis, the struggle to form the 39th Italian government since the war, has not been resolved. In Britain the election left matters positively worse than they were before, with a Labor minority government to try and end Britain's deepening economic crisis.

In France the severely-criticized government of Premier Pierre Messmer resigned only to re-structure itself as a smaller cabinet, 16 ministers and and economic tensions, global in their scope and form, which national governments may solve only with the greatest difficulty.

The various world crisis in energy, food shortages, constantly rising inflation, the ebb and flow in the value of national currencies in international markets have marked the last years of the 60s and the 70s to date.

Within the political systems of each of the above countries political feuds, personality clashes (chiefly the one between Heath and Wilson in Britain), historic divisions of right and left add to the intense difficulty of those who are trying to rule.

Behind the chronic Italian parliamentary crisis, is a sick country with growing social and economic ills, many of them unchanged since the war but hidden for a long time behind the facade of the so-called "Italian Miracle," the economic and cultural recovery of the 1960s.

Although the energy crisis produced a sudden priority, countries have ways of meeting

Fund Could Help Says MP

Divorce Trauma And Alimony

By PETER LLOYD

OTTAWA (CP) — A government fund for distribution of alimony payments would eliminate "one of the real tragedies" of Canadian society, says Toronto Liberal MP Barney Danson.

Mr. Danson, who represents York North in the Commons, has launched a personal campaign for government involvement to end "the soul-destroying and costly procedure" facing individuals trying to collect defaulted alimony from a divorced spouse.

"One of the real tragedies of alimony is that the husband frequently doesn't pay what the court awards," he said in an interview. A fund to provide a guaranteed payment "could take a lot of trauma for a mother and her kids."

"Often the husband ordered to pay alimony skips the province, or even the country, and that makes it really difficult to collect. The mother may have to neglect her kids or give up her job to pursue her legal case."

He proposes that payments be made into a government fund, with alimony distributed from the fund even in cases of default.

This would avoid many cases of women ending up on welfare because of the process required to pursue defaulted payments, Mr. Danson said. The law reform commission had estimated welfare costs for such families at $1 million a day.

"Under the procedure I propose, the wife and mother is assured of the payments awarded. It is then up to the Crown agency to keep track of the delinquent husband in co-operation with other jurisdictions.

"This is something that can be done better by an arm of government than by an individual, already a harried mother."

Mr. Danson said he has discussed this with his colleagues "and they received it extremely well."

He intends to talk with Justice Minister Otto Lang about the idea, and is considering introducing a private member's bill for Commons debate.

Votes seldom are taken on private members' bills, which normally are "talked out" when debating time expires, but they are used by MPs to bring personal projects before the House.

The resulting debate sometimes leads the government to introduce a similar bill.

The fund proposed would be almost self-supporting after being established with revenue from the federal and provincial governments, Mr. Danson said.

School Bus Safety Factor

Peterborough Examiner

Jane Morley was lucky. Jane, a 15-year-old Grade 10 student was hit by a school bus on Feb. 13. She escaped with only minor injuries sustained when the rear wheels of the bus ran over her arm.

The story could have had quite a different ending. Jane was struck as she walked around the front of the bus. The front end of the vehicle passed over without hitting her. Only the rear wheel made contact.

In a letter to the Northumberland and Durham County Board of Education, Jane's mother called the minor injuries "a miracle." but, she said, it was a "miracle" that could and which could have been avoided if all buses were required to use the special mirror for front of the bus viewing."

The board agreed. According to its reports, the bus driver could not see Jane because she was hidden by the hood of the vehicle. If the bus had been equipped with a front mirror, the driver would have known Jane was there, and the accident would not have happened.

In response to the accident mill Mrs. Morley's suggestion, the board has now moved to make front mirrors mandatory on all school buses within its jurisdiction. The action may not eliminate dangers to students getting off buses, but at least give bus drivers a better chance of avoiding accidents.

The main problem is not with new buses. Most of them have been equipped with outside front mirrors since the Ontario Schoolboy Association recommended their use in 1971.

Some of the older buses, however, still have not been fitted with these cheap ($21) and necessary safety devices.

Board trustee D.R. Cook expressed the view that all the mirrors accurately.

"We can't get all the solutions all the time," he said, "but we're trying. This (the accident) happened once and may not happen again, but once is more than enough."

Pace And Nightsoil Pickup

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

For the benefit of those members of city council who seem to feel that PACE was looking for publicity in the night soil pickup issue let me set the matter straight.

The complacent council members who claim they have seen nothing about the situation apparently don't remember that the city discontinued the pickup last December.

In the past there has been enough discussion in council about this area that one would have thought every council member would have been fully conversant with the problem.

If it takes publicity in an issue such as this to get this council moving—so be it. It is doubtful if any of the councillors on scraping emptying these documents would suffer a similar situation for a single day — let alone two months.

Recycling

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

It was interesting to read of the great response to the paper recycling here, but there is reason to be done, as the apartments are not being collected.

Certainly it cannot be expected that a month's supply should be hampered as a potential fire hazard, but as in other areas, there could be bins, in which the papers could be deposited for pick-up. How about it?

I wrap and take my papers where I know they will be put to use for the pick-up, as I realize it is a necessary conservation.

Today In History

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

March 11, 1974

The Great New England Blizzard began 86 years ago today—in 1888. More than 200 ships were sunk, damaged or abandoned and nine lives were lost and their crews were lost at New York, ten miles offshore. Fifty inches of snow fell in Connecticut and western Massachusetts and drifts more than 50 feet high were reported in New Haven, Conn., and traffic throughout the region was blocked.

'Close Vote' Expects Union Spokesman

CGE Strike Goes to Ballot Tuesday

TRENTON — Trenton's 500 Canadian General Electric workers could be back to work this week if they and the 6,400 members of their province-wide union vote to accept a company offer Saturday.

It has been nearly four weeks since the Trenton workers walked off their jobs demanding $1.60 raise over two years and a variety of cost of living and benefit clauses.

The contract between company and union expired last September.

While workers questioned here expressed a desire to get back to work, the company's offer met with cool reaction from union members who met in the Canadian Legion hall here Sunday.

While union negotiators were successful in shrinking the contract term from three to two years, a major point of union interest negotiators settled for less than half the demanded wage increase.

Rather than the two 80 — cent raises across the board in two consecutive years, this latest company offer allows for 11 per cent and eight per cent.

The minimum this can mean to the workers here is 41 cents and 34 cents during the contract's term if approved Tuesday when workers across the province cast ballots on the company offer.

Gord Young, president of Local 509 United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers here, said "it will be a close vote," but refused to speculate on either the election outcome or current sentiment in the union.

While the company may have fallen short of the workers' pay expectations, Mr. Young outlines important victories in cost-of-living and vacation clauses.

Effective July 1, the company offers 10 cents hourly increase in lieu of a 1974 cost of living clause. The cost-of-living clause instead would be introduced in 1975 with a 20-cent maximum.

The cost-of-living increase provides for one-cent an hour increase for every half point rise in the consumer price index, says the company offer.

This offer, formulated over the past week and completed Saturday morning allows three weeks vacation after five years, replacing the previous six years, and four weeks after 15 years, rather than 16 years.

While addressing the membership, Mr. Young said the offer was the result of more than one all-night session and that one of the high points was the two-year duration of the contract.

"It gives us a chance to get back at the company sooner," he said.

"In the meantime," he added "keep that (picket) line strong until we know the outcome Tuesday night."

Votes will be tabulated in Toronto. Meantime at Barrie, 500 CGE workers accepted a local agreement Sunday, but remained off the job pending Tuesday's vote.

Woman Hurt In Crash

PICTON — A woman driver suffered face and chest injuries in a one-car crash in Cherry Valley, near here Saturday evening.

Provincial police said Ute ezr, driven by Beatrice Wood, slid on an ice patch and hit a tree.

Damage to the car was estimated at $1,000.

Charged After Burglary

TRENTON — A 19-year-old Trenton man has been charged with break-and-enter, following a police seizure of $100 in frozen foods and meat taken from Walker's Store, Dundas Street West.

Richard Rondeau, of 97 Willin Street, will appear in provincial court Wednesday.

The break-in occurred about 8 a.m. Sunday at Walker's Store, Dundas St. West.

Cuddle Cuts

Whether it's Vidal Sassoon in New York or Lawrence Iwasaki, hair fashions director of the National Canadian Hairdressers Association, hair news for spring is soft and romantic. Canadian hairdressers are calling it the cuddle look, softening classic lines with waves and curl clusters. Sassoon predicts much happiness if your hair is naturally curly or a trip to the hairdresser's for a permanent wave if it isn't. Soft and curly though the Canadian and Sassoon cuts may be, what they're not is cute. Dramatic is still the word.

Directly above, the Quiff, a new short cut by Sassoon, geometric in concept but softened with a flat "quiff" on the forehead. The back is buffered and follows the natural hairline. At left, another Sassoon, layered for fullness and cut to emphasize bone structure and head shape. As with all spring 74 styles, it's the cut that counts. Top left, another Canadian Hairdressers Association cuddle cut for spring, waves and a front flip soften the blunt cut.

At the top, a Canadian cuddle cut softened by a cluster of curl. Directly above, a naturally curly head is cut to shape and allowed to dry naturally. Brushing gives puff. Sassoon says this is one cut without an age barrier. It's reminiscent of Ann Miller.

Read Medicine Labels— Then Figure Them Out

CHICAGO (CP) — In a hoary old joke, a patient complains that his doctor has given him impossible instructions.

"He told me to take one pill three times a day," he says. "I can't do that."

The Journal of the American Medical Association says the mythical doctor has plenty of real-life counterparts.

For example, the label on a bottle of pills may read: "Take three times a day, with meals." Should the pills be taken before, after or in the middle of the meal?

It makes a difference, the magazine says. Some medications should be taken on a full stomach to cut down gastric irritation. Others are best taken on an empty stomach to facilitate absorption.

So the instructions should be more specific, such as : "Take 30 minutes before mealtimes."

Books By And About Women

FRIEDA LAWRENCE
By Robert Lucas
(Translated from the German by Geoffrey Skelton)

Frieda von Richthofen came from an old aristocratic German family. When she met D. H. Lawrence in 1912, she had been married to Ernest Weekley, an English professor, for almost thirteen years. She subsequently left her husband and three children to remain with Lawrence until his death in 1930.

This provocative woman will surprise and fascinate those who are familiar with D. H. Lawrence's writing. In his poetry and novels (such as Sons and Lovers and Lady Chatterley's Lover) he drew largely upon his own experience, of which Frieda was such an important part. But she was more than his inspiration; she was the means by which his literary talent was set free.

These memoirs of Frieda's life with D. H. Lawrence bring into focus their literary contemporaries — Katherine Mansfield, H. G. Wells, G. B. Shaw and Bertrand Russell — and their experiences in England, Mexico, Italy and France.

This biography is an important contribution to those interested in Lawrence, glad to those who want to know more about the woman whose love helped shape his life.

This book is available in the Corby Library.

Mom Smokes, Fetus Gasps

EDMONTON (CP) — Newborn babies of smoking mothers are several ounces lighter, have a 30-per-cent higher mortality rate and a slightly greater chance of suffering from congenital heart disease than those of non-smoking mothers, a British doctor said Thursday.

Dr. Neville Butler, who directed a study of the development of 17,000 babies born during one week in British, said the children of smoking mothers developed more slowly in their first 11 years than children from non-smoking parents. They did not read as well, were less advanced intellectually and were physically shorter.

"An individual mother who smokes has nine chances in 10 of having a healthy baby. The non-smoking mother has 19 chances in 20. That difference represents a lot of trouble."

Dr. Butler, professor of child health at the University of Bristol, said studies with ultrasound waves have shown the fetus goes through a gasping motion to get more oxygen while the mother is smoking.

Quinte Cuisine

When Elsie Whitmore had railroad boarders, Shepherd's Pie was a favorite with both the young men and her own husband Amos and children Marilyn and Murray. Mrs. Whitmore doesn't keep boarders anymore but the dish remains a favorite with her husband and in the homes of her now-grown children. A Corbyville area resident for 23 years, Mrs. Whitmore is secretary-treasurer of the Hastings East District of the Women's Institute and a Sunday School teacher.

Shepherd's Pie

8 medium potatoes, cooked
½ cup milk
one tbsp. chopped parsley
two tbsp. butter
one tsp. dry mustard
1½ lbs. ground beef
one egg
one cup soft bread crumbs
two tbsp. chopped onion one tbsp. salt
one tbsp. catsup
½ tsp. Worcestershire sauce
¼ tsp. sage or soya sauce one cup grated cheddar cheese
paprika
Mash potatoes (not with electric beaters) and add ½ cup milk, parsley, butter and dry mustard. Mash well and set aside. Combine remaining milk, ground beef, egg, bread crumbs, onion, catsup, salt, Worchestershire sauce and soya sauce. Spread half the meat mixture in the bottom of a 1½ quart casserole. Cover with half mashed potatoes, repeat. Top with grated cheese and sprinkle with paprika. Bake at 350 degrees for one hour until well browned. Mrs. Whitmore suggests serving with scalloped tomatoes and home made bread or crusty rolls.

Ann Landers

Mom-Get Help Now

Dear Ann Landers: Please print this letter. If it doesn't help my mom, maybe it will help someone else.

Dear Mom: I know you have a drinking problem, but I love you too much not am too weak, or too much of a coward to tell you I know. Life hasn't been easy for you and I understand why you turned to the bottle. I wish I knew what I could do to help you, but now that I have children of my own, I am busy with my family.

We want you around as long as possible Mom. When you go out at night by yourself, we worry. When I talk to you and then a little while later you don't remember anything you said, I am heartsick. It's happening more and more and it makes me realize the seriousness of the situation.

Get some help, Mom. Please admit you have a problem before it's too late. If you need me, I'm here. Just let me know. We all love you.—Your Daughter . . .

Dear Daughter: Here's your letter. And now a note to every mom who read it: Be aware the slightest twinge, the faintest shadow of a hint that maybe this letter was meant for you. Please look up Alcoholics Anonymous in the phone book and attend their next meeting. Better way of life is as close as your telephone.

Dear Ann Landers: Remember that fellow who set the world's finger-painting record and drew a crowd of more than 300 people? As I recall, you didn't think that was much of an accomplishment and a lot of readers got mad at you. Well, how do you like this one? A 30-year-old Italian hair stylist in Boston edged out a 21-year-old telephone operator in a speed-knitting contest.

There I was shovelled in the pasta for one solid hour and 60 minutes. The young woman washed down the boiled spaghetti (which she said she didn't care for) with red wine. Her opponent drank ice water. When she quit she said she wasn't really full yet but she was getting loaded on the wine.

The spaghetti-eating champ had won two other "firsts." He had eaten one pound of cheddar cheese in 4½ minutes and 36 pitted prunes in 40 minutes.

What do you think about such "stellar" achievements, Ann Landers?—Hollywood Witness

Dear Wit: I'm happy to say I don't have to think about them. To each his own.

Dear Ann Landers: I am 38, divorced and going with a married man. We have been seeing each other for three years. I lost my husband because of him. We are together almost every weekend and two or three evenings during the week.

Am I crazy or is he? This man is extremely successful in business, has a fairly attractive wife, a nice home and six good children. He says his wife is a wonderful mother (they have been married 26 years) but she is not interesting to him sexually or otherwise. He likes my company.

Why would a wife stand for her husband to be gone four or five evenings a week? He has to be telling some fantastic lies to get away with it. She must realize he has somebody else. Why doesn't she divorce him and give us a chance to have a decent life together? What do you see that I might have overlooked?—Mystified Mrs. Mc.

Dear Mrs.: I see (1) six children, (2) a wife who would rather have half a husband and (3) a man who probably doesn't want a divorce and has never brought up the subject.

Wife Should Have Her Own Will

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: How do you write a will? My Husband does not believe in wills, but I am concerned about things in my household that I would like to leave my children.

Can I write a will and dictate what's to be done with things in my home, even though technically they belong to both my husband and me? Does a will have to go through a lawyer?

—Making A Will.

Dear Making: Every wife and husband should have individual will. Not believing in wills is for the birds and may mean that your husband's wishes about anything he own will not be carried out when he dies.

You can buy a will form, fill it out and have your signature witnessed, and it's legal. But a lawyer knows snags and can help you to express things in legal terms. He can also help you provide for things which have not yet happened. He cares his fee.

You can will away items which were purchased by you with your own money, or given to you personally. But it's sometimes difficult to know where to draw the line and some question about what is "Your own money". Just one more reason why a lawyer will be worth what he costs to you.

Dear Doris: After my mother passed away I found in her purse a poem about "Cares". It was repeated at her funeral by the minister, but it and would like to know it some of your readers could have it among their collections.

It was just named "Cares"; and all that I remember of it is: "All my cares of yesterday I have left in the field with God".

Dear Cares: Our wonderful helper, the library, just can't turn it up; but maybe our other great helpers, our readers, can. When they do, it'll be coming along to you.

Dear Doris: My sister went with a guy for six years. The first time I met him, I fell in love with him. About a year ago, he moved away, although he said he still loved my sister.

Now my sister wants to go out with someone else, I want to write to her old boy friend and tell him that whenever he comes down here, he can come and see me. What do you think?

Just Wondering.

Dear Just Wondering: It can't do any harm. It may even make him feel better now that's he's lost your sister to someone else. But if he doesn't take the bait, let it go. Be discreet.

Confidential to Just A Housemaid: If you feel like just a housemaid in your own house, change the situation. Even a worm can turn. Each boy, each girl, should be given a part in keeping the establishment their home — going. Pop gets his share too.

I'm promising you, if you bring them in on it, the day will come when they will be proud of carrying their responsibility. Especially if you praise them; and even more so if you share fun and party times too.

Doris knows human behavior Doris Knows human behavior and can help. Write to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.)

'Guts and Muscle' Needed

WETASKIWIN, Alta. (CP) — Marty Moll's patients haven't balked at being transported by a female ambulance driver.

"I've never had a refusal from a scared man," said Mrs. Moll, a certified nursing aide at Wetaskiwin Municipal Hospital, who last December took over behind an ambulance steering wheel.

"In fact, there's one elderly man I've driven several times who says: 'You're damn good, Marty. I'll put my money on you anytime.'"

Mrs. Moll, who has a 21-year-old son, had driven the hospital's old station wagon ambulance several times when her considerable experience handling stretchers during her 15 years as nursing aide.

So when the hospital in this city of 40 miles south of Edmonton, needed a driver for its new ambulance, the director of nursing jokingly suggested she take the job.

The came to me when I was working in the suture-room and asked me if I believed in women's lib," Mrs. Moll said.

"I said I did in a certain extent, so away I went.

"It was no crusade. I wasn't trying to prove anything. I took it because the hospital needed help."

She sympathizes with women's demands for equal pay. She and the rest of the province's nursing aides are fighting for pay equality with male orderlies.

For her ambulance driving, Mrs. Moll receives the same remuneration as the four male staff members who also double as drivers.

As for opening the ambulance driving field to more women, she said not many women are "tall enough or strong enough to go over snowbanks and into ditches to pull someone out."

"But women can do it if they have the muscle power and the guts to take it. We get some pretty messy cases."

The muscle power comes naturally to Mrs. Moll, who grew up with seven brothers. However, if the hospital knows in advance that there will be a case called to move, then an orderly accompanies her on the trip.

Fund Lack Hampers Youth Help Centre

MONTREAL (CP)— All systems are "go" for Genie Ghost, a new kid-centre which wants to work with youth in the city and surrounding suburbs, but lack of funds may kill the project before it gets off the ground.

"The progress has been phenomenal," said Mark Compston-Hall, one of the centre's directors.

"We have a hospital to work with us for drug and alcohol problems, we have lawyers who specialize in civil rights and we have been given a suburban West Island to set up our operation."

The centre has been seeking funds from business groups but the response has been poor.

"The whole problem now is money." Mr. Compston-Hall said. "We just haven't enough."

He described Gentle Ghost as "a centre for human relations and resources."It provides an environment where youth can feel at ease and utilize opportunities in workshops, at summer picnics and at sensitivity training sessions with the staff.

"The atmosphere is conducive to people working together and for producing a conscious development of individual and group potential."

One of the aims of Gentle Ghost is to create a workshop where young people "with talent, but who don't know what to market their stuff," can work and sell their crafts at reasonable prices.

Mr. Compston-Hall said he has run into an "ostrich-like" reaction to the project from west island politicians "who don't want to realize there actually could use this sort of thing."

"It's time they woke up to the facts."

He accused Montrealers, especially middle-and upper-class suburbanites, of refusing to recognize that a serious problem of alienation between youth and parents exists.

He emphasized ,that Gentle Ghost is not just a drug-help centre but a "total life-development project."

"It's really frustrating . . . already we've spent $600 of our own money and I can see the whole thing materializing beautifully. But I have visions of just getting everything together and then seeing it fall through because of lack of money."

Fabrics, Foods Cost More Again

OTTAWA (CP) — Higher costs for textiles and foods — particularly sugar and grain—led an over-all 3.4-per-cent rise in wholesale prices in January, Statistics Canada reported Friday.

The increase brought the total wholesale price rise from a year earlier to 26.6 per cent, it said.

At the same time, Statistics Canada said, manufacturing selling prices rose 2.7 per cent in January and were 17.3 per cent above a year earlier.

The textile products group index rose 5.5 per cent," said the report on wholesale in January. "The rise was due to price increases for raw cotton, cotton fabrics and miscellaneous products," it added.

"Higher prices for sugar and its products and grains caused the vegetable products group to four per cent," the report continued. "The animal products group moved up 2.3 per cent . . . as prices increased for furs, livestock and fresh meat."

Over the month, selling products were up 52.3 per cent, animal products 21.9 per cent and, textile products 40.4 per cent, the report said.

Manufacturing selling prices for food and beverages were up 2.1 per cent for the month and 14.1 per cent for the year. The textile selling prices rose 4.3 per cent for the month and 39 per cent of the year, Statistics Canada said.

Japanese Officer Surrenders After 29 Years in Jungles

MANILA (AP) — Hiroo Onoda, a Second World War Japanese army officer who hid in the Philippine jungles for 29 years, presented his sword of surrender to President Ferdinand Marcos today.

In a televised ceremony at the presidential palace, Marcos gave the 52-year-old Japanese a full presidential pardon "for any claims or responsibilities during the war" and in the years since. The president told Onoda he was welcome to stay in the country.

However, plans were being made to fly Onoda to Tokyo Tuesday for a medical checkup.

Marcos also returned the sword to Onoda, who wore his old Imperial Army uniform.

Onoda, facing television cameras for the first time in his life, said: "From now on, I will try my best to contribute to the development of my country and the closer co-operation of the Philippines and Japan."

A helicopter brought the former Japanese intelligence officer to the presidential palace from Lubang Island, 70 miles southwest of Manila, where he surrendered Friday to his former commanding officer, Yoshimi Taniguchi, and the Philippine air force major, Maj.-Gen. Jose Rancudo, in the presence of Japanese Ambassador Toshio Urabe. The fugitive's older brother, Dr. Tsuda Onoda of Tokyo, was also present.

Dr. Onoda and Philippine air force doctors examined Onoda and found him physically fit.

Dr. Onoda said his brother apparently had been sick only twice, with the flu, in his years in the wilderness.

Onoda was one of four Japanese soldiers who refused to surrender on Lubang when Japan capitulated in 1945. Several searches were made for them during the years and twice Onoda was declared dead. One of the four surrendered, and another was killed in a clash with the Philippine army.

Another search for Onoda was launched last year after he and the other holdout ambushed a Philippine patrol. Onoda escaped, but his companion was killed. In February, a Japanese student, Norio Suzuki, made contact with Onoda on Lubang and last week Taniguchi joined the search to help persuade him to give up.

Onoda told reporters he did not surrender because he had no order to do so from his superior officers.

Onoda's parents, both in their 80s, burst into tears when told their son had been found. The Japanese government announced that he will receive a pension of $818 a year for 21 years and three months of military service.

No Pressure and No Payment Said CIA Information Policy

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Richard Helms, former director of the Central Intelligence Agency, has told senators he had a policy of going right to the top of United States business firms in seeking their cooperation in gathering intelligence overseas.

In closed-door testimony released Sunday by the Senate foreign relations committee, it was disclosed that Helms warned senators more than a year ago not to trust published reports from the oil industry.

Helms now is ambassador to Iran, a major oil producer. During a closed hearing on his nomination, held Feb. 7, 1973, Helms told Sen. J. Edgar Hoover, the late director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, cut off direct contact with the CIA in an apparent fit of pique.

Helms said the CIA did not pressure businessmen or others to pass on potentially useful information but may have obtained while visiting the Soviet Union or other countries.

"There is no payment of money. There is no effort to twist anyone's arm. We simply are giving them an opportunity as patriotic Americans to say what they know about this."

Answering questions about contacts with American business firms abroad, he said: "It has been my own feeling that one should start with the chief executive officer normally because it is not fair to these companies to set up a relationship with somebody down the line that the chief executive officer does not know about, or at least has not indicated that this other man is your point of contact."

An estimated 200 persons are operating as American intelligence agents under the guise of being businessmen, a recent press reports quoting an unnamed American official, but Helms said he was not with the inner workings of the CIA.

Helms, testifying more than a year ago when the oil shortage was just beginning, called for foreign relations committee that getting accurate information from oil companies about prices and future trends is "one of the hardest jobs we have."

He said he did not think published figures on oil reserves were accurate.

"I have reason to believe that, based on my recent efforts to learn about oil, these things are not that accurate."

He said Hoover withdrew the FBI's liaison officer from the CIA several years ago because he refused to order a CIA employee to tell which FBI agent in Denver, Colo., had given some information to the CIA.

Helms said: "Mr. Hoover could very well have—interpreted his own office and asked his own employees who had talked to a fellow from the CIA, but in any event he declined to do it. I stood my ground, as which point apparently in a fit of pique he simply said, 'Well, my liaison officer is not coming over to the CIA any more.'"

Common Market Faces One of Darkest Hours

BRUSSELS (CP) — The European Common Market is ending during possibly its darkest period of doubt and disarray since it was established 16 years ago.

A formidable catalogue of question marks hangs over the future of the Community, says George Thomson of Britain, one of the Market's commissioners.

He cited not only the uncertainties generated by the Labor party's assumption of power in Britain but also the world price inflation in basic commodities, the oil crisis, the latest blow to chances of Common Market monetary union dealt by France's floating of its currency and the increasingly disgruntled attitude of West Germany.

The new British government has reiterated that it will seek a fundamental renegotiation of Britain's terms of entry, voicing special worry about possible further food price increases resulting from the Market's farm policy.

Yet, despite repeated failure of the Market's nine member states to agree on major issues, Market headquarters officials and Canadian and other foreign representatives here believe it will survive the current turmoil.

One Canadian expert suggested that only the excessively optimistic pro-Marketeers of a few years ago are giving way to total gloom.

The Market's pioneers were made of different stuff. The late Robert Schuman, for instance, heralded the 1952 establishment of the European Coal and Steel Community as forerunner of the existing Common Market—with a statement, as French foreign minister, that Europe will not be built all at once or through a single comprehensive plan.

Later, after the original six members of the European Community formed a customs union, a succession of crises developed, stirred mainly by the late president Charles de Gaulle's veto of British entry.

Commenting on the current disarray, a Common Market spokesman argued that it would be extremely difficult to do without the organization. Business and industry have built a huge network of contacts based on the Market's continued operation.

George Thomson maintains that even if the Labor government does take Britain out of the Market, the Market will survive.

The forces promoting solidarity are stronger than those promoting division, says Thomson, a former Labor minister.

Market membership continues to be an explosive issue in Britain but rampant dissatisfaction with the Market can also be found in West Germany.

A new generation of Germans is reported to feel that West Germany has made enough financial sacrifices for the benefit of such other Market countries as France—all in the guise of redeeming the damage done to Europe by the wartime Nazis.

Things you should know about starting a small business

Almost everyone dreams of owning his or her own business at one time or another. Those who decide to take the plunge frequently have their business fail. Statistics show that 70 percent of all new businesses fail within the first five years.

Business Tips

With so many new businesses failing, it is wise to learn as much as you can before launching your business. Top independent businessmen offer the following tips:

- Keep your overhead low.
- Know your market.
- Know how to attract new business.
- Make sure you have provided for the fringe benefits you lose with your former job (i.e. accident, hospital insurance, etc.)
- Maintain a proper set of records.
- Develop a method for collecting bills.
- Set up medical insurance and disability insurance programs for yourself and employees.
- Make provision for retirement income for yourself and employees.
- Unless you have plenty of money, avoid putting a lot of money into fixed assets such as desks, cars, trucks and typewriters.
- Compare the costs of leasing against owning.

If you are considering starting a small business, it is always a good idea to consult a lawyer. He can advise you whether you should undertake a sole proprietorship, a partnership or become incorporated either federally or under Provincial regulations administered by the Companies Division, Ontario Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations. A qualified accountant is also familiar with various laws involved, including relevant tax considerations, and can help in organizing the financial aspect of the business including setting up your books correctly.

Sole Proprietorship

This is the simplest way of operating a business in Ontario. A sole proprietorship enables you to enter into business with the minimum of legal formalities subject, of course, to licences that may apply to specific types of activities such as the selling of firearms or gasoline. Many municipalities require that you pay a business tax.

In a sole proprietorship you, as the owner, have sole responsibility for the operation of the business. If the business fails, you must assume total liability. You could lose your home and all personal possessions.

If, as a sole proprietor, you wish to carry on a business under a name other than your own, you must register the name with your local Registry Office in the community in which you are doing business. This also applies when you want to add "and Company" after your name. A registration fee is required.

Partnerships

Entering into a partnership is a slightly more complicated way of starting a business in Ontario and usually involves the partners entering into a Partnership Agreement dealing with capital distribution, division of profits and rights of management. It is advisable to have a lawyer draw up the agreement. When entering into a partnership it is necessary that you and your partners sign a declaration giving names, addresses and company name. This must be filed with the local Registry Office in the community where the business will be carried on within 60 days of the formation of the partnership. Forms are available from your local Registry Office. A registration fee is required.

Bobcats Make It To Group Final

By MIKE BRADSHAW
Sports Staff

The Belleville Bobcats have done it again!

Sunday night, at the Memorial Arena, the Cats defeated the Pickering Panthers 4-3, before over 1700 fans, to take their best of seven semi-final series 4-1 and move into the Metro Junior B League finals.

Last year the Bobcats entered the Metro finals, but were beaten out in seven games.

"What a great victory," said Cat coach Mac Hunter. "It sure is a relief to know we don't have to face them in Pickering for a seventh game. I had visions of another Young Nats series for a while."

The Nats were the team that beat the Bobcats in last year's league finals.

"When Richardson scored that goal I saw the whole season flipped in front my eyes," said Pickering coach, Sherry Bassin.

"If they continue to get the defence and the goaltending they've got, they have a shot," coach, "they'll take all-Ontario."

"That's what really decided the game," said Bassin. "their defence is superb. Those four defencemen know their game and play them like a well."

All through the Pickering series, the Cats defence proved to be their strongest and most consistent asset.

Dave Taylor, Vern Arney, Phil Gaserd and John Yohn make up the Bobcats defensive corps and last night they played as well if not better than they had throughout the six game series.

John Yohn, who came back to the Cats mid-season, not only played well defensively, but also scored one of the locals goals and helped set up the winner.

The Cats blueliners were definitely the controlling factor in the series. They knocked Pickering attackers off the puck, blocked countless shots throughout the six games and most of all never gave the Pickering forwards room to score on rebounds. Whenever an opposition player stood in front of the Bobcat goal, the defencemen were right there to cover them.

It was almost as if the four-some defied the Panthers to stand in the goal mouth area.

Rob Duncan, whom the Cats picked up after Bruce Clark's minor concussion a week ago, picked up-there of Belleville's four victories allowing just 11 goals in the four games. Bob Moore earned the other win.

"When they tied the game up in the third period," said Duncan, "I felt sick. It was a sloppy goal and they never should have scored it. This team has got the talent to go all the way. They came back after Pickering's tying goal and they were ready for to win it."

Duncan had the easiest night in the Cats goal since he started playing. Belleville outshot Pickering 40-29, marking only the second time in six games the locals have had the edge in the shooting department.

The contest was the roughest in the series with 25 penalties handed out. Belleville took 13 of the 25.

"Unfortunately for Pickering, it was their 13th that beat them.

The 25th penalty of the game, Pickering's, was called by referee Ron Finn after the third period. The previous one were all in the first 46 minutes.

At 15:27 of the third period the Panthers' Chuck Durocher was penalized for tripping Yohn.

At 16:38 Jim Richardson scored on the power play to break a 2-2 tie. "Timmy (Yohn) threw the puck to Don Grant (Goegan) in the corner and I saw Gogey (Goegan) tryine to dig it out, against a Pickering player," recollected Richardson. "Grant banged the puck out of the corner around the boards behind the net to me. I skated across and picked it up. When I started to come around in front of the goal Hank Bothfield came in to check me. Mark Coates was in front of the net so I faked a pass to his slot Bothfield went for it. Then I just turned and banged the puck in between the legs of their goalie."

"Bruce Clark should get an assist on the goal," said Richardson, "before the power play started I called him down to the bench and asked him how he thought we could score. He told me that Jack as Pilon (Panthers goalie) gets ready to make a save he opens his pads a little. So, I said I had the chance-I ganged it between his legs."

The Bobcats held a slight edge in play in the first period outshooting the Panthers 1-10.

Both teams had good scoring opportunities, but the goalies, Duncan and Pilon, came up with great saves to keep the shots out.

Pilon did miss on one occasion however, as Mark Coates tallied on a first period power play to give the Bobcats a 1-0 lead in front 1-0. Goegan and John Sergeant assisted.

Coates set out the last game in Pickering under doctor's orders. Mark suffered a badly bruised shoulder Saturday night and his physician recommended he not play until he was equipped with a special pad. Belleville management kept the injury a secret explaining that Coates "had a stomach virus."

The Panthers tied the game up at 7:00 in the second period when Jim Richardson scored on a good pass play from Chuck Wells and Barry Tobin.

Belleville resumed the lead at 8:50 on another power play. Yohn fired a shot past Pilon with assists going to Brian Cousins and Goegan.

There were two fights in the second period and both times Belleville players came out on top. Vern Arney was the first bout, sending Bothfield to the penalty box for the remainder of the period. Dave Taylor and Pickering took the second fight, deciding Pickering's Ron Davidson with one punch. Davidson was sent out for the rest of the game.

Belleville had control of the game and the scoring opportunities during the second 20 minutes but were shut on goal indicated. The Cats outshot the Panthers 16-12.

At one point in the second however, the Panthers held a two man advantage, but because of the defence and Duncan Pickering was kept from scoring.

Pickering tied the score at 3-2 at the 13:56 mark of the third period when Gary Murphy took a pass from Jim Soetzinger and fired a low shot into the wide side of the goal.

Three minutes later, Richardson scored the winner.

With the Panthers goalie pulled, in favor of a ninth attacker, Yohn lifted the puck down the ice and into the open net with four seconds remaining to put the game on ice. Arney received the assist on that goal.

The Bobcats will have a week for the finals because until a winner of the second semi-final series between Markham and Bramalea has been decided.

Bassin Praises Cats

"That defence of theirs is really something else," said Pickering's Sherry Bassin, "they're really a credit to their coach. Sherry Bassin, "they're really a credit to their coach. Such a defencemen could do against us."

Bassin commented on the why's of his team's series loss to the Bobcats.

"They came at us with a strong forechecking attack in the second game," observed Sherry, "and we had two men too our zone after the puck. Kept our zone clear blue line and held their defencemen back until they gained control of the puck. Then they sent their third forward in."

"We knew how to beat that, though. All we had to do was have one of our wingers or defencemen dig the puck out and pass it to our mantle the middle. The middle was always open. We would have had to rush the pass because of the forechecking but we still got it set up."

"We just couldn't do anything about their defencemen. They were strong and broke up our plays at the blueline almost everytime we came down. They hit hard, took us out of plays and made sure we stayed out."

"Rob Duncan did a great job for Belleville," said Sherry, "when they picked him up I was hoping it would create a little dissent among the players, but I guess the Cats are too close a team to be split up by that."

"Rob came up with the kind of saves that pick a team up and they have been playing as a game around. He's one good goalie."

"We're used to scoring our goals from the slot, but there was a lot of traffic and screen stand in front of that net and got a shot away."

Statistics of five added Sasala, "that 41 per cent of all goals scored in the NHL are scored on deflections or rebounds. The rebounds that I was referring to (off the goalie) wasn't covering the defencemen were either clearing the rebounds in front of that, if the defencemen weren't covering the rebounds they were covering us so well we couldn't do anything."

"Whenever the defencemen checked us off the puck he would pass into his corner and pass it behind the net to the other defencemen. We knew they were doing that so we set up a play to counteract it. After the defencemen we were neutralizing that play they started carrying the puck around themselves. We could beat them," said Bassin, "we just couldn't beat their defence."

Can Flyers Go All the Way?

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

There's a growing conviction among armchair analysts of the National Hockey League that the Stanley Cup may come to rest in Philadelphia this season—Boston Bruins and Montreal Canadiens notwithstanding.

The Flyers reinforced that appraisal by winning back-to-back road games on the weekend to expand their lead in the East Division to seven points over Chicago Black Hawks.

Philadelphia defeated Buffalo Sabres 4-3 Sunday afternoon, after nipping Detroit Monday 4-3. Leafs 2-1 Saturday night.

Meanwhile, the defending champion Canadiens, who have suffered some incredible losses recently, recovered some of their poise by upping Pittsburgh Penguins 5-4 Sunday after defeating New York Rangers 4-2 Saturday night.

Boston Bruins gained only a single point on their trip to the West Coast, being upset 4-3 by the lowly California Seals Sunday, after settling for a 4-4 tie Saturday against Los Angeles Kings.

In other games Sunday, the Rangers defeated New York Islanders 4-2, Atlanta Flames shut out Detroit Red Wings 4-0 and Minnesota North Stars thumped St. Louis Blues 6-1.

In other games Saturday, Vancouver Canucks tied the Hawks 4-4, the Wings defeated the Islanders 3-1 and the Penguins downed the Blues 7-5.

NO GAMES TONIGHT

The league is idle tonight, but Tuesday Toronto visits St. Louis, Philadelphia Flyers meet the Islanders, Buffalo is at Boston and Detroit goes to Vancouver.

Although Philadelphia has won five games in a row, coach Fred Shero doesn't believe in relaxing.

"We have a seven-point lead but we aren't resting. We have eight-point lead once before and we lost it," he said.

He conceded, however, that the Flyers have jelled into a good team.

"We're down in the standings, but the guys are really hustling," said Sharks coach Jerry Slater. Ron Garwasiuk missed on a penalty shot that might have given another goal to the Sharks last-place Western Division team.

Cleveland 3 at Toronto 8 . . .

Toronto Toros moved to within five points of the leading New England Whalers in the East Division, paced by the two-goal and two-assists effort of rookie left-winger Pat Hickey.

"Instead of trying settle for second place we're going to give it a shot for first spot," Hickey said. "Seven of our nine remaining games are on home ice and that's a big plus for us." However, at least three of those games are scheduled for Ottawa.

New Jersey 2 at Quebec 5 . . .

Andre Lacroix scored twice for Quebec, including the tie-breaking goal early in the third period. His second one, 11 minutes later, provided insurance for the Nordiques, who took third place in the East, two points ahead of the Cruisers and only three behind the Toros. Bob Jones accounted for Nanking Wakim, who had both of the Knights' goals.

Minnesota 2 at Los Angeles 6 . . .

The second-place Saints had lost only three and tied one in their last 21 games, while the since Feb. 12 and boasted the WHA's hottest goalie in Mike Walton, but the Sharks pulled to leads of 2-0, 4-3 and 6-4 while blanking Wakim, who had both of the Knights' goals.

Hawks Extend Streak By Topping Rangers

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Kitchener Rangers and St. Catharines Black Hawks both put impressive win strings on the line in their Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A game Sunday with the latter intent on keeping with their mark intact.

The Black Hawks gained a 4-1 decision and moved to within five points of the first-place Rangers with two weeks of play remaining in the regular season.

The win was the Black Hawks's 23rd consecutive at home while the loss was Kitchener's first in its last nine games and only the third during the 1974 portion of the schedule.

The two teams meet again in Kitchener Friday.

Dave Schinkel, Kevin Kenney, Will Palmer and Gary McAdam scored for St. Catharines. McAdam's was into an empty net after Kitchener coach Eddie Bush had pulled goaltender Don Edwards in the last minute of play for an extra attacker.

Rich Bourbonnais scored for Kitchener which was outshot 38-31 before St. Catharines's first setback crowd of 2,644 this season.

In other games, Oshawa Generals downed the slumping Peterborough Petes 7-2, Toronto Marlboros downed Kingston Canadiens 7-4, London Knights stopped Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds 6-4 and Ottawa 67's dumped Hamilton Red Wings 5-2.

Action resumes Tuesday with the Generals and Petes learning again in Peterborough, Toronto at Ottawa and London playing host to Hamilton.

Generals 7 Petes 2

Larry Hopkins scored twice and assisted on two others in his first game since returning to the Generals from University of Toronto Blues of the Ontario Universities Athletic Association. Paul Heaver, Rick Preger, Bill Lochead, Rod Stafford and Dean Neuman got the other goals for Oshawa which outshot Peterborough 36-30.

Jim Tyrchewicz, Tom Gastle and Red Laurence replied for Peterborough which trailed 3-1 after the first period and 4-3 entering the third period. Oshawa outscored it goals in his last three games.

George Morrison's goal for Morrisville with less than three minutes remaining set the final score to 6-5, but Los Angeles seemed to be in command all the way.

"We're down in the standings, but the guys are really hustling," said Sharks coach Jerry Slater. Ron Garwasiuk missed on a penalty shot that might have given another goal to the Sharks last-place Western Division team.

Blazers Have Oilers Number

By THE CANADIAN PRESS.

If officials of Edmonton Oilers wonder why their team is struggling to stay out of fourth place in the West Division of the World Hockey Association they need look no further than Vancouver.

The Oilers saw the Blazers end a nine-game losing streak Sunday night with a 3-1 overtime victory before 4,499 Edmonton fans. It was Vancouver's sixth triumph in nine meetings with Edmonton.

Pete Donnelly provided excellent goaltending and Murray Myers scored the winning goal at 1:32 of the extra period to slide the Oilers, who remained in a tie for third place with Winnipeg Jets, who were idle.

In other matches Sunday, Los Angeles Sharks stopped Minnesota Fighting Saints 6-5, Toronto Toros whipped Cleveland Crusaders 8-3 and Quebec Nordiques toppled New Jersey Knights 5-2.

On Saturday, the Saints defeated the Nordiques 9-5, Houston Aeros downed the Toros 4-2 and Chicago Cougars edged the Jets 5-4.

Minnesota 2 at Los Angeles 6 . . .

The second-place Saints had lost only three and tied one in their last 21 games, while the since Feb. 12 and boasted the WHA's hottest goalie in Mike Walton, but the Sharks pulled to leads of 2-0, 4-3 and 6-4 while blanking Wakim, who had both of the Knights' goals.

Beavers Shade Dynamos

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Sherbrooke Beavers have won more than they've lost and Shawinigan Dynamos have lost more than they've won in Quebec Major Junior A Hockey League play this season. The reason was evident Sunday night.

The Dynamos had the Beavers down 3-0 by the 8:15 mark of the second period on goals by Gabriel Jourdain, Jean-Paul Bisaillon and Jean Savard, but Dwane Byers' goal at 5:31 of overtime sent the game, and the night, was the one that gave Sherbrooke a 5-4 victory.

In other games, the winners had easier times. Sorel Black Hawks rolled over Drummondville Rangers 9-2, Cornwall Royals outscored Laval Nationale 11-4 and Montreal Juniors downed Chicoutimi Sagueneens 8-2.

Daniel Martel, Byers and Sidney Vervey led the Beavers against Shawinigan at 3-3 and, even after Jourdain had put the Dynamos back on top with less than nine minutes remaining in regulation time, the Beavers rallied.

Martel's second goal of the game, at 15:26 of the third period, forced the contest before 2,461 fans at Sherbrooke.

The comeback victory gave the Beavers a 32-22-2 record against 28 losses and a tie, while the Dynamos dropped to 20-33-3.

Bob Geoffrion scored three times for Sorel, including the game winner at 5:40 of the first period and 4-3 entering the third period.

Marlboros 7 Canadiens 4

Mike O'Connell led Kingston with two goals, Gret Hicks and John Fielding got the others.

Knights 6 Greyhounds 4

Rick Martin fired three goals for London who outshot Sault Ste. Marie 40-26. Jim Pritchard added a pair with Max Carter getting the other.

Hounds 7 . . .

Derek Smith, Tom Price, Dale Rose, Tom McDonnell, Larry Jacques and Tim Young scored for Ottawa which trailed 3-0 early in the game.

Mark Evans and Mike Nouskas replied for the Wings who suffered their 45th loss of the season in 64 starts.

Raiders Out Kings are In

PEMBROKE (CP) — Pembroke Lumber Kings wrapped up their Central Junior Hockey League semi-final playoff with Nepean Raiders Sunday night with a 10-3 victory to take the best-of-seven series 4-2.

After outscoring the opening game, then losing the next three, Nepean forced the Sunday game by taking a 3-2 victory in the second sudden-death overtime Saturday in Nepean.

But there was no chance for a repeat Sunday as the Kings raced ahead 2-1 in the first period and 8-3 in the second.

Now they go on to the league final, starting Tuesday, against the Cornwall Royals in Search Smiths Falls. Second game of the best-of-seven set will be here Thursday.

Terry Wcermke scored three times and Peter Pallister twice to set the winning pace Sunday as the Kings outshot the Raiders 43-28.

Steve Croucher, Steve Wasnie, Keith Trodd, Randy Burman and Tim Harrington added single goals.

Chatham Two Points From Final

By THE CANADIAN PRESS.

Chatham Maroons moved to within two points of clinching a berth in the Southern Ontario Junior Hockey League final with a victory Sunday over Welland Sabres, after a 6-4 loss Saturday to the Sabres.

In Chatham Sunday, the Maroons 3-2 win gave them a 6-5 point edge in the eight-point series. Mike Houston and Bob Spizzirro for the league champions. The next game will be played Tuesday in Welland.

Doug Simpson led Chatham with two goals. Rick Stickney, Peter Yaciuk and Rick Evans got the others.

Jim McCabe and Randy Montgomery replied for Welland.

Chatham's Gerry Portelance was involved in two second-period fights with Mike Houston and Dave DeGeiss. He was assessed two major penalties and an automatic game misconduct.

On Saturday in Welland, the Sabres used five powerplay goals to beat Chatham 6-4 before 1,800 fans.

Ian Campbell, Bert Fournier, Scott McGeoghegan and Houston scored for Chatham which outshot Welland 39-35.

The Sabres led 2-1 after the first period and 5-2 after 40 minutes.

Buddy Hangs on To Win

MIAMI (AP) — "It was an unexpected pleasure," Buddy Allin said.

"I was just trying to hang in there and make a golf shot. I didn't think I had any chance of winning."

But, one by one, some of pro golf's great players fell victim to the waters, woods and woes of the 7,065-yard course at the Doral Country Club, and the unheralded Allin emerged victor of the Doral-Eastern Open golf tournament Sunday.

Allin had a final round 67 and his 272 total was 16-under-par good enough for the crown.

Jerry Heard finished second with a 66—272. He lost his last chance when he sliced his drive into the gallery on the 18th fairway, hit a woman spectator in the head and bogeyed the hole.

Bruce Devlin, tied for the lead a couple of times in the scramble down the stretch, fell back with a bogey from a bunker on the 17th, had a 71 and tied for third with countryman Bruce Crampton at 274. Crampton made a 68.

Next came Bert Yancey, who had a 69, and Tom Weiskopf tied at 275.

Canada's Skaters Setting Sights On Next Year

MUNICH (CP) — All world figure skating crowns went to East Europeans at this year's championships, but Canadians have hopes for next year—at least in men's singles.

Jan Hoffmann of East Germany won the men's title and bronze medallist Toller Cranston of Toronto gave notice that it's not impossible to beat the champion by soundly whipping Hoffmann in free skating.

He says he'll do extra work on his figures, where he must improve. This year he was eighth in figures and undoubtedly would be world champion now had he been a few places higher.

The 24-year-old Toronto artist left a tremendous impression with the judges, an important factor in any skater's success, and also was a smash with the crowd.

Don Jackson, former world champion now living in Toronto, said after figures he didn't think Cranston had a chance of getting into the top three.

"But after his short program where he electrified the audience I thought he had it there was a good chance he could make the top three."

Sergei Volkov of the Soviet Union won the short program, but again "Cran" was in the same class as Toller as a free skater," said Jackson.

Ron Shaver of Cambridge, Ont., seventh after figures and fifth over-all, finished second to Cranston in free skating and is expected to be a medal contender next year if his figures improve.

Christine Errath of East Germany won the women's title with Dorothy Hamill of the United States second and Dianna de Leeuw of the Netherlands was third.

Lyun Nightingale finished sixth after being 12th in figures and Barbara Terpenning finished 13th.

For Miss Nightingale it was a triumph because "I made so many mistakes I couldn't possibly make them all again in one competition."

"I'm aiming for third next year and expect to see them," she said after her free skate on Saturday.

In her four minute program, the Ottawa girl missed her double axel three times—and it's considered her strongest jump. She landed the easy triple of the women's competition, a triple salchow.

"When I go home people will congratulate me and say 'I skated well,' said the pretty 17 year-old. "But I don't remember raising because I know I didn't."

Miss Terpenning, 17, of North Vancouver, B.C., finished 13th, a creditable by-all-in the first world competition.

In her free program she fell heavily attempting a double axel and said along the ice on her stomach. She recovered well, but obviously was hurt.

Her incident took some of the gloss off Miss Errath's win. The crowd booed and hissed the scores for Gertl-Schanderl—she was fourth over-all—for so long that the next skater, Julia Hamill had to leave the ice because she couldn't hear her music. She broke down and wept before returning.

Irina Rodnina and Alex Zaitsev won the pairs with Ludmila Smirnova and Alexei Ulanov second.

Two East German couples were third and fourth. Romy Kermer and Rolf Osterrich took the bronze medal and Manuela Gross and Uwe Kagelmann were fourth.

Sandra and Val Bezic finished fifth. The Toronto brother-sister team say they are burning with ideas to improve their skating and feel confident they can move up next year.

Kathy Hotchkiss and Jamie Berridge of Cambridge, Ont., were 18th and last in pairs. They were in the novice Canadian championships just two years ago and their move into the big league has been meteoric.

Dancing remained the almost exclusive realm of the Russians. Ludmila Pakhomova and Alexander Gorshkov won the title without much competition and said they will be around for the 1976 Olympics. The win was a record fifth championship.

Hilary Green and Glyn Watts of England were second with Natalya Linichuk and Gennadi Karponosov third. Another Russian couple, Irina Moisseyeva and Andrei Minenkov, were fourth.

Judie and Barry Soper of West Vancouver were ninth for the third year in a row and are considering retirement from competition.

Jackson, the world champion in 1962, said about next year:

"It looks very exciting. It's hard to be a champion, but it's not impossible. To beat a champion you have to be that much better, well I think Hamill of the U.S. and Cranston are just that much better. They will, though, have to do better in school figures.

"Nightingale showed she has the potential to be one of the greatest. I wouldn't be surprised to see her in the medals next year.

"The Russians are strong in the dance and the pairs, but the Benics are coming along and they have to watch them closely. They could well be medal contenders."

Twelve Perish In Dublin Fire

DUBLIN (AP) — A newsstand operator, his pregnant wife and 10 of their 13 children were burned to death in a fire that destroyed their Dublin home early today.

The three surviving children, a 19-year-old girl and two younger brothers, are in hospital with burns.

Firemen said it was the heaviest fire toll in Dublin that they could remember.

The dead couple were Mr. and Mrs. Derek Howard, in their late 30s. Howard ran a newsstand at the Dalkey railway station. The children who died ranged in age from one year to 15.

Neighbors said they were awakened by screams from the burning two-storey house and saw some of the family trying to escape. Neighbors tried to get into the house, but the smoke, flames and intense heat drove them back.

The house was completely engulfed in flames, Mrs. Kelly said.

"I shouted to her to throw the children out of the bedroom window, but she gave one last frantic scream and I heard no more."

Would Have Marriage Rank As Economic Partnership

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says an Ontario law reform commission report calling for sweeping changes in family law recommends that marriage be viewed as economic partnerships shared equally by husbands and wives.

The newspaper says the report, which includes 288 recommendations for changes in legislation, will be tabled in the legislature today by Attorney-General Robert Welch.

The Globe and Mail says the three-volume 561-page report also recommends:

—abolition of all legislative discrimination between children born in and outside a marriage.

—equal distribution between husbands and wives of all property, including the marital home, and joint bank accounts when the marriage dissolves.

—the appointment of a new court official, to be called a law guardian, to act for the interests of children affected by divorce cases.

—the establishment of a unified family court to deal with all family law matters and matters presently monopolized by the federal government as well as the provision to cope with the l o n g-standing constitutional problem of split legislative jurisdiction.

—setting up support services for family courts such as family counselling, conciliation and assessment branches and specialized probation services.

The newspaper says the commission describes its proposals for changes in property law as "a radical departure from existing principals" which, if adopted, would reform the law to fit the contemporary role women play in Ontario society.

Until changes are made, the commission says, Ontario wives will continue to be disadvantaged by "law based on old behavioral patterns and assumptions."

The Globe and Mail says the commission recommends a procedure" at the end of a marriage to determine assets and debts, and that "each spouse should be entitled to one-half of the total financial product," regardless of ownership.

During the accounting procedure, any unpaid debts incurred for the support of children or the mutual support of both spouses would be shared by husband and wife.

The newspaper says the commission also recommends that money or property be the current year to equalize the benefits flowing from the end of a marriage, that enforcement of claims be similar to collection of any other debt and the debtor-spouse be allowed to pay the debt by installments with interest over a term not exceeding 10 years.

Lewis Wants Gray Ousted from Post

TORONTO (CP) — New Democrat Party leader David Lewis urged the federal government Saturday to replace Herb Gray, minister of consumer and corporate affairs, for failing to act effectively to curb cost-of-living in cases.

He told the provincial council of Ontario New Democrats if this is not done it will be evident that the Trudeau government is at a loss to find ways to protect the Canadian consumer.

In a wide-ranging speech on inflation and the cost of living, the NDP leader also urged replacement of Beryl Plumptre, chairman of the food prices review board.

The ministry designed to protect consumers is "headed by a man who is obviously lost in the situation," he said.

"And the food prices review board chairman follows him wherever he doesn't know he's going."

Finally these two posts with persons who are "dynamic and alive" in an organizational step the government can take to reduce the increasing rate in the cost of living, he said.

Mr. Lewis again charged that some large corporations are making excessive profits and said a government agency should be set up to review price increases.

Government Will Face Two Weeks' Challenges

OTTAWA (CP) — When the eight-day throne speech ends tonight, the minority Liberal government will face more than two weeks of challenges.

Before the end of the fiscal supply period, Tuesday, March 26, parliamentary rules require seven days of debate on subjects chosen by the opposition parties, Tory or NDP.

Government House Leader Allan MacEachen said last week that Tuesday and Friday will be opposition days, leaving five more to be allotted in the last seven days of the supply period. Both were reintroduced Friday.

There was no indication which parties would speak on what issues on the two opposition days this week.

The rest of this week is expected to be used to deal with two bills left over from the last session of Parliament.

Those are the annual CNR financing bill and a Senate bill to create more national parks. Both were reintroduced Friday.

NDP Wants Tax On Ore Reserves

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario New Democratic Party will press for a 15-per-cent tax on mining production and a 10-cents-a-ton tax on proved mineral reserves in the province, Stephen Lewis said Sunday.

The provincial leader told the party's provincial council the taxes would provide an additional $300 million in provincial revenues which could be used to finance social problems and shift the burden of taxation from families.

He predicted in an interview that the government will introduce measures to increase revenues from mines but will move "very, very carefully."

Similar axes had been applied by NDP governments in British Columbia, Manitoba and Saskatchewan with no loss of jobs or production.

Mr. Lewis made public figures which show that industrial profits have increased profits 2,106 per cent in the fourth quarter of 1973, compared with the similar period in 1972.

Also in that time, base metal producers increased their profits 555 per cent, he said.

For the whole of 1973, industrial mines increased profits 559 per cent and base metals 191 per cent, the figures showed.

Mr. Lewis said that the Ontario Mining Association has not been able to dispute these figures because they have never made a study of mining profits.

"I think the figures are dead on," he said.

Landlord Offers Aid

TORONTO (CP) — The landlord of a downtown rooming house where five people died Friday in afire has offered the surviving tenants new quarters and compensation for lost possessions.

"And I will accommodate everyone if they want," said John McEwen, 57, who operates "a couple" of other houses.

"I've been made to look like a slum landlord," he said. "This will show what kind of landlord I am. I'm going to be more than fair."

Investigators by police and the Ontario fire marshal's office continue.

Graham Emslie, city development director, said Sunday the city was not aware the dwelling was being operated as a rooming house, and so no inspectors were sent to check its fire precautions.

No one registered the building as a rooming house "and nobody was constrained to by present law," Mr. Emslie said.

Immigrant Women Said Exploited

TORONTO (CP) — Feminists should take a greater interest in the plight of immigrant women in the labor force who are subjected to double exploitation, Micheline Parent, a union organizer for textile workers, said Sunday.

Miss Parent told delegates to the International Women's Day meeting that wages in modern sweat shops.

"If you look in our knitting plants, you'll find their wages perilously close to the minimum," she said.

She also criticized Canada's immigration policy, which admits only skilled workers. She said it is the tendency to first consider the male breadwinner and allow the woman into the country only when her husband's skill is desirable.

If they have no profession, single women are admitted for domestic service or for low-grade jobs in the service industry.

Locomotive Deal May Be Made Soon

MONTREAL (CP) — Enrique Martinez Nos, head of the Cuban trade commission, says his government hopes to finish negotiations shortly for the purchase of 25 locomotives from MLW-Worthington Ltd. of Montreal.

"The company is ready to sell," he said in an interview.

The proposed sale has been a centre of controversy because MLW-Worthington is 52-per-cent owned by Studebaker-Worthington Inc. of New Jersey and under the United States Trading With the Enemy Act American companies or their foreign-based subsidiaries are prohibited from trading with Cuba.

At a news conference Friday, R. L. Grassby, president of MLW-Worthington, said company expects no interference from the U.S. government despite the legislation.

Mr. Grassby said the sale value of the 1,400-horsepower locomotives would total about $12 million to $14 million, not $18 million as earlier reported.

He said the sale to Cuba is still not assured because there is still competition for the sale from other countries.

Alastair Gillespie, federal trade minister, has promised early legislative action to prevent U.S. intervention in future export sales.

Boy Charged With Arson

GERALDTON, ONT. (CP) — A charge of arson has been laid against a 16-year-old boy after a weekend fire struck the high school in this northwestern Ontario town.

No one was injured in the fire, which caused extensive damage to the school gymnasium and smoke damage to other parts of the building.

The volunteer fire brigade was called out at 1:25 a.m. Saturday and fought the blaze for two hours.

No further details were available.

Geraldton is about 120 miles northeast of Thunder Bay.

WINTER WILLOWS

In winter conditions, willows are easily recognized by their buds which are flattened and each covered by a single scale.

Old Town Hall Is Said in Peril

COBOURG, Ont. (CP) — The 114-year-old town hall in this community about 75 miles south of Peterborough is in jeopardy of falling to the wrecker unless $250,000 in cash is raised in the next 60 days, John Taylor, a Toronto artist who heads a national fund-raising campaign aimed at saving the 1860 structure, says about $300,000 in pledges cannot be realized until 1975 or 1976.

Millhaven Guards Now on Job

KINGSTON (CP) — Guards at nearby Millhaven penitentiary, some of whom had been booking off sick since Thursday in a protest over working conditions, were back at their normal duties Saturday.

A spokesman for the Public Service Alliance, which bargains for the guards in labor disputes, said other personnel at the penitentiary were making the problems of those who did not report for work Thursday and Friday.

The guards were protesting, among other things, what they termed "severe lack of communication with the prison administration and the extended powers given to a recently-formed prisoner committee.

They said prisoners detained two guards in a room Feb. 28 as a result of an administrative blunder.

John Maloney, regional director of penitentiaries, confirmed that the incident had occurred and that the guards laid some charges against the prisoners involved in "fully incidents."

However, he said the prisoners were cleared of the charges because of insufficient evidence at a subsequent hearing by the administration. He said nothing could be done about it and it was a "tait accompli."

Gas Sold

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Service stations on the New York state Thruway sold gasoline on Sunday-the first Sunday sales since Dec. 2, an authority spokesman said.

Traffic picked up Sunday, maybe not "enough to make the difference happy, but there is some improvement," said Joe Cummings, senior dispatcher with the Thruway Authority.

Medals Given

GUELPH (CP) — Ontario Agriculture Minister William Stewart and Dr. John D. MacLachlan, first president of the University of Guelph, were presented with medals Saturday marking the Ontario Agricultural College's 100th anniversary.

Quite a Drain

TORONTO (CP) — While the majority of Ontario's 1973-74 budget of $6.5 billion was spent on such things as road construction, doctors's fee and municipal aid, some in the provincial auditor noted last week, goes to pay rent on vacant office space and Conservative advertising agents.

The auditor's report also revealed that:

—The legislature's select committee on land drainage spent $200,000 while investigating drainage problems in such places outside the province as West Palm Beach, Fla., Saginaw, Mich., Quebec City, and St. John's, Nfld.

—The drainage committee's chairman, Lorne Henderson, Progressive Conservative member for Lambton, received $8,-100 in payments and $7,295 in expense money in addition to his salary as a member of the legislature.

—Travel expenses for the ministries totalled more than $38 million.

—The government spent $156,-824 of public money from its "hospitality fund" on luncheons and receptions.

Wins Sweep

VANCOUVER (CP) — Alberta's victory in the Canadian men's curling championship at London, Ont. left Manitoba sweepstakes winner G. B. Cosey $150,000 richer Saturday and hours after he learned of his windfall his wife and four children had already made plans to spend part of it.

"Her Gervais pulled it through for me," said the calm electronics technician who held the first-prize ticket on the winning Gervais rink.

Streakers 'Live'

TORONTO (CP) — Four members of a live CITY-television audience doffed their clothes Sunday and streaked merrily across the stage in front of cameras as thousands of viewers watched.

The name of the show: Free for All.

Ninth Week

SUDBURY (CP) — The inquest into 23 deaths at Sudbury General Hospital is already the longest in Ontario's history and with only five deaths investigated the end is still weeks away.

Today, the ninth week begins with an investigation into the death of five-year-old Brian Vaillancourt. About 90 million words of testimony have been taken by court reporter Thomas Colin. There are 99 scheduled witnesses and 136 exhibits.

Cheese, Anyone?

Slicing through what appears to be a giant brick of cheese, this technician at Goodyear's Toronto plants is actually cutting a test sample from one of the many kinds of rubber and synthetic rubbers used in the manufacture of tires and other rubber products. An automobile tire contains up to 10 types of rubber. (CP Photo).

Walter Cronkite Blushes

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson laughed, Walter Cronkite blushed. And the streaker was dragged out the door.

It all happened Saturday at the LBJ Library Auditorium here as the college fad for flashing stood mute, nonplussed.

The incident at the library came as Cronkite, the CBS news commentator and a former student of the University of Texas, was accepting an award for outstanding achievement.

The nude man, wearing only tennis shoes, an orange baseball cap and a bone-made cloth mask, entered through a side door, about 12 feet from the speaker's platform, but didn't get very far. Two security men pounced on him and dragged him away.

A witness said the widow of the late president Johnson laughed at the incident, Cronkite's resumed his speech, chuckled, then commented:

"My composure was destroyed. . . . And me without a CBS camera."

The streaker was unidentified. "We've got a while male down here," said a spokesman at police headquarters. "We'd like to know who he is ourselves. He doesn't have to tell us anything, but he isn't leaving here until he does."

Newsweek Says Tax Agents Probe Nixon Return for Fraud

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — President Nixon's latest show of confidence over Watergate faces a potential setback today with a magazine report that federal tax agents are carrying out a criminal fraud investigation of his tax payments.

The report in Newsweek said the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) is checking the controversial income tax payment for 1969.

Sunday's report came three days after Representative Wilbur Mills (Democ., Ark.) made the prediction that Nixon's eventual resignation will be over his tax payments rather than Watergate.

Mills, co-chairman of a congressional committee on taxation, said it is evident to his staff that Nixon owes more taxes than he has paid.

Nixon paid less than $1,000 on an income of more than $200,000 after he made a deduction for donating his vice-presidential papers to the national archives.

Newsweek said tax agents "who do only criminal investigations" have interviewed Nixon's personal accountant, his former tax lawyer and former White House aide Edward Morgan.

The IRS began investigating the return at the request of the joint committee on internal revenue taxation, which Nixon asked to review his returns and the controversial deduction.

Newsweek said the principal question is whether Nixon was aware that the deed giving his papers to the national archives was in fact signed after the law permitting such deductions had expired.

White House press secretary Ronald Ziegler was quoted in Newsweek as saying the problem "goes to the preparation of the documents, not to any action of the president."

But tax experts, the magazine said, believe Nixon would be liable on criminal fraud prosecution if it were shown he was aware of the intent of those preparing his income tax papers to mislead the IRS by backdating the deed.

Nixon, who spent the weekend at his Florida home, made a confident speech on radio Saturday in which he urged Americans to make celebrations for the country's 200th anniversary "a reaffirmation of our strength and potential as a free people."

Meanwhile, seven former White House aides and members of the president's re-election campaign pleaded not guilty Saturday to criminal charges in the Watergate cover-up.

Among the seven were John Mitchell, former attorney-general, H. R. Haldeman, former White House chief of staff, John Ehrlichman, former domestic affairs adviser, and former special counsel Charles Colson.

Observers expect Judge John Sirica to decide this week whether to give the House of Representative judiciary committee a sealed report from the grand jury.

It is believed the report presents the jury's findings on Nixon's possible role in the Watergate affair.

The judiciary committee says it needs the report to complete its impeachment inquiry by the target date of April 30.

Air Canada Agents Start Strike Action

TORONTO (CP) — The first of series of rotating strikes by Air Canada passenger agents and communications agents across Canada will take place today in Toronto and Montreal, Tom Saunders, president of the Canadian Airline Employees' Association, said today.

He said that all union members will begin working to rule today at all cities served by Air Canada.

He said today's rotating strikes would involve about 800 workers in Toronto and 400 in Montreal.

He said further rotating strikes will take place "on a random basis" at various locations.

Mr. Saunders said in an interview the action by the union was being taken because of lack of progress at mediation meetings held in Montreal on the weekend.

The union, which represents 2,400 Air Canada workers, said the company made an offer that was inferior to the recommendations in a conciliation board report which the employees had already voted to reject.

Mr. Saunders said the two sides are divided on the issues of wages, pensions and part-time employees.

For only $296, we give you the Atlantic to cross instead of a lake. The warmth of a pub instead of a snack-bar. And an ancient castle to visit instead of a drive-in. We give you a comfortable seat on the world's largest international airline. And, when you arrive, 22 to 45 days of England, Scotland and Wales.

For very little more than $296, we can also give you one of our many "Personalized Holiday" packages, which your British Airways travel agent can tell you all about. So this year, forget about the mosquitoes of Lake Whatchamacallit and have the time of your life instead.

Our $296 bargain.
Starting April 1, we'll fly you from Toronto to London or Manchester for as little as $296 return or to Glasgow for even less. You can choose a Friday or Saturday departure for only $15 more, your children under 12 travel half-fare, and you fly on a regularly scheduled British Airways jet. So, if value is the starters, there's no deposit required, no risk of cancellation, flexibility of travel dates, and a full refund if you have to change your plans. And, just as important, you get the kind of superb service and attention you'd expect from British Airways.

Our biggest bargain of all.
Any British Airways or Air Canada travel agent is the expert to see. They'll tell you all you'd like to know about fares and exciting "Personalized Holidays". And they won't charge a cent for doing so. See them soon. Because the sooner you plan your trip, the sooner we see you. And, frankly, we're looking forward to it.

Wonder Whether Working Will Give Convicts Vote

GUELPH (CP) — Officials here are puzzled at if whether prisoners at Guelph correctional centre will get the right to vote if they pay income tax for money earned working for the Wellington County Liberal MPP Mauffiethenas operator.

The question arises from an announcement Tuesday that the Ontario government has invited manufacturers to hire convicts for work inside the institution. Asked whether they will be allowed to vote in elections as a result of becoming taxpayers, Sinclair Stevens, Liberal MPP for Wellington South, said Saturday he plans to ask the government.

"That's quite a point, I don't know."

whether such convicts will get the vote, from which persons in prison and correction institutes are excluded by law.

Mr. Fraser, superintendent of the centre, said any convicts employed will receive wages comparative with outside rates. The payment will have to pay unemployment insurance benefit tax.

"That's quite a point, I don't know."

Police Identify Victims In Highway 11 Mishap

HUNTSVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Provincial police have identified the four persons killed Friday in a collision between a car and a pickup truck on Highway 11 near this resort community 75 miles northeast of Orillia.

The dead, all occupants of the car, were Mr. and Mrs. Brian Beatrooks of the Ridgeway district of Fort Erie, Ont., driver; Albert Opatowsky, 61, a regional government official in Fort Erie, and Mrs. Eugene Ramsay 38 of Crystal Beach, Ont.

Mrs. Ramsay's husband and Mr. Opatowsky's wife were seriously injured.

Also injured were the five occupants of the truck: Driver Sam Orlando, Police Kramolia and Diego Dubois, all of Hamilton; Giuseppe Hrvisian of Beamsville, Ont., and Angelo Perdoso of Burlington, Ont.

Police said the accident occurred at 4:30 p.m., halting traffic for two hours and holding up cars for miles a fireman and tow-truck operators worked to free the dead and injured.

Protest Hydro Project

OTTAWA (CP) — Demonstrators opposed to the James Bay development project marched to Parliament Hill Saturday but failed in their attempt to present a petition to government officials.

About 75 members of the James Bay Committee sought an interview with the prime minister or one of the opposition leaders but were told that the Parliament Buildings were empty.

Michel Lalande, a spokesman, said telegrams were sent to members of all parties earlier in the week asking for representatives to meet the marchers.

IN MEMORIAM

IN LOVING REMEMBRANCE of Ida Belle Hall, who passed away March 11, 1973.
We once had we of the finest,
And we grew with love unbounded,
With a heart that would understand,
And a smile that would greet,
Whatever of a sorrow it was,
Or a joy that we would meet.
Sadly missed by Wilfred, daughter Shirley, family.

WAFER — In loving memory of our dear son and brother Carl who was killed March 11, 1967, accidentally at Trenton.
Sad memories are all I have,
To sadly recall by one and all.
Memories of a loving son,
As to the world he was known.
Memories remembered and sadly missed,
By mother, brother and sister.

GOLDMAN — In loving memory of a dear husband and father Charles Goldman, who passed away two years ago, March 11, 1972.
Memories are golden,
Memories are dear,
I have them of you,
Each month of the year.
Sadly missed by wife Pearl, daughter Sylvia and family.

Travel Sometimes Hazard to Health

CHICAGO (CP) — Sometimes world travel can be hazardous to your health and the American Medical Association has prepared a booklet to point out the dangers.

The booklet, designed to help doctors in counselling their patients on foreign or overseas trip, was prepared by Dr. Harry Howe, assistant director of the AMA department of environmental, public and occupational health.

It says that perhaps the most obvious contributor to stress in the modern travel style is the great speed that lands the air traveler in a different time system from that in which he departed. Some call this "jet lag fatigue."

Studies show that physical and mental abilities are temporarily serious for an indefinite period, depending on individual tendencies to become adjusted to a time-zone change.

Physiological functions, including the sleep-wake cycle, digestion, body temperature, pulse rate, kidney function, hormone levels and alertness operate according to the usual day-night cycle. An appreciable rest period is required to adjust to a time zone four or more hours removed from his customary one.

A simple rule of thumb calls for rest stops of a day after crossing four to six time zones and two days after seven to 10.

In pre-travel health consultation, the physician is reminded to counsel patients regarding changing patterns of taking regular medications, such as insulin for diabetics. Pre-flight conditioning exercises, such as a graduated program of walking up to three miles a day, are recommended. In flight, travellers are urged to practice appropriate of food and alcohol intake, to get up and walk about the cabin occasionally on long trips.

Pregnant women in the eighth month or with a history of spontaneous abortion are among medical risk groups that should be advised against long flights.

Pre-travel health preparation should include immunization against diseases to which the traveller may be exposed in countries along his route. Vaccination against typhoid and smallpox should be considered—smallpox, typhoid, diphtheria, tetanus, tuberculosis, infectious hepatitis and measles. In addition, certain other immunizations may be in order, depending on areas to be visited—polio fever, cholera, typhus, plague, tularaemia and typhoid fever. Immunization for African disease transmitted by the tsetse fly.

Precautions against insects in some areas, such as use of insecticides and mosquito, insect repellents and mosquito bars for sleeping quarters should be advised.

Travellers' diarrhea is a common affliction. The booklet advises strict adherence to well-cooked meat, fish and vegetables and use of only bottled beverages, ice or some water disinfectant.

The booklet suggests salads, previously peeled raw fruits and vegetables, fruit juices, such as milk, local milk and uncooked meat or fish. If these precautions fail, there are medications the physician can prescribe.

It's a Change

BELFAST (AP) — Northern Ireland police are serving injunction threats as the streaking craze hit Belfast.

Three young men were arrested as they raced naked through the deserted city centre where guerrilla bombs have kept up a continual barrage in the last four years.

The three men were jailed and will appear in court today.

"It makes a change," a police spokesman said. "If that's all that happened here we wouldn't mind."

The streaking fad began on North American college campuses.

The Horrid B. C. Business

Canada's second prime Minister, Alexander Mackenzie (left, portrayed by Gillie Fenwick) and gifted orator Edward Blake

(Gerard Parkes) who would eventually succeed Mackenzie as Liberal leader, play major roles in The Horrid B.C. Business, episode 3 of CBC -TV's National Dream series, to be telecast Sunday, March 17. In the program the dour Mackenzie is seen vainly attempting to cope with a severe economic depression, and Pacific railway problems inherited from Sir John A. Macdonald.

When some 200 people were asked to pick their favorites from a list of 1,600 films, 1918-1971, Casablanca, made in 1942 topped their list.

Others in the top five included The Maltese Falcon, 1941; A Streetcar Named Desire, 1950, and The Treasure of the Sierra Madre, 1941. Only Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf? 1966, represented the 1960s.

These films won out over more current pictures like Bullitt, A Clockwork Orange and Billy Jack.

"The over-all picture . . . is not that of an audience concerned with sex, violence or easy entertainment, but rather with the themes of idealism, moralism, the overcoming of personal problems and difficulties and social significance," said Dr. William J. Kreutzer of Fordham University, who conducted the survey.

Why did the old films do so well? Explanations vary. Old films have much exposure from being viewed by a large television audience. The studios are turning out fewer films today. And, some say, old movies are simply superior.

"The films made in the 1930s and 1940s are better than now," said Jim Silke, chairman of film studies at the American Film Institute in Los Angeles, who helped put together Warner Brothers' 50th anniversary record albums of song and dialogue.

"The 1930s and '40s were romantic. They chose to look at dreams, propelling people to a better kind of life.

"In the 1960s, you begin to preach about the human condition, instead of searching for a relationship, honestly, between two people. It became propaganda instead of a story.

"Young people are looking for a better world, another side of life, in the 1970s. People have responded to that since the beginning of time. There's very little of the dream in today's film."

Leslie Harston, president of Leslco Productions, the firm responsible for the albums, made another point:

"The old movies stand up because they've been seen by two generations in the theatre and four generations on TV. It's probably true that more people saw Casablanca than saw The Godfather."

Silke added that directors like Howard Hawks had sharp personal identities, as well as control over the stars, and the strength to make clear esthetic and philosophic statements in their films. Today, few directors have this kind of force, he said.

Harston said: "There's bigger money in records today. People gravitate there, and to TV."

Silke said: "TV makes 96 per cent Grade B movies. Their A films are Monday night football.

Quake an Omen?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — On the first day of filming the spectacle Earthquake, a real quake measuring a nearly 5.5 on the Richter scale shook the city.

Said one of the movie crew: "Do you suppose someone is trying to tell us something?"

Regardless of omens, Universal Pictures is going ahead with plans to find out Mother Nature. The new film will stage an earthquake that virtually destroys Los Angeles.

Earthquake is the result of Hollywood's determination to top a bit. When Airport became Universal's biggest moneymaker of all time, the town's studios tried to figure why. Their decision: audiences enjoy films about a group of people facing a common danger.

Universal commissioned a novel from Godfather author Mario Puzo, then handed the project over to producer-director Mark Robson, whose beginnings as a film editor helped qualify him for all the trick photography of Earthquake.

Executive producer Jennings Lang said the studio is "starting a new company to devise ways to enhance films so they will offer something more than people can get on television, and the plan will be kicked off with Earthquake.

"You'll think the next is shaking and you might even smell things," said Lang. Lest panic set in, the illusions will be well advertised beforehand, he added.

Controversial Drama Mar. 20

The NFB television series West!—goes to Regina, Sask., for's look at a stage comedy about what Sir John A. Macdonald once referred to as "this Riel Business". Segments of the play as well as reactions of an invited audience of Metis and Indians have been filmed for presentation on the CBC-TV network on Wednesday, March 20, at 10 p.m.

"This Riel Business" deals with native reactions to a Regina Globe Theatre presentation of Fred Langley's slapstick comedy, "Tales From a Prairie Drifter," about the Northwest Rebellion. For his play, Langley did not follow the history books, but researched sources that had not been tapped previously.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Trumpeter Al Hirt has been sued for separation by his wife of 31 years, Mary Patterson Hirt, he said, filed Thursday, says Hirt abandoned her without cause almost a year ago. The Hirts have eight children.

Stacey, 26, said in a suit filed Thursday in Superior Court that the city failed to maintain streets properly.

The former star of the television series Lancer was riding his motorcycle with a girl friend on Sept. 26, 1973, when he collided with a car driven by Carter Gordon, Stacey's companion, Claire Cox., 27, was killed.

Stacey, former husband of actresses Kim Darby and Connie Stevens, previously filed a $26 million suit against Gordon, who has been charged with manslaughter.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Frank Sinatra, recovering from a case of laryngitis, has cancelled a scheduled engagement at Caesar's Palace in Las Vegas March 14-20, His doctor, Dr. Edward L. Rose, said it would be unwise for the singer to keep the engagement before embarking on a nine-city concert tour April 8.

ENCINO, Calif. (AP) — Clark Gable's seven-bedroom, seven-bath house is up for sale for $150,500.

The estate where the actor lived from 1936 until his death in 1960 includes 19 acres which will be cut up into building lots. The actor's widow, Kay Gable, 55, and her son, William Clark, 13, moved out a month ago after selling the home and property for $900,000.

The one-third-acre lots, priced from $37,000 to $54,000, will go on new streets named Tara and Ashley Oaks, taken from the movie Gone with the Wind.

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Liberace collects antique tables, miniature automobiles, antiques, chandeliers, unusual jewelry, rare crystals, silver, china and miniature pianos.

The pianist, known for his flashing clothes and sparkling smile, owns three houses and 10 dogs. One Palm Springs home is used for guests.

Liberace's most valuable piece of furniture is probably the Louis XV desk in the master bedroom. It once belonged to Czar Nicholas and Empress Alexandra of Russia.

"In order to get the desk I bought an entire museum in Pensacola, Fla.," he said. He places its value at $275,000.

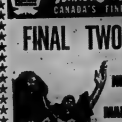
Amid—his prized possessions are a dozen dinner plates installed JFK that belonged to the late president John F. Kennedy. He bought them at a benefit auction for $40,000.

"I have 15 ticky cars," he said. Most of them are stored in Palm Springs, including a Rolls Royce, a 1934 Mercedes and a 1930 Oldsmobile. His station wagon has piano keys painted along the side.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Natalie Wood, wife of actor Robert Wagner, was reported doing fine Sunday after giving birth to a seven-pound, five-ounce girl at Cedars of Lebanon Hospital Saturday night.

The baby was named Courtney, after the name of the character Miss Wood played in The Affair, a movie made for television in which she and Wagner co-starred.

Miss Wood has a daughter, Natasha, 3, from a previous marriage and Wagner a daughter Katherine, 9, from a previous marriage.



Miss Wood and Wagner were married once before, in 1957, but divorced in 1961 and married other people. After those marriages ended in divorces they picked up their romance and remarried July 16, 1972.

Oswald: "Another one of the old rules of play inherited from whist is: Second hand low. Like all old rules it is worth following most of the time, but there are plenty of exceptions.

Jim: "The classic case of correct play of second hand high is when dummy has a high card that will be worthless unless played right away."

Oswald: "If today's hand were played in a duplicate game the chances are that every South player would be declarer at three notrump."

Jim: "Most West players would open the six of spades and every declarer would look at that card with the expression of a man seeing a naked rattlesnake."

Oswald: "Eventually they would all call for the king from dummy. The king would hold. The rattlesnake would turn out to have been harmless and declarer would proceed to rattle off the next 10 tricks before conceding the last two to the defense."

Hearst Girl Declares FBI Seeks Death

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Patricia Hearst says in the latest tape recording released by her kidnappers that "it's the FBI who wants to murder me." Her abductors accused the FBI of suppressing their communiqués.

The tape, received by a Berkeley, Calif., radio station Sunday night, was similar to a recording received Saturday from Miss Hearst and the Symbionese Liberation Army (SLA), which says it has held her since the newspaper heiress was kidnapped five weeks ago. But the tape was clearer and contained a new message from the SLA.

The tapes were the first communication from the kidnappers in 17 days.

Miss Hearst's mother, Catherine, said: "I know that while Patty is captive that she'll have to mutter all the words that are dictated by her captors." Miss Hearst, 19, is the daughter of Randolph Hearst, editor and president of the San Francisco Examiner.

Sunday's tape included the SLA charge that, "The FBI intercepted and suppressed" one of two tapes it put out Saturday. It said the FBI "thought the first one was the only one sent out," said a woman who described herself as being from an SLA information intelligence unit. She said the FBI was foiled by "a double-decoy system."

Sunday night's tape was addressed to KPFA-FM, Berkeley, where a woman interviewed that the new tape could be "one of the fifth row of a San Francisco theater."

In the tapes, Miss Hearst says she had the "feeling she has been written off." She said: "I don't believe you're doing everything you can, everything in your power. I don't believe you're doing anything at all."

In other kidnapping developments during the weekend:

—In the city of Decatur, Ga., K-Mart store manager was released unharmed after a bank robber had paid about $20,000 in ransom from the office safe. It was the fourth similar incident since Christmas involving K-Mart employees in three states.

—In Hackensack, N.J., authorities sought their assistance for additional suspects in the kidnapping of eight-year-old John Calandrillo and their attempts to locate the $50,000 ransom paid for his release. Five persons have been arrested. The boy was released unharmed early last Friday.

—In Los Angeles, the FBI said it will present an affidavit giving details of a plot to free a convicted skyjacker and another jailed man by kidnapping a foreign consul-general. One woman was arrested Saturday in connection with the reported plot. She and the two jailed men were to be arraigned today.

In the Hearst case, the latest recording by the co-ed included this request: "I really want to get out of here. I ask you not to aid the FBI."

Miss Hearst called a $2-million food distribution plan for the poor paid for by her father and the William Randolph Hearst Foundation "a real disaster." The SLA originally demanded $70 worth of food for every poor person in California.

Miss Hearst's father said, "We are glad to hear her voice and to know that Patty's alive."

"But we'll have to study it before we make any reply."

In New Jersey, the fifth arrest in the Calandrillo case was made late Saturday when FBI agents took into custody Maria Margaret Marida, 17, at her home at Jersey City. Four teenaged youths are also being held in the case.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Jonathan Goldstein said the young woman would be arraigned today on charges of conspiring to violate federal kidnapping statutes.

Goldstein said there were still other suspects in the kidnapping.

In Decatur, Ga., authorities were searching for the kidnapers of Patricia Daniel, 30, abducted Saturday by three men who demanded and got about $20,000 from her husband, William Mrs. Daniel was found unharmed.

The previous three such incidents involving K-Mart store employees occurred in different states, two in Michigan and one in Tennessee. In one, the kidnaped woman escaped, in another a man was arrested and in the third the kidnappers escaped with $91,000.

In Los Angeles, the three named in a federal warrant charging conspiracy to kidnap are Mike Theresa Moore, 23, a former follower of Charles Manson, convicted in the cult killing of actress Sharon Tate; Garrett Brock Trapnell, 36, the convicted skyjacker, already in jail; and Robert Bernard Hedberg Jr., 37, already in jail on charges of unlawful flight and assaulting a policeman.

They were charged with conspiracy to kidnap the consul-general of one of the following countries: Canada, Estonia, Paraguay, France, West Germany, Switzerland or Haiti.

Morgentaler Urges Hospitals To Defy Law on Abortions

OTTAWA (CP) — Dr. Henry Morgentaler of Montreal challenged the medical profession Saturday to defy the law if necessary to get safe legal abortions.

"It is not just enough to change the abortion laws, Dr. Morgentaler told about 400 people at a pro-abortion rally here. There must also be improved facilities for women wanting abortions.

"I appeal to all doctors and all hospitals to bend the law, to defy the law if necessary, to provide facilities for women in need of safe medical abortions," he said.

Dr. Morgentaler is awaiting a judgment from the Quebec Court of Appeals on abortion charges. The case is expected to go to the Supreme Court of Canada later this year.

His call for a repeal of abortion laws was supported by three other doctors and by two members of Parliament, New Democrats Grace Hartman and Stuart Leggs of British Columbia.

Dr. Morgentaler said the federal government is completely irresponsible to the mental and physical anguish that present laws create.

While present laws restrict abortions to those approved by committees, whom were still deprived because most of the facilities were concentrated in some urban centres.

Dr. Sylvia von Hanna of Toronto said the medical profession is not responsive to the need for better birth-control counselling.

Dr. von Hanna, a general practitioner in a women's health collective, suggested that too many doctors believe they are the judges of the people rather than the servants.

Dr. Robert Makaroff of Vancouver, who was jailed for two months in 1970 for performing illegal abortions, said the laws will be changed eventually because most people, particularly the young, recognize the hypocrisy of present abortion laws.

Hirshhorn Paintings Stolen Over Weekend

WASHINGTON (AP) — Six valuable paintings destined for the Joseph H. Hirshhorn Museum here were stolen during the weekend from Hirshhorn's estate at Greenwich, Conn.

Abram Lerner, director of the new museum, which is scheduled to open in the fall as part of the Smithsonian Institution, told a reporter that the theft apparently took place early Saturday morning.

Hirshhorn and his wife are at their Florida home at Naples.

Hirshhorn, who made his fortune in uranium mining in Canada, has given his collection of more than 6,000 paintings and 3,000 pieces of sculpture to the United States. The Smithsonian estimates the total value of the gift at more than $50 million.

Lerner told a reporter that the oil paintings, taken from the house at Greenwich, include two by Winslow Homer, companion pieces of a boy with a pail and a girl with a pail; an early Edward Hopper portrait of a woman; a self-portrait by Thomas Eakins; and two pictures by Adolphe Monticelli, portrait of women.

Homer, Hopper and Eakins are among the giants of early United States painting, and Monticelli was a Frenchman who influenced Vincent Van Gogh and has been described as a prophet of abstract impressionism.

MILAN, Italy (Reuter) — Gold, silver and paintings, including works by Rubens and Van Dyck—valued at more than 1,000 million lire ($1,267,000) were stolen from an apartment here Saturday night, police said Sunday.

Spending Explained

TORONTO (CP) — A member of the former Commission on Post Secondary Education said Sunday he probably is the in the provincial auditor's report as spending 47 per cent of the 13-member commission's total expense money.

David Black, 36, of Woodover, Ont., also said he now hopes to get published a novel he described as a "spy story about bureaucracy and expense accounts."

However, he said, the novel is not about the commission.

Provincial auditor Norman Scott, in his report last week said one commission member collected per diem payments that totalled $34,200 and was paid $23,555 in expenses in his four years on the commission.

His per diem payments were 27 per cent of the commissions total payments.

Mr. Black said he became the commission's big spender, because he did a lot of leg work, including organizing hearings for the committee that studied educational opportunities in Northern Ontario.

No Barrier On Window

TORONTO (CP) —The husband of a woman who fell from a window of her death at Toronto General Hospital criticized the hospital Saturday for putting her in an unprotected room.

Lolsia Greco, 45, of Toronto, a psychiatri patient, fell Saturday from an eighth-storey window.

"They should not have left her alone with no barriers on the window," Mario Greco said in an interview.

William Louth, assistant executive director of the hospital, said there are no barriers on windows because modern treatment in almost all hospitals rules out the use of bars.

He said Mrs. Greco was "progressing favorably" and had no record of suicidal tendencies.

Winter Jobs Rise

OTTAWA (CP) — The economy showed continued expansion in February with the fifth consecutive monthly rise in employment to a total of 8,671,000, Statistics Canada said today.

At the same time, unemployment remained virtually unchanged at 5.5 per cent of the labor force, the report said.

The total of persons at work was 388,000 more than a year earlier, while the jobless total of 535,000 was 20,000 less for the same period, the report showed.

"The seasonally-adjusted employment level increased in October 18,000, Ontario 12,000 of the Prairie region 10,500, while it declined in British Columbia 1,500 and in the Atlantic region 1,000." In comparison with January, Statistics Canada said.

Seasonally-adjusted unemployment rates rose in Ontario to 4.3 from 4.1 per cent in January and in British Columbia to 5.8 from 5.5 per cent but declined in Quebec the Atlantic region to 9.3 from 9.3 per cent. The Prairie region's jobless rate was unchanged at three per cent.

Total employment rose 70,000 for men to 5,552,000 and increased 5,000 for women to 3,819,000.

Full-time jobs for women declined 41,000, but was almost equalled by a rise of 40,000 in part-time work, the report said.

The employment picture for younger persons improved, with the total at work rising 9,000 to 2,158,000 and the number unemployed declining 2,000 to 189,000, it added.

The nationwide total of 535,444 for all unemployed workers was down 2,000 for the month, but was figured as a 10,000 increase on a seasonally-adjusted basis because it usually declines more than that from January to February.

Hijacked Jumbo Jet Is Safe

TOKYO (AP) — A young masked hijacker took over a Japanese jumbo jet with 128 persons aboard today, but seven hours later police seized him at Naha airport on Okinawa.

The hijacker, identified by police as an 18-year-old Japanese, had demanded $55 million, 11 parachutes and modern-climbing equipment, Japan Air Line (JAL) officials said.

He took over the plane, which carried a record number of persons for a flight, on a domestic flight and allowed it to continue to its original destination at Naha for refuelling.

Okinawa police later gave the youth's name but declined to identify him by name because he is a minor.

The youth operated alone and there were no other hijackers, authorities said.

He was seized by police who dressed as flight attendants came to bring food ordered by the hijacker for the plane. Three police in attendants' uniforms seized the hijacker in the plane's cockpit.

They said that in addition to the $55 million in dollars, the hijacker had demanded 200 million yen, the equivalent of about $666,000.

A JAL spokesman said the hijacker did not make any threats about offloading up the plane or other violence.

Ninety minutes after the plane had landed at Okinawa, the youth allowed 162 passengers to leave the plane. They included 111 women, three children and 48 men who were elderly or in frail health.

News Briefs

Embassy Approved

OTTAWA (CP) — Saudi Arabia has agreed to establishment of a Canadian embassy there, the first in a Middle East Arab oil-state, an external affairs department spokesman said Monday. The spokesman said a charge d'affaires is expected to go to Saudi Arabia soon, with an ambassador to be appointed in the summer. . .

Culture Big Obstacle

TORONTO (CP) — Immigrant children across Canada have more problems with cultural adjustments than they do with language learning which school programs tend to emphasize, Prof. Mary Ashworth of the University of British Columbia said Monday at the national conference on the education of immigrants. . .

Boys Trapped in Sand

BURLINGTON, Ont. (CP) — A search for two young boys, missing since Sunday afternoon, ended Monday after workmen found the boys trapped in a sandpile at a products factory in this community just east of Hamilton. Allan McCullum, 7, and Robert Pye, 8, were momentarily huddled at the bottom of a funnel-shaped hole just over a conveyor trap door by two workmen who followed footprints in the cement-product company's sandpile.

Saturday Calls Urged

TORONTO (CP) — Special discounts for certain long-distance telephone calls will be introduced by Bell Canada on the four Saturdays in April in an experiment aimed at encouraging people to place more calls on Saturdays, when spare network capacity is available, Bell officials said Monday.

Town Without Water

PORT PERRY, Ont. (CP) — Full water service was restored Monday night, following a 24-hour near-drought caused by the failure of the town's only public pump. All schools here and in Prince Albert were closed Monday and one of the area's four factories closed down because of the water problem.

Hearst Will Respond

HILLSBOROUGH, Calif. (AP) — Newspaper executive Randolph Hearst says he will attempt to respond, to the letter, to demands made by the kidnappers of his daughter. He pledged Monday to do "everything we can" to meet the Symbionese Liberation Army's (SLA) demand for the distribution of $70 worth of quality food for every needy resident of the San Francisco Bay area.

Prisoners Can't Vote

TORONTO (CP) — An Ontario government spokesman said today prisoners of reform institutions who earn a salary are ineligible to vote in any election under both federal and provincial law.

Tax Returns Checked

NEW YORK (AP) — The Times says President Nixon suggested in June, 1969, that White House staff members check the tax returns of former presidents to see what deductions they had taken.

Flippers Deplored

WAINFLEET, Ont. (CP) — Ontario may be raising a generation of card flippers, John Smith Progressive Conservative member of the legislature for Hamilton Mountain, said Monday.

"Today many children just stand and flip cards during recess," Mr. Smith said. "They flip baseball cards in summer, hockey cards in winter, football cards in the fall and in the off season they flip wrestling cards."

Mr. Smith decried the lack of physical benefits from card flipping.

"A friend of mine's son is the champion flipper of his third grade. He's got so many muscles in his wrist that the pediatrician can't find his pulse."

Saudi Arabia Wants To Lift Oil Embargo

CAIRO (AP)—Egypt's semi-official newspaper Al Ahram gave another indication today that Saudi Arabia, the key to the Arab oil embargo against the United States, is in favor of resuming shipments to the U.S.

The paper says Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, the prime mover for an end to the boycott, met Monday with the oil ministers of Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Qatar, Abu Dhabi and Bahrain, and all six agreed on "all aspects of the oil policy."

This indicated that the six countries will form a solid bloc in opposition to Libya, Algeria and Syria at the meeting of Arab oil states in Tripoli, Libya, Wednesday.

Saudi King Faisal, who controls the world's largest known oil reserves, has never publicly retracted his repeated demands for an Israeli withdrawal from all captured territory, including Old Jerusalem, before the embargo is lifted. But early last week the Saudi oil minister, Ahmed Zaki Yemani, called for an end to the ban.

The oil ministers' meeting in Tripoli Wednesday was first scheduled for the Libyan capital Feb. 14 and then was postponed at Sadat's request. Sadat tried to get the meeting held in Cairo last Sunday, but Algeria and some of the embargo—insisted on meeting in Tripoli.

Teachers Unmoved

Arbitration Is Resisted

TORONTO (CP) Teachers in York Region vowed Monday night to fight any attempt made to force them into binding arbitration to settle a contract dispute with the York County board of education.

About 2,000 teachers, parents and students held an outdoor rally, including a march to the board's offices, to demonstrate their opposition to a request made Sunday by Education Minister Thomas Wells. He asked them to submit to binding arbitration by 9 p.m. Monday or face possible back-to-work legislation.

Vincent Matthewson, chief negotiator for teachers, said the group was "very resolved."

He refused to consider Mr. Wells' statement an ultimatum.

"He asked us if we would submit to binding arbitration and we have demonstrated that our answer is no," Mr. Matthewson said.

He said the teachers had not adopted any formal strategy in the battle with the school board, which has closed schools for 6 days.

However, he said he is optimistic about an early end to the dispute with talks which he said opened Monday "on a different front."

He said for the first time, the York board was represented by the Ontario Public School Trustees' Association, "and for the first time in a longwhile we feel we are in meaningful dialogue with someone on the other side."

"I am actually encouraged in the belief that we are close to a solution without the artificial straitjacket of arbitration."

Following the Monday meeting, Mr. Matthewson said such a solution might come "within the next 24 to 48 hours."

Mr. Wells declined an offer by the teachers to attend the demonstration.

Stephen Lewis, New Democratic Party leader, told the group his party would fight any compulsory arbitration legislation "every step of the way in the legislature."

He said the York school trustees had negotiated in bad faith and Mr. Wells should take over the negotiations as an example to the trustees, echoing statements made in the legislature earlier in the day.

Donald Deacon, deputy Liberal leader, tabled a petition in the legislature, calling on the government to take over school operations until new elections for school trustees can be held.

At their own meeting Monday night, the school trustees decided to delay plans to advertise for replacement of the teachers until they learn what the cabinet decides today.

The 657 teachers had resigned effective Feb. 1 and the school board threatened last Friday to start trying to hire replacements.

The trustees also deferred plans to implement pay raises for those teachers still working.

'Assertive' Allies Annoy Kissinger

WASHINGTON (AP)— State Secretary Henry Kissinger says the United States now is harder pressed in trying to discourage "simple self-assertiveness" among its friends and allies than in dealing with traditional foes.

Discussing disputes which have been aggravated by the onset of the energy crisis, Kissinger said Monday the question of whether there should be cooperation or competition among the U.S. and its allies "is a moral problem as much as a political one."

He told a meeting of about 100 wives of congressmen that the United States would be in a much better position than the other countries of the European Common Market and to put the results to the British people.

The pledge was given in the speech from the throne read by the Queen at the opening of the new Parliament. It outlined the policy of Prime Minister Harold Wilson's minority government.

But the program made no mention of the Labor election campaign pledges to nationalize big chunks of British industry. The most direct project for a state takeover was contained in a passage saying it "proposals will be prepared for bringing land refused for development into public possession."

The Labor government's evident decision to shelve its nationalization plans results from its weak grip on power. The party has only 301 seats in the 635-member House of Commons. It short of a majority.

Highlights of the Labor government's domestic program:

—Action "to establish fair prices for certain key foods" through the use of state subsidies.

—A law to reform and extend consumer credit arrangements.

Nationalization Shunned by Labor

LONDON (CP) — The Labor government pledged today to seek a fundamental renegotiation of Britain's terms of entry into the European Common Market and to put the results to the British people.

The pledge was given in the speech from the throne read by the Queen at the opening of the new Parliament. It outlined the policy of Prime Minister Harold Wilson's minority government.

But the program made no mention of the Labor election campaign pledges to nationalize big chunks of British industry. The most direct project for a state takeover was contained in a passage saying it "proposals will be prepared for bringing land refused for development into public possession."

The Labor government's evident decision to shelve its nationalization plans results from its weak grip on power. The party has only 301 seats in the 635-member House of Commons. It short of a majority.

Highlights of the Labor government's domestic program:

—Action "to establish fair prices for certain key foods" through the use of state subsidies.

—A law to reform and extend consumer credit arrangements.

—Repeal of the Industrial Relations Act introduced by the former Conservative government of Edward Heath. These are to be replaced by new legislation.

—Plans to secure "equal status for women" in industry and society.

—A bill to increase pensions for the old and disabled and to increase social security benefits for the needy.

The speech made no mention of a Labor party plan to introduce a special wealth tax. Chancellor of the Exchequer Denis Healey is to table the government's budget March 26.

Jaworski Bars Any Charges Against Nixon

WASHINGTON (AP) — The grand jury that investigated the Watergate break-in and cover-up was advised by special prosecutor Leon Jaworski not to include President Nixon in its indictments even if the evidence justifies it, a spokesman for Jaworski said today.

The spokesman, who declined to be named, said Jaworski feels the question of whether a president can legally be indicted is substantial enough to rule out filing of charges by the grand jury.

Senator Slain In Eire

DUBLIN (Reuter) — Senator Billy Fox of the Republic of Ireland today was found shot dead about 12 hours after being kidnapped by armed men, police said.

The senator was found shot in the head, lying in a field close to the house from which he was taken Monday night near the border with Northern Ireland.

Troops and police had launched a search for Fox after he was seized by 12 masked men from the home of a friend in County Monaghan.

The gang set fire to the house and a car nearby, and shots were heard as the senator was hustled away.

Fox was a well-known figure in the Irish Senate. He was one of several Protestants among its 60 members.

He was an outspoken critic of the British Army's activities in Northern Ireland, and particularly of their behavior near the border where he farmed.

While serving as an opposition member in the Irish Dail (parliament) he repeatedly attacked the British Army's practice of blowing up unapproved border roads, and took part in filling in these craters.

The house from which Fox was seized is in an area often used by pro-Catholic Irish guerrillas as a forward base for attacks on Northern Ireland. However, there was no immediate evidence linking the IRA with the abduction.

The murder is a major blow for the government of Prime Minister Liam Cosgrave, already under heavy pressure following the escape from Dublin's Mountjoy Jail earlier Monday of two self-described British spies.

Thirty Parking Spaces Illegal

Strict enforcement of the city's bylaw setting out required street corner and fire hydrant clearances would mean the elimination of 30 parking meters.

Under the bylaw, parking of cars within 30 feet of crosswalks or intersections and within 10 feet of a fire hydrant is prohibited.

But at the same time the bylaw says cars are parked legally if they are within marked parking spaces.

If the distance requirement aspect of the bylaw was strictly enforced, most of the parking meter spaces lost would be on Front Street.

Wrecked Car Abandoned

Belleville police are looking for a thief who allegedly stole a late model Dodge early Monday morning; raced across town and then into a hydro pole at the corner of Bridge and Charles Streets before abandoning the wrecked vehicle in front of a home on Golddale Rd.

Police Chief Douglas Crowbie says that the car, a green Dart, was reported to have been stolen some time around 1:30 a.m. Monday.

It was then involved in a single car crash at the corner of Bridge Street East and Charles when it went out of control and struck a pole on the northeast corner of the intersection, at 2:30 a.m.

One occupant of the car was found parked outside a home on Goldsdale Road.

Damage to the vehicle was estimated at $650.

The owner of the car reported that it was stolen nearly six hours later.

No Hydro, Schools Out

Tyendinaga Reserve school children are in the second of a brief two-day holiday today and they have Ontario Hydro work crews to thank for the early spring respite from studies.

Utility crews are in the process of connecting a service line to the new Quinte-Mohawk school. It is expected work will be completed today.

Hydro information officer Norman Maracle said today the four other reserve schools are served by the same service line. Crews cut power to connect a new 2½ -3 mile line to the school.

School authorities were forced to give 230 children holidays as heat to buildings was cut off.

The new Quinte-Mohawk Indian Day School, to be completed and ready for use in September, has 10 classrooms and a gymnasium.

It will replace the present Quinte-Mohawk school and the Eastern, Western and Central junior schools.

Council in Caucus Over Increase

TRENTON — Town council went into caucus following last night's meeting to discuss the 47 percent increase in its contribution to Hastings County Family and Children's Services.

Trenton's contribution this year is forecast to top $40,000, according to a request from the Hastings County agency.

The topic was first considered in caucus at last Monday's committee of the whole session when it was requested that county officials meet with the town last night.

There was no mention of committee of the whole discussions in the committee reports read at last night's public session.

Special Zoning Brings Objection

TRENTON Principal of Trenton Cold Storage, Eben James told council last night he wants the environmental protection zone removed from his waterfront property.

The zone, a narrow belt skirting all waterways in and around Trenton, was placed on Trenton's official plan by the province and was not subject to local input.

In Mr. James' letter he says he understand that the town had to accept this environmental strip in order to have the plan passed by the minister.

Mr. James explained his firm had invested large sums of money building a retaining wall to prepare for land development, development he said was essential for the company to grow.

Council made no commitment.

Hockey Tourney Gets Donation

TRENTON — Town council last night may have set the precedent it sought to stay away from last week's handling a question of donations.

Council last night approved a $100 contribution to a local hockey tournament.

Last Monday, during caucus discussion, council refused to make any contribution to a hemophelia association — requesting support for a convention to be held in Quinte area. Area municipalities were invited to contribute. Belleville gave $100.

Council last week said the fire had to be drawn somewhere in spending the tax dollar in the forms of donations to associations.

The delegation representing hemophelia convention organizers urged council to reconsider the appeal with an open mind.

The subject has been referred to the next committee of the whole session.

Custodians' Day March 22

Custodians with Hastings county board of education will have their own professional development day March 22.

This will be the fifth annual day held by the county board to update custodial skills in the schools of the county.

Keynote speaker at the day-long workshops at Quinte Secondary School will be director of education, Eric Runacres, who will talk about public relations and communications in the schools.

Fire prevention will be emphasized this year, says Keith Hawkins, controller of plant. Representatives from equipment companies will give workshops, with floors the target of special attention. Painting, and heating and ventilation equipment are other topics to be covered.

Hastings county was one of the first in Ontario to conduct annual day-long workshops for custodians. All repair and maintenance personnel in the county gather in Belleville for the day to learn of new techniques and methods for preserving school buildings in top condition. Fire prevention and use of firefighting equipment and techniques is always high on the list of priorities.

To authorize annual return application, Highway Subsidies.

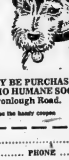
Workshop Destroyed By Fire

PICTON — A Prince Edward county, boat builder's shop-workshop was reduced to the ground early today in a fire of undetermined origin.

An Ontario Provincial Police officer driving through York St. spotted the blaze at Mcintosh Boat Builders at about 1 a.m. and radioed for help.

Spokesman for the Picton fire department this morning reported that the frame building "fire" before firefighters could arrive at the scene. For about three hours firemen worked to douse the blaze and prevent it from spreading to the nearby building of Ray's Auto Electric.

Contents of the building have not been listed and no estimate of the damage is yet available.



Subdivision Bylaws Pass

TRENTON — Bylaws to authorize subdivision agreements with the companies of Weaver - Armstrong and Weaver-DeFoe were passed without discussion at last night's meeting of Trenton Town Council.

No information was released or available concerning the subdivisions. Their locations were not disclosed.

A third bylaw was also passed to assume sanitary services in a subdivision being turned over to the town. Complete information was not available.

Prince Edward County Horse Performs Well

MILFORD — Prince Edward County's first contestant in Toronto's Quarterama, North America's largest Quarter Horse show, has returned home a winner.

The young rider and his speedy mount continued to do Prince Edward proud by placing third in the senior division of pole bending in a class of 29 entries.

Another third place ribbon was won in the senior division barrel race when Blaine and Teque competed with 47 other entries.

In the Youth Barrel Race this county entry won sixth place in a class of 37 horses.

The two-day Quarter horse competitions held last weekend at Toronto's Coliseum drew 1,720 entries from across Canada and the United States.

Blaine Way and his father, Laverne, a well known Quarter area horseman, said they were extremely pleased and excited when Teque won a sixth place ribbon in her first class.

Both were disappointed the next day when they discovered that someone had stolen the prize ribbon during the night.

Disappointment was short lived when Teque's Lady 332 chalked up a second place win and another impressive ribbon in her next class. Show officials later replaced the ribbon taken during the disappointing Teque and her rider returned to Milford with four handsome rosettes.

Odd Fellows Plan Picton Ceremonial

PICTON — A joint investiture ceremonial conducted by the Independent Order of Odd Fellows will be held Saturday night, March 30, at Prince Edward Collegiate Institute.

This colorful event will feature the Grand Decoration of Chivalry honoring Chevaliers of the Patriarch Militant and the Decoration of Chivalry honoring Rebekahs in Eastern Ontario.

Amos Hicks of Picton, in charge of the committee planning for this occasion, points out these decorations are the highest awards of honor and merit that can be bestowed upon Chevaliers and Rebekahs within the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

They are given for meritorious efforts in the fraternal and benevolent field of Odd Fellowship.

Mr. Hicks expects that representatives from many parts of Ontario and the United States will attend the special ceremonial.

The investiture staff and special guards for the initiatials will comprise members of many Ontario Canton and Ladies' Auxiliaries Patriarch Militants throughout Ontario.

Theta Rhea Girls' Club and Junior Lodge will assist in the investiture ceremonial which will be followed by a command floor drill by members of the Ladies' Auxiliary of Canton Outaouais No. 9 LAPM, IOOF, Ottawa.

General Commanding Fay Hunter of Washington, D.C., is expected to attend and assist as commander. Major - General James Howie of Kingston is Department Commander and Major Ernest J. Rose of Windsor the Department Adjutant.

A complete list of those to be honoured has not yet been released but from Bay of Quinte Lodge, Belleville, IOOF reciepients of the Grand Decoration of Chivalry will be Lt. Col. Dwight O. Reynolds and Evelyn Wreaford Hicks, both PDDG Masters.

Those receiving the Decoration of Chivalry include Mrs. Ralph Preston of Wellington and Mrs. Lila Zeke, Picton, members of Macpelah Rebekah Lodge, No. 144, Picton.

The ceremonies will be open to the general public and followed by the serving of refreshments. The event is one of several highlighting the 100th anniversary of the order in Picton, to celebrate this century of fellowship special services are scheduled for Saturday, May 4, when the Grand Master of the Lodge in Ontario, Gordon Grose of Windsor, will be among the visiting dignitaries at a banquet.

The annual church service and parade is scheduled for the following day.

Permission Is Granted

TRENTON — Domtech Limited Monday received council's permission to separate water used for cooling in the plant from water used for sanitary services.

From this point on, the company will pay sewer charges for only that water used for its sanitary system.

The report from a committee of the whole session was approved.

Three Children Rescued From Smoke-filled House

By RUBY McCOY
Staff Correspondent

MARMORA — Three small boys were babysitter rescued from a smoke filled home at 34 Meaford Street in Marmora at about 2:30 Monday afternoon.

The children's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Paul McIlroy had gone to Madoc, leaving the children, Shirley Earth, 13, to look after their three small sons.

The children were put upstairs for their afternoon nap but later three-year-old Dennis came down stairs and complained by the babysitter who had dozed off and was unaware of the smoke that was rapidly filling the home.

The fire is believed to have started in the electrical wiring at the top of the stairs between the floor and the downstairs ceiling.

The smoke was first noticed by Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Phillips as they left their home across the street for work at Eldorado Frontice School.

Mrs. Phillips ran back and called the Marmora fire department when her husband went across to the McIlvoy home.

Three men, George Brown, of Springbrook, his brother, Ivan and Jim Loveless were on their way to work when they noticed the smoke pouring from the house, and stopped to give assistance to the children.

A child was seen standing at a bedroom window when Jim Loveless ran next door to get a ladder.

Marmora fire department arrived and firemen Ronald Walton found an airpack before climbing the stairs to rescue one-and-a-half year old David from the bed.

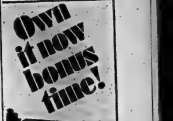
The baby was rushed to Dr. H.G. Hyde's office for treatment before being taken by ambulance to Belleville General Hospital where he was kept overnight.

Damage was confined to the floor area where the firemen had to tear it up.

Chief Denies Statement

TRENTON — Trenton's Fire Chief Cecil Hillis, in a letter to council said never in his experience in this community has the fire department been left unattended when men have been dispatched to the scene of a fire.

This statement came by way as an answer to a story that appeared in The Intelligencer last Thursday where the chief was quoted as saying it could be 20 minutes before a man could be sent back to the station to man the telephones while the rest of the men fought a fire in Murray Township.



Mayor Robert Patrick read only one sentence from the chief's letter and gave no elaboration on the remainder of the document.

Copies were not released to the press.

Notice of Public Hearings into the Transmission of Power from Lennox to Oshawa

1. The Province of Ontario appointed Dr. Omond Solandt, under the Public Inquiries Act, by Order-in-Council OC-808/73 dated the 21st day of March, 1973, to inquire into the most appropriate route or routes for the transmission of power to the Toronto load centre in Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission's existing Lennox transformer station in Wesleyville and Bowmanville".

2. Commissioner Solandt has requested Ontario Hydro to file a written (technical) report, pertaining to this matter and to present an oral summary of the report to interested parties at a public hearing commencing at 10 a.m., or as soon thereafter as may be, on April 2, 1974, in the Royal Canadian Legion Hall, 89 Toronto Road, Port Hope, Ontario.

3. Any interested party who wishes to present a brief should file a copy of such brief with the Secretary on or before April 26, 1974, indicating that he or she intends that he wishes to speak at a subsequent public hearing and, if so, whether at Port Hope or at Belleville.

4. Any other interested party who wishes to make oral representations at the subsequent public hearings, either personally or through a representative, should indicate his intent to do so in writing to the Secretary, on or before April 26, 1974.

Such parties should specify in writing the area of their concern and indicate the nature of the testimony which they wish to give at the subsequent hearings, and whether at Port Hope or at Belleville.

5. Commissioner Solandt will hold a pre-hearing, beginning at 10 a.m., on April 29, 1974, in the Royal Canadian Legion Hall, Port Hope, in order that the schedule and procedures of the subsequent public hearings may be discussed with interested parties.

6. Commissioner Solandt will hold public hearings, beginning at 9:00 a.m., in the Royal Canadian Legion Hall, Port Hope, on May 2, 3, 7, 8, 10, 22, 23, 24, 1974, (and on such additional days as may be required); and at the Four Seasons Hotel, 11 Key Bridges Road, Belleville, on May 15, 16, 17, 28, 30, 31, 1974, (and on such additional days as may be required), in order that interested parties may have an opportunity to ask questions of Ontario Hydro and to present evidence.

7. To accommodate special circumstances, and unique local concerns, Commissioner Solandt will consider requests, by interested parties, to hold additional hearings in other parts of Ontario, either day or evening sessions. All such requests, however, should be filed with the Secretary on or before April 26, 1974.

8. Copies of Ontario Hydro's report and recommendations will be on view in area Municipal offices, and the Solandt Commission office. Copies of all briefs filed will be on view at the Solandt Commission office, the Royal Canadian Legion Hall in Port Hope, and the Ontario Hydro Eastern Region Office, 420 Dundas Street East, Belleville. Individual copies of Ontario Hydro's report may be purchased from the Ontario Government Bookstore, 880 Bay Street, Toronto.

Strain on Resources

It may be pertinent to question, as we have done of late, the destination of "aid" programs to countries in Africa where east and west vie in the political favours of this or that government, the better to extend their own influence; countries too where "liberation" movements are active and guerrilla warfare rife. Thus it may be asked does some of this aid find its way into the wrong hands?

There are no precise answers to these questions. But who can ignore the stark facts of drought-stricken regions of Africa or the reports from that continent that illustrate by word and text the magnitude of the disaster taking place there.

Drought and starvation are the order of the day over a vast area of black Africa. In a recent letter to The Intelligencer, Catherine Harvey of the Oxfam organization conducting relief operations in Ethiopia, the optimistic about the program but warned that continued emergency relief was required.

In a wider scale food shortages around the world afford a prospect of even greater calamity. In an article in The Christian Science Monitor in recent days, Richard Critchfield warns that the "poorest fourth of the world could slip into a period of incredible chaos within the next twelve months."

"Normally restrained experts on energy, agriculture, population, and the global economy," Critchfield adds, "are starting to predict bankruptcy, social breakdown, and starvation for as many as 1 billion people by late this year or early 1975."

He says some 30 countries could be affected, mostly in tropical Africa, South Asia, and the Central American region. Paul Gerbet-Lejole, head of the Canadian Development Agency, painted a similar stark picture in a speech in Vancouver in recent days, warning that inflation and wheat shortages is cutting down on food for the needy abroad.

Writer Critchfield cites as reasons for the crisis situation the proliferation of cost of energy, which is already placing great strain on the poorer nations; low-credit deals for surplus U.S. food at a standstill, growing U.S. isolationism; a drop in world wheat reserves and mounting cost of what is left; the population explosion, and a shift in climatic patterns posing the threat of drought on the one hand and floods on the other, depending on the region.

He envisages global chaos unless vast sums of both money and material aid from the wealthy nations are poured into the lands affected by these disturbing trends, as well as accelerated development of such resources as they possess. Ceylon and Nepal (not exactly underdeveloped countries themselves) for instance have unexploited hydro-electric potential, while India has coal reserves that only await development.

There is hope then. Such development is already taking place in some areas, as Hydro spokesman Bob Hillery told Belleville Rotarians recently — in Iran, India, Ghana and Nigeria, and with the help of Canadian expertise. But there is much more to be done if global disaster is to be averted.

The Jail Syndrome

Author Clifford Irving, freed from jail last month after serving 16 months on charges arising from his fake autobiography of Howard Hughes, said "Prison is a farce, a disaster and one of the great contributors to the crime rate."

He is probably right. The fact that inmates frequently serve their time in institutions that have changed little in more than a century (the Don Valley jail in Toronto is a case in point) is indicative of the soul-destroying nature of prison life.

On the other hand things are better in some of the better establishments, such as the medium-security prisn at Millhaven. Here an inmate is almost as well off as if he were in a hotel, or so it is rumored.

And of course there is easier parole these days, to the point that the authorities have been proven too often to be overly lenient — and on occasions with tragic consequences.

How to temper justice with mercy and the fulfillment of human needs remains the big problem. Prison reform of necessity must remain a plank of any even cautious growth, for at stake also is the security of innocent people. Meanwhile author Irving, with his background, should have been in as good a position as any to have avoided being placed behind bars.

Nervousness in Brussels

Britain's Relations with Common Market Are Clouded

By CY FOX

BRUSSELS (CP) — Nervous bureaucrats at the Brussels headquarters of the European Common Market are still trying to evaluate the significances of the assumption of power by the Labor party in Britain.

Certainly this event should mean a renegotiation of the terms governing Britain's entry into the Common Market.

At least this was part of Labor's campaign platform—given extra emphasis by Tory rebel Enoch Powell's spectacular expressions of support for Labor in the last week before the Feb. 28 British election.

But Common Market officials now are finding consolation in the fact that the man supervising Britain's relations with Europe will be Foreign Secretary James Callaghan, an obvious moderate.

They also hope that Prime Minister Harold Wilson will be able to cite his government's minority status as a reason for not pressing a radically anti-marketeer line in Parliament.

Yet the future of Britain's relations with the European Market clouded—even though Wilson's line may not be to seek fundamental changes in the accession treaty.

Already the newly established British government has sought and obtained a postponement of the next vital meeting of Common Market ministers about farm prices.

The French particularly are impatient for action on this matter, with politically powerful agricultural interests in France loudly calling for higher prices on beef and dairy products.

The first step in any change in relations between Britain and other Market members may be merely be an adjustment in the timetable of the controversial Common Agricultural Policy rather than any formal attempt to alter the fundamental treaty.

Some mainland Europeans, however, are of the opinion that the issue of British membership in the Common Market didn't play a major role in the election despite the prominence given to Enoch Powell's campaign interventions.

The Europeans also are cooling signs not only in Callaghan's appointment to the foreign office but also in the confirmed government pronouncements of the Common Market members as merely be an adjustment in the terms.

Incumbent for action on this Agriculture Minister Fred Peart, however, is acknowledged to be an anti-market man.

But the mainland Europeans see Peart as adopting a cautious line on treaty renegotiation because of Labor's precarious position in Parliament.

The first big test of Labor's intentions—its approach to the bargaining on the crucial issue of this coming years farm prices—has been postponed.

This delay in itself should give the Common Markets officials and member states a chance to adapt themselves not only to the British changes of government but also to the switch in France's agricultural spokesmen, the possible transformation resulting from the March 10 elections in Belgium and a cut whatever realignment might result from the volatile Italian political situation.

The British election has been of great significance to the future of the already decentralized EEC as a governing body. But changes which continue to take place, particularly in Westminster, in other market countries also will have a big bearing on the conduct and the cohesion of the community in the months immediately ahead.

Letters to the Editor

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Now the citizens of Belleville know for sure that nowhere among them is an individual capable and available to fill the position of Executive Director of the UCS. Hence the UCS now says that "any grant would be applied to the agency's overall operation." It would be a good idea if council and this organization got together and decided to tell the public the same story.

I had little doubt that this deal was cut and dried from the day the two parties first met. Subsequent events would tend to support my supposition.

I have lost all faith in the UCS, any I had left for the grant application and most of what I had for the municipal process of democracy as it operates in this city.

Thurlow does not need parents and children working together in Sports, Recreation, or even better, Intergenerational. Referring to the letter from a "Thurlow Parent", I cannot understand why this parent did not sign his or her name.

Back in the years 1942-43 maybe it was a rat-race to pet cedar bark off a cedar rail and call it in newspaper to smoke, but now I agree society is moving at a fast pace. Don't smoke pot, drink beer at 18 and with long hair you can get into hotels at 15, so what is the matter with Minor Sports keeping the children busy for a few hours a week.

I can't help it if this parent wants her children under her wings; believe me they will fly away when they grow up and may never come back. Freedom is the explanation for their own entertainment and being able to live life more leisurely than city friends is fine, if you can find the facilities in Thurlow. Please don't go to the "clean" Moira River or our beautiful parks. Also, don't criticize 1,000 children playing organized sports.

I enjoy other children the same as I enjoy my own and if I have the time to spend with recreation means instead of moonlighting like a lot of other people I will umpire a ball game, coach minor sports, give another boy a ride home from practice, even if he is on do or drugs or spend hours in hockey rinks in the winter but I tried to show them right, not like "Thurlow Parent" who spends time criticizing those who do help in Minor Sports.

I have been active in Minor Sports for many years and I don't neglect my family and I enjoy meeting the parents who want to lie to their back yards and criticize. God bless 'em.

Last week's council meeting saw the procedural bylaw amended by Councillor Ackerman. Apparently council feels that it lacks authority or is in need of bolstering.

Cause for the concern seems to be the refusal of some or some members of council to effectively stop or at least curtail citizens' deputations who have an unpleasant habit of wasting everyone's time but their's to hear.

From what I heard on the broadcast portion of the meeting they haven't a thing to worry about. All I can say is citizens do not even now have an inherent right to appear and be heard by their elected representatives, so what are they worrying about?

Councillor Reeve is a suggestion that citizens who wish to appear should submit their briefs days prior to the council meeting so that their presentation can be voiced for content. That is a nice way of saying that as long as you are saying what we want to hear, we'll let you, if you are not, you will not be heard.

So all you naughty complainers out there, your briefs must contain words like why, what, who or how much and you will be OK.

Solar Equipment Is Costly

This is the last of three articles on solar energy from an interview conducted by UNESCO officers attending a meeting in Keswick with Professor Felix Trombe, head of research at the French National Centre of Scientific Research.

Q. The chief obstacle to a massive use of solar energy appears to be the heavy cost of the equipment. Don't you think that the future of the use of energy will depend on the interest industry takes in it? So far industry seems to have been put off by the limited market for solar stoves at this time, and in developing countries, by the lack of capital to purchase the equipment.

TROMBE: That's the whole root of the matter. Until industry takes an interest in the different forms of energy, and no mass production and no lowering of prices will be possible, we will be to the advantage of industry in the developed countries. large-scale production of solar equipment and installations would be profitable for mass applications in third world countries, many of which have to face the investment needed to mass-produce on their own account.

But here we come up against another problem: the working time of the energy-producing unit, and its rational use.

A traditional power station operates round the clock: a solar power station operates only eight hours out of 24. So the installations have to be made to pay in terms of those eight hours of effective work.

There are various methods of storing energy which make it possible always to have it producing electricity during the night. And during the night people don't need energy so much; they are asleep. These are the kinds of problems open to all producers of electricity.

At all events, it would be wrong to say that there is a maze of the world that needs drawing for it would be extremely useful — a map showing the price of fuel oil and other fuels in the various countries and in different areas of those countries.

But it is true to say that in recent years the prospects for solar energy have changed. If the facts are faced, and if preconceived ideas are given no earnest, many apparent problems will disappear, and a certain number of questions already should be achieved in a relatively short time.

Unesco can play an important role here by supporting teaching and research. It was with Unesco's help, for example, that the university of Rome first developed instruction in solar energy was recently set up in Perpignan. Unesco can also organize contacts and exchanges between researchers, students, specialists and laboratories studying this question throughout the world.

In the longer term, Unesco might promote the setting up of an international solar energy commission.

Egypt's President Sadat Upstages Meir; Emerges as Leading Third World Statesman

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

The eyes of the Middle East are turned on Egypt and on its President Anwer Al-Sadat. He has emerged from the last war against Israel and the Kissinger-arranged negotiations as a leading Third World statesman.

In terms of the world press the spotlight has switched from a moody and angry Mrs. Meir to a buoyant Anwer Sadat and to his country out of the doldrums of always being the alleged loser in wars with Israel.

Many factors have come to bear on Egypt's emergence to a role of self-confidence and assurance in the Arab world. Personality and style of leadership have to do with the continued Soviet arms build-up in Egypt on Egypt's position of some weight at Islamic bloc conferences.

Most of them have to do with President Sadat's style, biding his time as the man who followed the charismatic Abdel Gamal Nasser who kept Egyptians at a fever heat of nationalism but was then no warrior.

One remembers the late President Nasser was more popular in Egypt after the disastrous defeat in June, 1967 which lost Egypt the Sinai and centre of over Sorts canal, than he was before it.

With consummate skill he turned abject defeat into victory and his near-resignation into a new personal mandate. But that even the emotionally volatile Egyptians could live forever on that kind of deceit and Sadat knew it.

The immediate result was speculation that Sadat could not survive after Nasser and least of all engage in a major campaign of "de-Nasserization."

But in time he has done both. The firing a few weeks ago of the pro-Nasser editor of the famous and much quoted Egyptian government daily al-Ahram is the most publicized, but also one of the last of his many moves to remove the role of Nasser to posterity.

Sadat had flushed out already Nasserite elements in the state controlled press, the numerous government agencies and corporations and in the armed forces.

The senior officers who commanded in the Yom war were police on military skills than ideological ones. The Egyptian secret police remained and the early rout of the over-confident Israelis is now perpetuated in popular Cairo plays and folk art.

And the return of Egyptian forces to the Sinai side of the Suez canal under the Kissinger-inspired truce was the final positive event which has given Sadat pre-eminence over the memory of Nasser.

But it has all taken much time and from him a good deal of eating humble pie in the process. Many successor to the great charismatic leader must live inevitably in the shadow for some time after the "maximum figure" has gone.

Peron in Argentina remains the dominant figure since 1945 as the charismatic leader who rose and fell, only to succeed himself again.

Sadat's strong emergence will also give the Arab-Egypt clout among a coterie of very rich oil-producing states.

In exchange his country with its largest population of any Middle East Arab nation and an historic role in bringing together Arab states in Cairo conferences, can more widely influence Arab policy.

Other Egyptian institutions, chiefly the Cairo University are centuries-old centres of Islamic thought and culture.

Blending this mix of cultural, administrative and geographic prominence with the economic power status of the oil-rich Islamic sisters. Egypt under Sadat can well perform on an even wider Arab stage.

MPPs Act Like Election in Offing

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Services
TORONTO — There are those who say the election is already on.

There has never been a time between elections when there has been so much down-to-earth political activity.

At a minimum of once a week, at least, it seems one or other of the party leaders, and often all three of them, are out in the province somewhere, on all-day, straight political tours.

The pattern of procedure is for a leader, accompanied by his entourage, one or two ministers, has been cut in advance, to arrive in a district about 10 a.m., to visit schools, hospitals, Rotary clubs and whatever other free audience is available. Then there is a wind-up at night with a great rank-and-file-leader-conclave at which the general public gets together and throws its brickbats.

This political approach was started by the PCs.

It began as part of their new-new outlook on politics.

The lesson from Kennedy politics; always keep the pressure on.

But it has now been adopted quickly by the other parties.

It stated with Premier Davis being scheduled for one-day visits to different parts of the country.

Then it has now developed, it seems, where each of the three party leaders go out at least once a week spreading the gospel of his particular political philosophy.

This is a new political development and by all standards it is a good one.

Communication is our big political problem today.

Our regular media can't handle it.

Political problems are just too big and too complex.

Now at least this is direct talk.

Through these meetings anybody in the community can get his views published and explanations.

It would seem to be a step forward for that system we call democracy.

Lewis Sees Need For Apartments

TORONTO (CP) — It might be impossible to rent an apartment in Ontario if vacancy trends continue over the next 18 months, Stephen Lewis, New Democratic Party Leader, charged Monday.

The NDP chieftain called on the provincial government to breach its ideological barriers against public land acquisition and end it's "unlovely alliance" with land developers to help solve the housing crisis.

Using his reply to the speech from the throne to launch a bitter attack on government fiscal policy, Mr. Lewis predicted that the rising cost of living would eventually cripple Progressive Conservative administration.

Before presenting the traditional motion of non-confidence, Mr. Lewis blasted the government front benches for using the housing problem as a "class cure."

He charged that no sooner had Sidney Handleman been sworn in as housing minister when he "leaped into the arms of the developers."

The NDP leader gave the legislature nearly a dozen examples of how Toronto house prices have jumped in the last 10 years.

One house, in a predominantly low-income area, sold for $7,000 in 1966, $31,500 in 1972 and $61,000 in March, 1973.

Other citieshad similar patterns, he said.

Union Man Denies Any Threat

HAMILTON (CP) — A carpenters union official denied Monday that he ever threatened an area contractor or sought financial favors from a trust company in return for bringing it union business.

Charles Guagliano was testifying before a royal commission on crime in the Ontario construction industry which ended its hearings here Monday.

Mr. Guagliano, business manager and financial secretary for Local 18,United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, testified that "at no time" did he threaten plastering contractor Patrick Daly or Mrs. Daly.

Mr. Daly, owner of P. J. Daly Plastering Contracting Ltd. of Port Hope, Ont., testified Feb. 20 that Mr. Guagliano threatened him. He also said he and his wife received threatening telephone calls and that there were veiled threats that his three sons might be harmed if he did not sign a contract with the carpenters' union.

Mr. Guagliano said he told Mr. Daly that if he was going to be working on jobs within the carpenters' union jurisdiction he should sign with the carpenters' union.

He denied ever having asked Mr. Daly for 30 per cent of his business in return for developing him become one of the area's biggest contractors.

Nixon Opposes Dentists Supervising Denturists

TORONTO (CP) — Denturists should be allowed to practise in Ontario without having to come under the direct supervision of dentists, Opposition Leader Robert Nixon said Monday.

Mr. Nixon was speaking in the legislature on his private member's bill that would allow denturists—those who make false teeth—to work without being subject to dentists' orders.

The government passed legislation a year ago which required denturists to take tests, become dental technicians and work under the supervision of a dentist.

Many denturists refused to take the test and several of the more than 100 practising in Ontario have been charged under the provisions of the act.

"Surely this kind of intimidation is unconscionable and unacceptable," Mr. Nixon told the legislature.

He urged Health Minister Frank Miller to change the act.

— But Dr. Harry Parrott (PC Oxford), a dentist, defended the legislation saying that if denturists were allowed to practise, other unsupervised groups such as dental therapists and laboratory technicians would have to be allowed the same right.

That, he said, would be a "fragmentation process rather than a team approach."

Child Welfare System Said to Need Study

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's child welfare system operates without any standards to measure the effectiveness of the service it provides, says a provincial government study.

The study by a four-man committee headed by H. R. Hanna, made public Monday, was sharply critical of many of the practices of Ontario's 50 Children's Aid Societies.

But it fell short of urging they be abolished, as many had advocated, proposing instead that they be closely examined to determine whether they can be improved "before adopting a more radical approach to reform."

In a section of the report dealing with income security, the committee said a reassessment should be made of single mothers receiving welfare with a view to providing them with jobs. It said the requirement to work need not be taken to require full-time work, arguing that to maintain that a mother's place is in theoome is no longer valid.

It said the same principle of providing this type of employment should also apply to wives of unemployable men.

The 115-page report, commissioned by the ministry of community and social services, also said there was no effective mechanism in the system to deal with complaints, appeals or review of services.

Because there were no standards, it was impossible to measure the cost-effectiveness of programs, or to determine whether the needs of various regions were being met.

Planning tends to be "unrelated to any objective assessment of relative need or probable results."

It said the ministry's responsibility "is unavoidable," but it was not discharging its full responsibility in delegating the care and maintenance of Crown wards to the societies.

"We have learned, for example, that in some areas the children are apt to be placed in series of homes during their wardship, with all the resulting upheaval and emotional stress that such moves entail."

It said the performance of the societies in those and other instances should be monitored by the ministry.

The committee suggested that the mandate of the societies be extended, perhaps linking them with privately-financed family-service agencies that operate in most sizable Ontario communities.

Pension Control Opposed

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government has been urged by one of its advisory groups to release its hold on the Ontario Municipal Employees Retirement System (OMERS), one of Canada's largest pension funds.

By legislation, surplus funds of the system, with an annual income of $125 million and investments of $500 million, must be invested in provincial debentures.

The province makes no contribution to the fund, which provides benefits to 80,000, but has the right to use of the money.

A study group, headed by Paul Hickey, a senior government policy adviser, said that if the funds were invested in a full range of marketable securities rather than in non-marketable Ontario debentures, it could achieve a higher rate of return.

Nursing Students Feel No Loyalty To Loyalist

By ISABEL HUGGAN

Half a year has passed since the Edith Cavell School of Nursing moved its classes to the Northumberland Wing of Loyalist College. The two-year training course alternates between theory in the college classrooms, and practise on the wards of Belleville General Hospital.

The change in operation has most affected the senior students, who have had to adjust midstream t o a different schedule.

"It's just so completely different to last year," said Diane Stairs.

"We can't get used to it," Christine Pole and Dodie Penny, two other senior students interviewed at the college, agreed.

"This seems like going to school instead of training to be a nurse. I feel like the idea of nursing and taking care of people is something when it's included with general education," one girl said.

Another girl claimed that taking classes at the college has depersonalized and fragmented the whole idea of nursing for her.

These senior girls also object to the inconvenience brought about by the division between locations.

"Travelling back and forth wastes time. You have to plan what time you have so carefully, the way things are now.

"Before, everything was right there, convenient. We lived in the residence just seconds away from the library and demonstration rooms where we could go any time at all."

"Now if we want to practise techniques, or get out reference books we have to do it during the day at the college, where we're already busy with classes. "I'd take a cab from the residence at night costs money — you have to have three other girls to share the fare in order to keep it at 50 cents — and it disrupts your whole evening to leave. So the result is we don't use the facilities here at the college as much as we should."

"Last year," said a senior student, "our whole lives revolved around nursing and the hospital.

"Our class is very close-knit, closer than the junior class, we think, because we were much more together last year. We may not have had as much space but it just meant we worked more closely."

One of the predominant feelings among these girls is that they don't identify with Loyalist College. Their loyalties are entirely with Edith Cavell.

"We are going to graduate from Edith Cavell. That means a lot to us, we don't want to be college graduates."

Why not? Some feel like the girl who said she feels superior to the college students. Others simply feel that a diploma from Loyalist would mean nothing to them, since they've had nothing to do with Loyalist.

"We pay a $35. student fee here in order to take advantage of all the services available to the student body. But we're too busy while we're here two days a week to even have a game of badminton. It's just money down the drain."

The girls have little opportunity to socialize, isolated as they are in their third floor wing. Yet none of them would want it any other way. Walking to classes spread throughout the building would waste their time, and taking classes with students from other disciplines "pointless".

Although they lunch in the common cafeteria, the nurses tend to stick together, unless they have friends from high school days who are at the college.

The girls were willing to admit that if there were residences on the Loyalist Campus in which they could live, they'd feel more part of the college than the nursing school.

"But as it is now, our entire affiliation is with Edith Cavell," one student said. "Our school is rated among the top five in the province, and that's what we want to identify with."

Some of the senior nursing students gather before leaving the college at 4 p.m. to check on their latest assignment. Peering over Diane Stairs' shoulder cre Marg Jowett, Christine Pole and Jo Liddenberg. These girls are among those that say their allegiance is strictly to Edith Cavell Nursing School rather than to the college.

Working in the demonstration room in the nursing wing at Loyalist College, Roxanne Johnston practises taking Alice Tvort's blood pressure during their noon lunch break. Like the other nursing students, they have learned to make use of all available time for practising procedures at the college that they'll need to use on the hospital wards.

Future Nurses Will Encounter Fewer Problems

The switch in routine has been a little more successful in the first year of the course. Newcomers are more positive in their approach to the division of work and study areas.

Their acceptance of the situation stems largely from the fact that "that's the way things were from the beginning".

"Basically, you're coming to school the first year. It's more theory than practice to begin with. I had expected it to be like this," said Gail Dart, one of the ten married women in the first year course.

Gail drives in from Trent River each day and, like other students who don't live in residence, doesn't mind taking courses at Loyalist.

"The course is arranged so that we attend Loyalist Monday to Wednesday, and spend the end of the week on the wards, doing practical work based on the theory we've just learned." Gail explained.

"The senior girls are in the hospital while we're in the classroom."

"I wish we had more time to practise what we learn," said Eileen Gorman, who commutes from Trent River as well. "We really only have our lunch periods during which to use the demonstration rooms."

The large and well-equipped rooms are kept busy by the nursing students for two hours each day. Two girls working during their lunch period, Roxanne Johnston and Alice Tvort, both agreed that from what they had seen at the Edith Cavell building, these rooms are preferable.

"There's much more room for us all to work at once here," Roxanne said.

The girls talked about how busy they are in their course, and attribute this at least partly to the course changing from three years to two years in duration.

"We're taking the same amount of work in less time. We're bound to be busy!"

Consequently, these girls do not use Loyalist's facilities either, although they'd like to.

"Our schedule makes it impossible. We're in class from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and then the bus comes for us. We can't take part in sports or club activities at all."

The bus is a sore point with all the students. Told that transportation would be free, the girls were annoyed to find that it costs 25 cents each way, between the residence to the college.

As a result many of the student nurses hitch-hike as a faster, cheaper form of travel.

The first year students feel isolated from the rest of the college, but see no alternatives to the situation.

"There are never any boys on this floor."

Although the trend at the college is for instructors and students to be on a first-name basis, this doesn't apply to the nursing wing.

"Oh, we'd never call any of our instructors by her first name. We use Miss and Mrs. just as we do on the hospital wards."

"That's part of the nursing tradition."

The fear of losing tradition bothers some of the first year students, who feel that the seniors' graduation from Edith Cavell is more in keeping with their idea of nursing than a college graduation.

The girls are full of praise for their instructors who are coping with the problems the change has presented, and working out solutions.

"But we still don't have a strong sense of identity," a first year student said. "Here at the college we're neither fish nor fowl Probably the classes who follow us will fit in better."

Three first year nursing students stop for a minute to talk about their attitudes toward the changes in the nursing program. Gail Dart, mother of three, Eileen Gorman, and Pauline Meloche, mother of four, are all satisfied with the current situation. Both Gail and Pauline said the change from a three year to a two year course has enabled them to take the course since it decreases the money and time they must spend to become nurses. They find however, that the course is especially heavy, and leaves them no time to become involved with Loyalist College.

Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch
Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids ... and repair damaged tissue.
A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.
One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.
And most important—this improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. All this was accomplished with a healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.
In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and, makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a stated cause of hemorrhoids.
Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or "Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).
Satisfaction or your money refunded.

Successful Living

Wife Can't Reform Slob Should Just Stop Trying

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: I am living common-law with a slob. He eats with his mouth wide open and I can hear him all the way to the kitchen. The noise is unreal! I always have a big ash tray beside his dish, but he insists on just putting scrap right on the coffee table, and his butts in the plate.

How can I teach my children manners when my husband has none? He scatters his clothes from one end of the house to the other, and then yells at the kids for playing with his boots or sitting on his coat.

He is very hard to please. He criticizes me constantly. I am a little overweight and he makes me look in the mirror to see how fat I am.

Even the slightest improvement in him would be considered great.

Depressed.

Dear Depressed: I suppose you thought when you committed matrimony him you'd reform him. It rarely happens.

It can't be much fun living with him, with all those complaints — as well as all that other notice pollution and house-wrecking. What is his hold on you? I thought common-law arrangements were the kind one entered into because one wanted to, and stayed in there for the same reason.

Either you should give him back as good as he gives you, when it comes to complaints; or call the whole thing off. Unless there is genuine love between you, this just can't be good for the children. But if there is love, it is going to be up to you to "open up" communications and let him know how you feel — without fear of consequences. Otherwise the whole thing eventually falls apart anyway.

Dear Doris: Your column has been in the paper ever since I can remember; that's more than 15 years. That leads me to believe that you are quite a bit older than I am.

In your answer to "Thoughts" (who wrote about faith and those who scoff at it) you stated: "And yet, the believers are the ones who can stay on a steady keel when anxieties make the unbelievers stumble."

I can only describe you as retarded. Where did you spend your life?

I've seen people that never believed in God because they're too bright for that. They stood on a steadier keel than God believers will ever understand. I have worked in mental institutions and have travelled a bit. I saw with my own eyes what happens to people that believe in God. Its decrepitude that results from a belief in Him.

You seem to assume that non-believers are stupid. As a non-believer I have accepted you as a retardate because of your limited vision.

For be a Christian takes a lot of courage because it also takes a lot of courage to lower one's mentality to that level. Since you are a book lecturate, Doris, I feel that I have spoken above your head.

Over Your Head.

Dear Over My Head: Well! I often wondered what was wrong with me. A retardate!

May I ask, incidentally, just what took you to the mental institution to work?

If decrepitude is what happens to people with faith in God, I'll order up some. Praise the Lord and pass the ammunition. (Does that quote from a wartime song give you a further clue to my age?)

Confidential to Frustrated: Your husband is aware he is disappointing you, even though you do not nag. But we all find our vitality slipping in later years - not just when it comes to physical love-making.

He may feel he is losing his grip, now that he is over 50. And the fact that all your children have left the nest and do not need him any longer does not help any. Mental attitude and emotions are so tied in with physical performance that these things make him even less able.

Just the same, physical affection can continue to bring happiness all through life. What matters is that you value each other as individuals, sharing thoughts, ideas. Sex excitement gets less important. Do what you can to keep physically fit and emotionally serene and nature may surprise you.

(Doris invites comments. Write to her in care of this newspaper.)

Ann Landers

She Wants to Meet Nice Men

Dear Ann Landers: I'm 30, divorced, and I've tried all the "proper" ways to meet decent men. Here's where I am now:

1. Stuck in a bowling league with some fun-loving sports — average age, 75.

2. Got fed-up joined a church singles group with a great bunch of folks. All very neurotic.

3. Stuck in a political club as an officer with a bunch of dedicated people. All married.

As it now stands, I have Wednesday evenings free and I'd like to invest that evening in something a little more promising than my other ties. Would you please ask your readers two questions:

1. Other women who found themselves divorced and widowed: Where and how did you meet your second husband?

2. Unmarried, straight, non-alcoholic, self-supporting males over 30: Where do you go in hopes of meeting a woman worth marrying?

I don't get much sympathy from the old folks in the bowling league, or the neurotic singles, or the political married. They all say the same thing: "You shouldn't have any trouble. You have so much to offer." Now my only problem is to find someone to offer it to. How about some help from your corner? — Wednesdays Free

Dear Free: O.K., here's your letter. How about it, second-time-arounders? Where did you meet your second husband? And you unattached, desirable guys — where do you go in search of a girl you could bring home to mother? Please tell me so I can tell her.

Dear Ann Landers: I was irritated by that letter from the woman who implied that when the wife is in the driver's seat and her husband is beside her, it means she is the dominant personality in the family and so things — figuratively as well as literally.

In our family, it's quite a different story. My husband is a strong man and the head of the household, except when he has had too much to drink. It doesn't happen very often but the last time it did, he insisted on driving home from a party and nearly killed us both.

Now we have an understanding. Whenever he has had more than one drink, I do the driving. I told him, "I'll take a taxi before I ride with a drunk." He got the message. — Get Bombed And You're A passenger

Dear G.B.: Since booze is a factor in approximately 50 per cent of car accidents, your position makes a great deal of sense. I hope other wives will follow your lead. Here's another good letter:

Dear Ann Landers: I do the driving in our family. Although my husband looks like the picture of health, he has a medical problem which would make driving hazardous. The details are nobody's business and I feel no obligation to explain.

Occasionally some clod will make a crack about my being in the driver's seat. I retaliate with an icy stare. I have seriously considered having a sign made which reads "MYOB" — or have you copyrighted the phrase? — Cheyne Christi

Dear Chris: Be my guest.

Branching Out

New Women's Magazine Appears

EDMONTON (CP) — Branching Out, a bi-monthly women's magazine making its debut on Canadian newsstands, is not primarily a feminist publication.

"But we don't intend to publish anything anti-feminist," nor include recipes and fashions that characterize other women's magazines, said Susan McLaughlin, co-ordinating editor.

The focus of the Edmonton-based magazine is on the work Canadian women are doing in areas as diverse as politics, literature and sports.

The preview issue contained an article by Penny Margetts, national co-chairman of Indian Rights for Indian Women, an informal talk with novelist Margaret Laurence, poetry by Margaret Atwood, a profile of Sue Naitrass, champion trapshooter, and a review of the work of artist Eva Diener.

It's an ambitious project for the editor and her 10 co-workers who are "almost completely new to every aspect" of magazine production.

"Basically, we're not in any sense qualified," the said of the staff. "But we're attempting to maintain as high a level of journalism as possible."

The idea for Branching Out came partly from Ms., a feminist magazine published in the United States, "but large sections of Ms. are inapplicable to Canada."

In addition, Branching Out does not take the "firm and outright political stance" adopted by Ms.

"Our political act is to have only women working on the magazine."

Business Manager Mary Alice Heaton said she "would be sorry to see us fall into the feminist rhetorical trap."

The main problems confronting Branching Out are money and distribution, she said. The first edition of 5,000 copies, financed by ads, donations and a loan, resulted in a deficit of $500 to $600.

Applications for government grants have been turned down and literary contributions to the magazine, as well as the time of its staff, have been voluntary.

Sixty-five subscriptions at $9.50 for 12 issues have been sold. Individual issues cost $1.

The first goal is to break even on production costs, said editor McMaster. "We're not too far from that," chiefly because staff members do their own typesetting and layout.

Another goal is to establish minimum salaries for two or three people to work full-time on the magazine. Eventually it hopes to develop a circulation of about 15,000.

Distribution is handled through retail bookstores in Edmonton, Calgary, Ottawa and Vancouver, because distribution agencies are too expensive, said editor McMaster.

Although men are prohibited from contributing directly to Branching Out or participating in decision-making, they often drive staff members to meetings or babysit.

Business manager Heaton expressed it succinctly: "They do the joe jobs."

Sanderson Suspension Includes Playoffs

BOSTON (AP) — Controversial Derek Sanderson, known among National Hockey League fans for his free lifestyle and penalty-filling ability, is apparently through as a player for Boston Bruins.

"I think if he's going to get back on the right track as a hockey player he's going to have to take the initiative himself," said Harry Sinden, Bruins' general manager, in Chicago Monday where he was attending a meeting of NHL general managers.

Sinden also said he doubted the six-year-veteran centre would ever play another game for the Bruins.

The Bruins said Sanderson was suspended for the rest of the season and the Stanley Cup playoffs because of conduct detrimental to the proper operation of the hockey team."

Published reports said Sanderson and team-mate Terry O'Reilly had a fistfight before the Bruins 6-3 loss to the California Seals in Oakland Sunday night. A club spokesman said Sanderson went by bus with the team to the San Francisco airport for the return flight to Boston after the game, but he boarded only the plane.

Sanderson was reported to be in Los Angeles, but efforts by reporters to reach him failed.

"You don't suspend a 30-goal-a-age player just for missing a plane," Weston Adams Jr., the Bruins' president, said. He declined to comment further.

Sinden said the suspension applied to a series of incidents in practice and which started before the season began.

"A great deal of what happened is due to the stupidity of the managing director of this club," Sinden said of himself. "I should have been smart enough to see this coming from very early in the year."

Bob Woolf, Sanderson's attorney, blamed the 27-year-old player's troubles on management, and a personality conflict between Sanderson and Coach Bep Guidolin in specific.

"Derek has not been in good favor with the management people in Boston the last few months," Woolf said. "He's very concerned with the suspension. Again, it goes back to conflict with the coach. Everything that happened has been magnified."

Woolf, who said the suspension could involve a "substantial amount of money for Sanderson," said he will ask for a hearing on the suspension, "and I'm hopeful that when tempers are calmer, we can work something out."

He added that action might be taken through the players' association.

Sinden said the club had considered trading Sanderson before the NHL deadline Sunday night.

"We didn't try, really, perhaps intently, as intently as we could have," he said. "I felt he would snap out of it. There seemed to be a continual hanging between him and his coach."

The Bruins were idle Monday night, but tonight they play host to Buffalo Sabres. In other games, Toronto Maple Leafs visit St. Louis Blues, Philadelphia Flyers play New York Islanders, and Detroit Red Wings go to Vancouver to play the Canucks.

Two Rinks Are Undefeated

EDMONTON (CP) — Manitoba outlasted British Columbia 9-7 Monday to reduce the number of undefeated teams to two after three rounds in the Canada Games curling playdowns.

The only other foursome without a loss was Prince Edward Island.

The decision left B.C. with a 2-1 record, along with Saskatchewan, while Quebec, Alberta, New Brunswick, Ontario and Nova Scotia were all 1-2. Newfoundland was winless in three starts.

Manitoba's win over B. C. came after they dropped Ontario 9-5 in the morning draw.

In other third-round games, P.E.I. thrashed Ontario 13-3 in eight ends, Alberta cast aside Nova Scotia 13-1 in six, Saskatchewan held on for a 7-6 win over Quebec, and New Brunswick had to go an extra end to get past Newfoundland 12-10.

Other results of the second-round morning draw were B.C. over Saskatchewan 13-4 in seven ends, P.E.I. topping New-foundland 13-3 in nine, Nova Scotia stopping New Brunswick 10-6 and Quebec doubling up Alberta 8-4.

Manitoba's win by Chris Plasmario of Winnipeg over B.C.'s Linda Tyrrell of North Vancouver highlighted the second day of play.

Manitoba, the 1972 champion, trailed 3-2 after three ends but counted three on the second end while building up a 4-2 margin after three and a 7-3 lead after six.

But Miss Tyrrelle, 20, battled back with a steal of two in the eight to trail only 7-6. Then her draw attempt in the ninth rubbed on a guard, costing her two and the game.

Aaron, Williams And Blass Debut

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Hank Aaron made his spring debut Monday and Bowie Kuhn didn't even have to order it.

Shortly before baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn virtually ordered Atlanta Braves to change their plans and send Aaron out to pursue Babe Ruth's home-run record on opening day in Cincinnati, the veteran slugger appeared as a pinch-hitter against New York Yankees. He fouled off eight pitches from Mel Stottlemyre and then struck out.

However, Aaron's suspicious debut was overshadowed by the pitching of Atlanta's Ron Reed, Dave Cheadle, Joe Grzenda and Jamie Easterly who combined to burl a no-hitter and Braves won 4-0, with Rowland Office smacking a two-run homer.

Thanks to last December's ruling by Commissioner Kuhn, the American League president, which upheld Oakland Athletics' claim on Williams and prevented him from managing the Yankees, Williams was spared the embarrassment of piloting Monday's hitless wonders.

But he was in the stands at West Palm Beach, Fla., for the no-hitter. He spoke briefly with Yankee president Gabe Paul, then sat and watched the game. He confirmed that he's owner Charles O. Finley last week told him he was free to manage any team except the Yankees.

In Sarasota, Blass, a World Series hero in 1971, gave up four runs in his 1974 exhibition debut as Chicago White Sox defeated Pittsburgh Pirates 6-2.

Blass, who won only three games last year, worked three innings and was hit hard.

Buddy Bradford hit a 450-foot homer for the White Sox off reliever John Morlan.

Bowie Kuhn Disapproves Braves' Plan

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn said Monday he disapproves of Atlanta Braves' plans not to start Hank Aaron in the season-opening series at Cincinnati and expects the veteran slugger to be in the lineup on opening day chasing Babe Ruth's home-run record.

Kuhn said he expects the Braves to use Aaron in the opening three-game series against the Reds April 4-6 "in accordance with the pattern of his use in 1973, when he started approximately every two of three Braves' games."

Kuhn's announcement put a damper on Atlanta owner Bill Bartholomay's expressed desire to have the 40-year-old Aaron break Ruth's record of 714 career home runs at home. The Braves begin an 11-game home stand on April 8.

Aaron finished the 1973 with 713 career homers.

The Braves had announced that Aaron would not start any of the games in Cincinnati but would be available as a pinch hitter.

Early Morning Blaze Guts Electronic Plant

By PETER GOODSPEED
Staff Reporter

Belleville firefighters spent more than four hours battling a fire that completely gutted the offices and assembly plant of Electronic Controls Ltd., at 305 Hanna Street, early this morning.

According to the plant's general manager, Norman Wilson, the plant, which employed 42 people, was valued at approximately $300,000. Other estimates, however, have placed the total property loss at closer to $500,000.

Firefighters were called to the scene around 12.45 a.m., when motorists, travelling along North Front Street — five blocks away — saw flames thrusting their way through the roof of the one-storey, aluminum-sided building.

The fire is believed to have started in the southeast corner of the building, where up to 100 gallons of paint and a number of large stacks of plywood were stored. It rapidly spread to a section of the building that housed an estimated five-years' supply of cardboard containers and burst through the roof and the southwest wall.

No one was believed to have been in the building at the time of the fire.

A night watchman left the premises around 9 p.m., while a sales engineer was reported to have dropped into the office around 10.30 p.m. to pick up some blue prints.

Fire Chief Leo Culhane said that when his men arrived at the fire, the inside of the building was blazing.

The aluminum walls, that held only a series of small windows on the front and sides of the building hindered firefighters, since they had to wait until the fire broke through the roof before they could try to extinguish it, the chief said.

Winds from the north-northeast ranging in speed from 15 to 20 miles an hour, fanned the fire and sent sparks flying into a nearby field where they started a small brush fire.

While the firefighters shivered in 20 degree temperatures and the spray from their hoses, great billowing clouds of smoke rolled across the northwest industrial park into Sidney Township.

Occasionally a series of small explosions could be heard as cans of paint and varnish blew up inside the burning building.

Firefighters managed to salvage a number of filing cabinets, blueprint trays and business machines from a concrete vault in the building's front offices.

The plant's chief engineer, Brian Millsay, told The Intelligencer that he believed there were "tons of cardboard in the building" since the company purchased its shipping supplies in bulk.

The cardboard containers were stored across the width of the building near the middle of the assembly plant, he said.

It was from that point that the fire spread outside the southwest wall and engulfed a loading dock.

A large, 24,000-pound, Ford truck was parked next the loading ramp at the southwest corner of the building and, when the dock went up in flames, had to be towed away from the building by firefighters who were taking a pumper down to fight the brush fire at the rear of the building.

Electronic Controls Ltd., a subsidiary of Digiac Corp. of the United States, manufactured technical and vocational electronic equipment for use in high schools.

Aerial Played Big Role

Belleville's aerial fire trucks played a big role in fighting the fire that last night gutted the offices and assembly plant of Electronic Controls Ltd. on Hanna Street. Due to the lack of access to the building, on account of the sturdy aluminum walls that had few windows, the firefighters were forced to fight the major portion of the fire from the air. By pouring water down onto the building's roof, the firefighters were able to combat the flaming piles of cardboard cartons that were stacked across the centre of the floor.

School Holidays Announced

Teachers in Hastings county will have nine professional development days next year instead of the 10 they got in 1973-74.

The reason is a slightly shortened school year. In 1973-74 there were 195 school days. Next year there will be only 194. The ministry of education regulations call for 185 teaching days a year.

Elementary schools will take the following days for professional development in 1974-75: Sept. 26,27; Nov. 21; Jan. 22; Feb. 20, 21 and June 25, 26, and 27.

Secondary schools will hew to a 130-year tradition and take their days off classroom instruction at the end of June — from June 17 through 27.

Winter break next year will run together with the Easter weekend. It will begin March 21 and give students 11 school-free days.

Picket Spots Marsh Fire

While Union Carbide production workers manned their pickets in front of the plant yesterday it was work as usual for the city's fire department.

The fire department was called in shortly before 5 p.m. yesterday afternoon by picket Bruce Patmore, who noticed two young lads setting fire to a marsh land by the bayshore. A 250,000 gallon tank of methanol was nearby.

The fire was relatively minor, said fire chief Leo Culhane, who said his men are often called in to put out small grass fires started by playing children.

Teachers Getting Special Assistance

Specialized personnel to back up teachers in each of the eight associate school groups in Hastings county were approved by trustees at Monday night.

An associate school group is a "family of schools" comprised of a high school and its feeder elementary schools. There are eight such ASGs in the county. Superintendent is in charge of two ASGs. In addition, each of the four superintendents is responsible for one or two subjects on the course of study for the BCI-Centennial superintendent, for instance, looks after the courses of study in math and science from kindergarten through grade 13.

Each ASG next year will have seven or eight support people who will provide expert help in curriculum planning, special education or psychology. All the experts are now on staff, but will be detached from classroom duties next year to act as special advisors.

Superintendent Wally Beer of BCI and Centennial ASGs will have three special education teachers, a psychologist, two educational assistants for the math and science curriculum and one educational assistant to advise the schools under his jurisdiction.

Robert Harwood, superintendent of Quinte and Moira, will have five special education teachers and two curriculum specialists in language.

The five special education teachers are needed in his ASGs, said Mr. Harwood, because of a concern about speech correction. About 194 pupils in his schools are in the with speech, he told the meeting.

Glenn Watson, responsible for Trenton and Bayside, has asked for four special education teachers, two assistants in math, two in history and one each in geography, physical science and two other assistants to meet the needs of his area.

Director of education Eric Runacres said the needs of the eight ASGs differed in three reasons. One was the readiness of the staffs to use the specialized knowledge available to them. Another was the needs of the students. The third was the availability of personnel with the specialized training and experience necessary to act as advisors.

Union Carbide In Stalemate

The strike by production workers at Union Carbide continues into its second day with a "breakdown in negotiations between the two sides yesterday.

Management and union officials met at the Four Seasons Hotel yesterday morning in an effort to reach some form of settlement.

The meeting lasted an hour and 50 minutes.

Robert Zelkowitz, business manager at Union Carbide, said "There's been no further progress and no date set for future meetings."

About 125 workers at the plant began strike action at 8 a.m. yesterday over a disagreement over wage increases.

At the last meeting between the two parties on March 4, the company offered the workers increases of 80c split evenly over a two-year period.

The union, Local 380 United Rubber Workers, wants a flat $1 increase over a one-year contract. Average wage there is now $3.35 an hour.

$175 Fine For Flight

A Belleville man, convicted of failing to stop at the scene of an accident, was yesterday fined $175 when he appeared in provincial court.

Edward M. Cain, 22, was charged Dec. 30 after he appeared at the Belleville police station to admit to being the driver of a car that had been involved in an accident that caused an estimated $1,170 worth of damage the night before.

Cain was westbound on Charlotte Street around 7.34 p.m., Dec. 29 when the car he was driving sideswiped a car on the south side of the roadway and crashed into the rear of a parked car.

After the initial collision, Cain tried to reverse his vehicle and ran into the parked car once again. He then got out of his car and fled down Moody Street, before police arrived.

Chairman On Cruise

Hastings county's board of education chairman, Mac Smith and Mrs. Smith, are cruising the Mediterranean in the company of about 1,000 school children.

Mr. Smith accompanied about 300 Hastings county secondary school students on their annual Mediterranean cruise aboard a Heworld Educational Cruises liner. In addition to the students from Canada and Great Britain, the liner carries a few paying adult tourists in deck state-rooms. The students sleep in dormitories below decks.

Mr. Smith was a guest of the liner last year on its Caribbean trip. This first holiday Mr. Smith had taken since his discharge from the army after serving in the First War.

"I think it's a good idea and I'll take a vacation on a regular basis every year, from now on," said Mr. Smith on his return last week.

Med 74 is conducted by Quinte Secondary history department head Lloyd Jones. Students are responsible for their own fares which have risen to about $500 this year because of higher fuel costs.

Two New Principals Appointed

Two new principals were appointed Monday night by Hastings county board of education to fill vacancies in Centre Hastings Secondary School in Tweed and North Hastings High School in Bancroft.

However, the identity of the two appointees is being withheld by the board until noon Wednesday. Information about the staff shifts will not be released, said an administrator, until the Wednesday publication deadline of the nine county weekly newspapers in the county.

The principal's position at Centre Hastings was left vacant by the appointment of Wally Beever as a superintendent of principal R. S. Beckley of North Hastings is retiring.

Spot Checks

After more than four hours of fighting to control the fire that last night destroyed the offices and assembly plant of Electronic Controls Ltd. on Hanna Street, near Sidney Street, Belleville firefighters worked well on into dawn trying to extinguish minor fire in the gutted building's interior. At 8:30 a.m. crews were still hard at work spotting small hot spots and spraying the debris inside the building.

Walls Posed Problem

Belleville firefighters had their work cut out for them when they tried to force their way into the building that housed the assembly plant for Electronic Controls Ltd. last night. The building's aluminum walls provided little in the way of access to the fire that started in the southeast corner of the building. Here, an unidentified firefighter tries to quench the flames that had licked their way through the building's roof by the time the firefighters arrived.

Planning Consultants To Undergo Screening

Planning consultants to oversee formation of official plans and zoning bylaws for Ameliasburg, Sidney and Thurlow townships will likely be hired in late April or May, said George Beer, chairman of a special Quinte Planning Board committee Monday.

Formed in late 1973, the committee was charged with defining a framework within which a consulting firm would work on plans and bylaws. After study, it was to recommend a course of action to a full planning board meeting.

The committee's work is near completion, said Mr. Beer yesterday. He expects it to bring the name of a single consulting firm to the board for approval in April.

More or less, the committee's goal for signing a contract with a firm was April or May. "We're on schedule or a little ahead of it," he said.

In the next two weeks, representatives of seven firms will be interviewed for the job. Each submitted bids to the three-man committee prior to March 1st.

Five are Toronto-based consultants. One, Phillips Planning and Engineering Ltd., has head offices in Burlington. Another, Greer Galloway and Associates Ltd., has offices in Belleville.

At last week's meeting, Mr. Beer told planning board members the costs quoted by the firms ranged from a low of $72,000 to a high of $70,000. It was estimated 31 weeks to 2½ years would be spent before all work was complete.

Currently, a report comparing the seven bids is being undertaken by board director Bert Kenny. He expects it to go out to committee members within the next few days.

Mr. Kenny said Monday his report will summarize the seven submissions, some of 20-30 page length. This would make it easier for committee members to compare the bids from each firm.

"The report gives background information and the pertinent points of comparison," he said. "It will form the basis for questions when the consultants are being interviewed."

According to terms of reference drawn up by the committee, each firm quoted a price for a single contract of three parts. Each municipality would have its own plan and bylaws completed separately.

Each firm was further asked to quote on the work being done both concurrently and consecutively.

Mr. Kenny said yesterday, a comparison of bids revealed that if work on the three plans was done simultaneously, the municipalities would save, in time and cost.

At present, the village of Frankford, Sidney and Thurlow townships do not have official plans or bylaws. Of the two other planning board participating municipalities, Trenton now has an official plan and is in the process of implementing zoning bylaws. Shelleville is awaiting the official plan document, as yet, neither approved by the planning board nor by city council.

Education Week Budget the Same

At least one commodity in Quinte land has refused to be covered by the inflationary spiral.

Education Week this year will cost exactly what it did last year — $1,650.

The annual week-long tribute to education is supported by the county board, the separate school board, Quinte School for the Deaf and Loyalist College.

The Sir Mackenzie Bowell award is the centrepiece of education in Hastings county — awarded to a practising educator who has contributed the most toward education in the last 12 months. It is named for Sir Mackenzie Bowell, who was born prime minister's devil to Intelligencer publisher and leader of his country in the mid 1800s.

For education week the awards committee spends $300 on advertising, ballots and trophy for the award. The publicity committee spends $600 for advertising and arranges to bring Radio Station CJBQ broadcasts to the public and for the breakfast a subsidy of head table guests and speakers at the keynote breakfast that opens Education Week.

Each sponsor contributes on the basis of student population. Revenue comes from: the separate school board, $250; OSD, $25; Loyalist College, $170 and Hastings county board of education, $1,200.

New Minister Here Thursday

Margaret Birch, Ontario's new Provincial Secretary for Social Development, will be here Thursday night at the annual meeting of Belleville Progressive Conservative Association.

Dr. Richard Potter, NPP dentist, was selected from health minister to become correctional services minister in the same cabinet shuffle that appointed Mrs. Birch to her new portfolio, will also participate in the meeting.

The annual session is scheduled for the Shrine Club at 7:30 p.m. and will also include an election of association officers.

Hotel Collection For Cheshire Home

Thanks to a goodwill gesture on the part of customers and staff at the City Hotel beverage room, Belleville's new Cheshire Home on John Street is richer by $56.

And a challenge has been issued out to other hotels in the area to match the City Hotel contribution.

Bud Shipman, a customer at the hotel, said the idea of the collection resulted from the suggestion of a volunteer worker at the Cheshire Home.

The $56 gift will be presented to the home today and will possibly be used to purchase wheeled chrome serving tables.

Brian Spencer – Now a Sabre

Clubs Swap Forwards

The 5-foot-11, 190-pound Spencer, 24, had five goals, 16 assists and 63 penalty minutes with the Islanders this season.

Rombough, 23, is 6-foot-3 and weighs 190. In 46 games with Sabres this season, he had six goals, nine assists and 27 penalty-minutes.

10-point Lead For Mike Walton

The 32-year-old centre, who leads the World Hockey Association in points with 101 and goals with 46, got 11 goals in three games last week.

In that span, he had two four-goal games in succession and one three-goal night.

He also equalled a consecutive point-scoring record of 16 games, previously held by Terry Caffery of New England Whalers, by collecting 26 goals and 17 assists in that span. Caffery managed 31 points in 16 games during the 1975-73 season.

Walton went pointless Sunday night against Los Angeles Sharks, but during the week he increased his league-leading total to seven shorthanded goals, five of them in four consecutive games for a league record.

Second in the scoring race is Andre Lacroix of New Jersey Knights who had a goal and two assists Monday night, giving him 29 goals and 62 assists for 91 points.

Flyers' Goal Production Down

Strong Defence Does the Job

MONTREAL (CP) — Philadelphia Flyers have become the first expansion team in the National Hockey League to reach the 90-point level in the stand-ings.

And a key factor in keeping the Flyers in first place in the West Division race has been the team's defence.

While the Flyers have only one player among the top 24 in the individual scoring race—centre Bobby Clarke with 74 points and a tie for fourth place with Richard Martin of Buffalo Sabres—goalkender Bernie Parent, the defence and backchecking forwards have combined to slice the club's goals-against total.

After 64 games of the 78-game schedule, the Flyers have allowed 133 goals, compared with 220 in the same number of games last season.

The Flyers lead the West Division by seven points over second-place Chicago Black Hawks. The Philadelphia club's 90 points better the 88 which Buffalo had last season when the Sabres finished fourth in the East Division and which St. Louis Blues had in 1968-69 when they won the West Division title. St. Louis and Buffalo were also expansion clubs.

The previous high in points recorded by a Philadelphia team was last season—85.

Despite their superior record, the Flyers' goal-scoring rate is behind that of last season—after 64 games compared with 227 one year ago.

Clarke is one goal behind his pace of last season. He has 23. Rick MacLeish, a 50-goal man last season, has 19 fewer goals now than he did in 64 games last season—36 compared with 55—but the defensive work of the club, including the penalty-killing unit which has scored 10 short-handed goals to lead the league, has played a significant role.

Expansion continues to lead the scoring race with 125 points, including 58 goals, and a 26-point lead over team-mate Bobby Orr, who leads in assists with 72. Ken Hodge of Boston is third with 91 points.

Frustrated Knights Take It Out On Jets

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

New Jersey Knights, dominants of the East Division of the World Hockey Association, are beginning to find the whole league.

And after a Sunday night game in Quebec City, they discovered their priority rating is low among the Jet-set.

They waited for a jet plane in Quebec, waited again in Montreal and waited for a third jet in Boston.

Monday night, their resentment began to show in their home arena at Cherry Hill, N.J. They let all their frustrations out against Winnipeg Jets, grounding them 10-2.

After Andre Lacroix of the Knights and Chris Bordeleau of the Jets traded goals, Kevin Morrison of New Jersey broke the tie at 15:48 of the first period with his 18th goal of the season equalling the WHA record for goals by a defenceman. The mark was set last season by Bart Crashley of Los Angeles Sharks.

Gene Peacosh made it 3-1 with the first of his two goals and Wayne Rivers, Craig Reichmuth, Mike Laughton, Bob Jones and Reichmuth again added beat goalie Ernie Wakely in the second period.

Peacosh and Rivers wrapped up the scoring in the final period as the Knights equalled their team record for most goals in a game and also matched the most ever scored against Winnipeg.

Winnipeg head tald me we'd score 10 goals tonight, I would have said they were crazy," said Howell.

Winnipeg assistant coach Nick Mickoski, filling in for player-coach Bobby Hull, wasn't so charitable.

"We played a gutless game," Mickoski said. "I'm not at all proud of this team. No one was checking."

Hull missed the game because of ulcer troubles.

Quintes Clicking

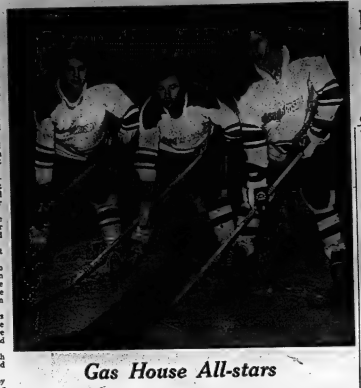
Belleville Minor Alton Quintes might have been down, but they certainly weren't out.

Going into the final game of the season, the Atoms had an 8-17 won-lost record.

The Quintes won their final game over Peterborough Friday night 4-3 to break out of their losing streak.

They then entered the semi-final playoff series against Kingston Saturday night and won the best of five opener 3-2.

Tim Mulroney led the Quintes' attack with a pair of goals and Todd Crawford added the third.



Andy Street and Allan Burt replied for Kingston.

Belleville had their two game winning streak broken on Sunday, however, as the Kingston squad squared the series at 1-1 with a 6-2 win at the Dick Ellis Arena.

Rob Holland led the visitors attack with two tallies, while Dave Smirda, Steve Callaghan, Billy Ryce and Curt West each had one.

Tim Mulroney fired both Belleville markers, the second on a penalty shot.

The game was marred by 18 penalties, including respective five minute fighting calls against each team.

Gas House All-stars

Among the Gas House League all-stars competing in the contest Wednesday night with the South Hastings League All-Stars will be this line from Mead Johnson, pennant winners in the Gas House league. The line of Ron Fuller, Ray Summers, and Mike Goegan accounted for 110 scoring points in the 22 game schedule for the undefeated Meads. Goegan counted 38, Fuller 37, ad Summers 35. Game time is Trenton Community Gardens Wednesday night is 8.45.

Facts And Figures

Final scoring statistics released by Metro Junior B statistician George Duddin recently show three Belleville Bobcats in the league's top ten, including the league's second and third highest scorers.

Jim Richardson finished in second place with 96 points on 39 goals and a league leading 57 assists, a fair ways back from scoring champion Paul Gardner of St. Mike's.

Gardner recorded a total of leading 77 goals and 55 assists for 132 points in the 44 game schedule, 36 ahead of Richardson.

In third place, 14 points back of Richardson and five up on fourth place Gary Murphy of Pickering was Mark Coates, who checked in with 82 scoring points, including 40 goals.

Alone in eighth place was Norm Jones, who slipped slightly in his standings in the late season. Jones, who had been right behind Coates for most of the season, finished the season with 70 points on 32 goals and 41 assists.

Andy Rickett was the next highest scorer on the team, in 28th position in the league standings with 25 goals and 27 assists for 52 points.

Kevin Joudrey won the dubious honor of being the most penalized player on the Cats roster drawing 121 minutes in the sin bin. Included in the load were five majors, one ten minute misconduct, and one game misconduct.

Dave Taylor was next in line with 117 minutes, followed by Rickett with 114.

The league average for goals scored per game was 9.72, while an average of 40.06 minutes per game in penalty minutes was racked up.

Playoff Picture Puzzling

The Gas House Hockey League closed out its regular schedule of games last night, and it will take a computer to figure out who will face who in the league playoffs, scheduled to start tonight.

The top three positions have been decided for some time. Mead Johnson has had first place sewn up for about three weeks and last night completed an undefeated season with a 6-0 win over Fraser and O'Neil Real Estate. In other games, Intell shaded Stewart Warner 2-0, Rosebush Pools downed Constellation 5-1 and Rollins Lumber tied Stanley Structures, 2-2.

The final standing shows three teams tied for the fourth position in the league. Fraser and O'Neil Real Estate, Stanley Structures, and Intell all have 23 points and identical 11 win, 10 loss and one tie records.

In a tie for the eighth and final playoff spot are Stewart Warner and Constellation, who each have 14 points. Stewart Warner has one more win, however, five to four.

Pennant winning Mead Johnson got shutout goaltending from Vern Whalen last night in their win over Fraser and O'Neil, as well as two goal support by Ray Johnson.

Summers and Russ Herrington. Dave Fox and Bob Mulvihill scored the other markers for Meads.

Fred Sickle scored the only two goals for the Intell, with Sonny Farrell, and Bill Bunnett drawing the assists. Warren Hay recorded the shutout.

Bob Greenden scored three times for Rosebush as they recorded their second win of the season. Ron Scarborough added two goals and a pair of assists, while Bob Anderson and Neil Goyer scored once.

Ken Vos and Wayne Lloyd each scored one goal for Constellation.

Four Championships Won

PICTON — Four championships were decided in the Women's Provincial Hockey Tournament held here on the weekend.

Montreal edged Don Mills 2-1 in the A final and the winners' Lise DeRoy was named most valuable player.

Presentation of the trophy to the champions was made by Picton Mayor James Bird, and the town's recreation director Richard Hall.

The close competition continued in the match-up for the B crown as Kingston shaded Stirling 4-3.

Kingston goal-getters were Mary Skeggs, Carol Peiz, Annabelle Twiddy and Sue Scherer. Jane Bailey, Sue Wright and Sharon Leyord replied for Stirling.

The C title went to Oro Jets who blanked Campbellford 13-0. Janice Clarke fired four goals for the champions. Jody Reid was right in step with three and Faye Lees had a pair. The other Oro marksmen were Anna Storey, Diana Fowley, Colleen McLeod and Marilyn Bart.

Mississauga captured D honors, topping Little Britain 6-2 on goals by Carol Kasper (2), Joy Richards, Diane Thompson, Sue Primeau and Debbie Roberts. Connie Thayer accounted for both Little Britain goals.

Other teams taking part in the annual event were Picton, Belleville, Agincourt, Havelock, Kemptville, Toronto, Brockville, Burlington, Brampton, Downsview, Peterborough and North York.

In the eliminations, Picton topped Little Britain 3-2; Havelock 2, Belleville 0; Campbellford 1, Mississauga 0; Don Mills 2, Kingston 1; and Agincourt 4, Stirling 3.

Toronto got by Brampton B 11-1; Oro Flyerettes 4, Brockville 1; Downsview 2, Metro 0; Kemptville 3, Dixie 1; Burlington 2, Peterborough 1; Oro Jets 12, Brampton B; Montreal 6, North York 1; Kingston 6, Brampton B; 1; Mississauga 12, Brockville 0; Stirling 4, Metro 2; Brampton 2, Dixie 1; Kemptville 2, Picton 1 and Peterborough 1, North York 0.

In Sunday morning quarterfinals Don Mills topped Toronto 3-2; Campbellford slipped past Oro Flyerettes 3-2; Agincourt edged Downsview 2-1; Oro Jets turned back Havelock 5-2 and Montreal stopped Brampton 5-2.

Little Britain squeezed by Brampton 3-2; Campbellford turned the tables on Kemptville 5-3; Stirling blanked Peterborough 3-0 and Don Mills won a 2-1 squeaker over Agincourt.

Midget AA Series Tied

BROOKLIN (Special) — Whitby-Brooklin opened its Ontario Minor Hockey Association Midget AA quarter - final series with Trenton Quinte Ice Products here Monday night, scoring a 4-1 win.

The teams head into Game 2 of the set Thursday in Trenton, tied in game, 1-1.

A three-goal surge in the third period got the Ish done for the home side Monday. Counters by Dave Allen, Larry Graham and Dan Jordan wrapped it up.

The visitors opened the scoring with the only goals in the first period when Tom Manley finished off a three-way move with Mark Thompson and Richard Monsma.

Dave Allen squared it with second period's only score.

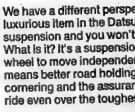
Bobcats Waiting

Belleville Bobcats, victors over Peterborough Lions and Pickering Panthers in Metro Junior B Hockey League quarter-finals and semi-finals, must now await the winner of the Markham Royalite-Brimalea Blues series before taking aim on the group championship.

Bramalea and Markham play the fifth game of their best of seven set tonight. Bramalea leads the playoff, 3-1.

Mary O'Neill Is Tops

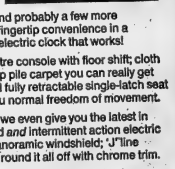
Competing in the Northern Ontario Snowmobile Championships at Hearst, Ont. on the weekend, Belleville's Mary O'Neill took the ladies' overall title. She defeated Susanne Heming of Peterborough who is the leading ladies' driver on the circuit.



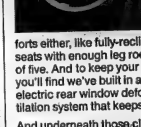
Randy Peterson of Elmwood, Michigan, beat out competitors from five states and three provinces to win the men's championship in the last race of the Mark 19 series.

THE DATSUN 610.
BECAUSE THERE'S MORE TO LUXURY THAN JUST THICK CARPET.

We have a different perspective on luxury than most car manufacturers. In fact our most luxurious item in the Datsun 610 isn't even visible! It's called independent four-wheel suspension and you won't find it on many of today's cars. What is it? It's a suspension system that allows each wheel to move independently of the other three. That means better road holding, less body strain on you when cornering and the assurance of a safe and comfortable ride even over the toughest bumps.



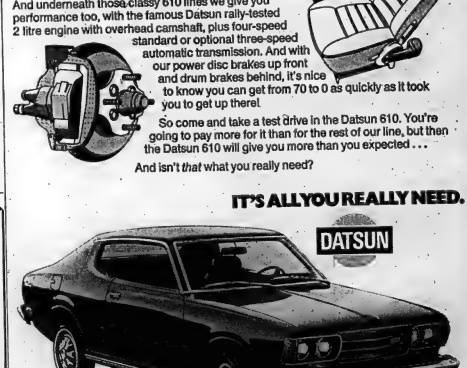
Of course, we don't stop there. We still give you the luxuries you've come to expect in a top of the line car. And probably a few more besides! For instance, in the 610 we don't just offer you fingertip convenience in a wood fascia dash—we give you a trip odometer, and an electric clock that works!



We give you a centre console with floor shift; cloth seat inserts; a deep pile carpet you can really get your toes into, and fully retractable single-latch seat belts that allow you normal freedom of movement.

In the Datsun 610 we even give you the latest in wipers. Two speed and intermittent action electric wipers; a tinted panoramic windshield; "J" line windows. And we round it all off with chrome trim.

We haven't forgotten about the more simple comforts either, like fully-reclining, body-contoured front bucket seats with enough leg room and carpeted trunk space for a family of five. And to keep your driving enjoyable summer or winter, you'll find we've built in a powerful three-speed heater/defroster, electric rear window defogger and a flow-through ventilation system that keeps everyone comfortable.



And underneath those classy 610 lines we give you performance too, with the famous Datsun rally-tested 2 litre engine with overhead camshaft, plus four-speed standard or optional three-speed automatic transmission. And with our power disc brakes up front and drum brakes behind, it's nice to know you can get from 70 to 0 as quickly as it took you to get up there!

So come and take a test drive in the Datsun 610. You're going to pay more for it than for the rest of our line, but then the Datsun 610 will give you more than you expected . . .

And isn't that what you really need?

IT'S ALL YOU REALLY NEED.

Elks Corby Cup At Thunder Bay

THUNDER BAY — The six winners of Provincial playdowns competing in the Elks Corby Cup national playdowns here March 12-14 include the Red Deer, Alta. rink that won the trophy at Prince Albert last year.

Competing again are Red Deer curlers Don Longmore, skip, Dave Gaetan, Cy Little and Merv Armstrong, the 1973 champions. The Ontario entry is Peter McCallum's rink from Thunder Bay. The other finalists are Willy Falesteit's rink from White Rock, B.C., Glen Harris' rink from Estevan, Sask., Malcolm Grabham's rink from Gladstone, Man., and Eugene Milbury's rink from Woodstock, N.B.

The Elks Corby Cup competition symbolizes the national curling championship for members of the fraternal order, which counts many curlers of high skill and reputation among its membership.

The Elks Purple Cross Fund, providing special medical and educational help to disadvantaged children, is supported mainly by money from the curling competition, which has been sponsored from its beginning in 1960 by Corby Distilleries Limited, of Montreal and Corbyville, Ont.

Towers, Kingston Trade 4-3 Victories

The Belleville Towers-Food City major atoms may have found the going tough during their first campaign in Triple A Ontario Minor Hockey Association regular season play but they have served notice they'll be a force to be reckoned with in the playoffs.

Towers opened a best of five group playoff with Kingston on be weekend and the teams traded 4-3 wins.

Saturday in Kinston, the home team erased a 3-2 third period lead held by Belleville and potted a pair to pull it out. Scoring for Towers were Steve Taylor, D'Arcy Maher and Greig Saxby. Taylor, David Ashton, Paul Hounslow and Richard Mandeville each picked up an assist.

Sunday, at Memorial Arena, the Belleville youngsters squared accounts. Maher's goal on a setup by Mandeville snapped a 3-3 tie and gave Towers the nod.

Rounding out the Belleville scoring parade were Mandeville, Steve Mokasid and Hounslow. Maher also earned two assists with single helpers for Ashton and Hounslow.

The series resumes Thursday in Kingston.

QHL Game Thursday

The Quinte Hockey League this week gets back to its regular schedule Thursday, for playoffs.

This Thursday will see Cornerstone Builders take on Stinson Construction in the seventh game of their semi-final series. Cornerstone currently leads the series three games to two, with one game tied.

The winner of that series will meet Reid's Dairy, who last week disposed of defending champion Belvedere Hotel. Reid's took the best of seven set in six games, winning four to two.

Tips from the Top for Moore

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla (CP) — When Balor Moore pitches well, the young lefthander is almost unbeatable.

The trouble is, Moore has not pitched well consistently for a Montreal Expos and is one of the question marks as the National League baseball club prepares for the 1974 season.

"Baker is blessed with a wonderful team," said general manager Jim Fanning. "He has great stuff but he's been rather slow in becoming a pitcher.

"We all remember . . . a string of 34 shutout innings a couple of years ago. It's there. It's absolutely there.

"He needs to perhaps mature a bit and needs to get a little more experience before he can really do what he wants to with his fantastic stuff he has."

Moore was 7-16 for the Expos last season and had a high earned-run average of 4.56. While his strike-out total of 151 was impressive the fact that he walked 109 batters in 178 1-3 innings was not.

Moore has been taking a great amount of advice from various people around the Montreal organization and hopes to become a better pitcher for it.

Much of the advice Moore has been getting has come from pitching coach Cal McLish and manager Gene Mauch and also Eddie Lopat, one of the Expos' top scouts.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Wednesday, Mar. 13 —

Aries (March 21-April 19) A small misunderstanding with a friend, if not handled wisely when it arises, will grow out of proportion.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Don't be too hasty in follow-up advice given by outsiders today. Their judgments are based upon surface observations.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) You're apt to agree to something now because you think it has more advantages for you than for the other guy. Take a closer look.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) Mistakes and oversights are likely in your work today. Check every detail carefully or considerable unsatisfying will be required.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) Today you will have to be careful where speculative situations are concerned. Your optimism over-rules your logic.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Anything you do today that has an effect upon home or family should be done only if your goals is in harmony with your ideas.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Don't work on things today that you don't fully understand. Seeking expert advice will save time and trouble.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You tend to be too fresh with your money today. Later you'll want to kick yourself for being so foolish.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You won't get as much store in the world's hard facts as you should. Because of this you'll make a poor decision.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You are setting yourself up for a disappointment by expecting too much from another. Don't ask for impossible favors.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) An outside interest or youre is going to get you into trouble. You're devoting more money to it than it merits.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) Acts that are not in accord with your ideals will annoy you today. Consider the effect this may have on your reputation.

BROAD-LEAVED SPECIES

Ontario has 76 species of broad-leaved trees which make up 40 per cent of the primary growing stock in the province.

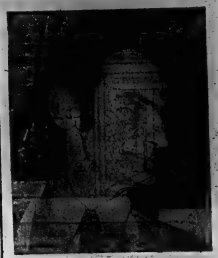
COME ONE 'N ALL

MURRAY'S FOOD MARKET

DOWNTOWN BELLEVILLE

Murray Atkinson Welcomes You!



Now that renovations to my store are complete, I am looking forward to having you visit the store and join me in the Grand Opening — Tuesday to Saturday, March 12th to 16th.

I am pleased to have joined the Foodmaster Group of the Red & White Food Stores. (Ontario Wide). This will enable me to offer you the best in food values, day after day, week after week.

Watch for our weekly specials in the Intelligencer for outstanding food values, in groceries, fruits, vegetables and top quality meat.

Meantime, come in and shop at Belleville's only Independent downtown food store — where you are assured of friendly, personal service.

By the way, we have staff available to take your order to your car.

Old Knowles Motion Is Used By PCs to Embarrass NDP

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative MPs have thrown the New Democratic Party into a procedural quandry by announcing plans for a non-confidence vote today based on an old NDP motion.

The non-confidence motion sponsored by Jack Marshall, Conservative veterans affairs critic, is similar to an NDP routine motion accepted by the House last Nov. 8.

It reads: "This House regrets that the government has not extended the March 31 deadline under the Veteran's Land Act (VLA), and calls on the government to consider taking immediate steps to extend this deadline."

The old NDP motion, put forth by NDP House Leader Stanley Knowles, asked for urgent consideration to amending the VLA to permit veterans to acquire small holdings. However, it was a run-of-mill motion which did not involve non-confidence and caused little stir.

Now, the Conservatives say they mean business and that the minority Liberal government should stand or fall on the revamped Knowles motion.

The NDP has said it will vote with the Liberals on all confidence motions until details of new government legislation are presented.

But the concern for veterans is a pet theme of some NDP members, Mr. Knowles in particular. A meeting of senior NDP MPs was scheduled early today to decide strategy.

Conservative spokesmen say no one expects the NDP to dump the government on the motion today. The wording was mainly to embarrass NDP members.

Meanwhile, NDP members voted with the government Monday night to approve the throne speech, read when the new parliamentary session opened Feb. 27.

The voice vote ended the formal eight-day debate on legislative proposals outlined by the government in the speech.

Canada Development Is Preparing to "Go Public"

TORONTO (CP) — Canada Development Corp. (CDC) is aiming to go public in May with what may turn out to be the largest equity issue ever in Canada, President H. Anthony Hampson said Monday.

The corporation, wholly-owned by the federal government, has built up consolidated assets to more than $700 million in its two-year existence, excluding assets of companies in which it holds less than 50 per cent of the shares.

"We have built up sufficient earning power and momentum to give top priority to going public as soon as we reasonably can," Mr. Hampson told a joint luncheon of the Canadian Club of Toronto and Prospectors and Developers Association.

The CDC hopes to file a preliminary prospectus by April 30, he said, with a view to making an offering in May.

The debate included addresses by all party leaders, about 12 cabinet ministers and a long list of backbenchers.

Although NDP members supported the government, they reopened one issue on which they have consistently opposed Liberal policy.

NDP Leader David Lewis said he will fight for repeal of controversial corporate tax cuts approved by Parliament last summer. He will take advantage of a clause that allows a parliamentary review of the measures if 60 or more MPs demand it in writing, he said in an interview.

Thirty-one signatures will come from NDP MPs and the party will campaign for the remaining 29 among other parties, he added.

The review clause was inserted in the legislation after Conservative MPs objected to Finance Minister John Turner's original plan to make the tax cuts permanent.

The legislation cut the corporate tax rate for manufacturing and processing industries to 40 per cent from 49 per cent and speeded up the tax write-off process for investment in new equipment.

Mr. Turner indicated Monday there are no plans to withdraw the legislation. The government sees the measures as medium- and long-term incentives to increase industrial capacity and create jobs, he told Mr. Lewis in the Commons.

A spokesman for Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield said no party position on a parliamentary review will be taken until Mr. Turner presents a report on the effects of the measures.

Provincial Lottery Urged by Conservative

WAINFLEET, Ont. (CP) — The Ontario government should get on with setting up a provincial lottery, John Smith, Progressive Conservative member of the legislature for Hamilton Mountain, said Monday.

Speaking to the Progressive Conservative association in this community south of Welland, Mr. Smith said the province needs a provincial lottery where the proceeds could be given to amateur athletics.

Mr. Smith said equipment could be bought and fitness programs started with projected lottery profits of about $1 million a week.

"This money could be used for the people of Ontario," he said. "A provincial lottery is just like investing in provincial bonds. It is a safe investment and a needed one."

Sudbury Inquest Continues

Expert Says Nitrous Oxide Not Cause of Man's Death

SUDBURY (CP) — The death last Sept. 8 of Andrew Solomon, 54, of the Manitoulin Island community of Wikwemikong, 60 miles southwest of here, was inconsistent with the administration of 100-per-cent nitrous oxide, a Toronto anesthetist said Monday.

Dr. David Pelton of the Hospital for Sick Children told a coroner's inquest investigating the death of Mr. Solomon and 22 others at Sudbury General Hospital last year that he was forced to conclude nitrous oxide was not flowing from an oxygen wall outlet used during the treatment of Mr. Solomon.

Evidence given weeks ago revealed samples of medical gas were taken from oxygen wall outlets in the hospital's new wing on the day of Mr. Solomon's death and an analysis showed nitrous oxide was being emitted from outlets in four of the wing's rooms.

Dr. Pelton testified he believed either the lethal gas was not being emitted Sept. 8 as indicated by the sample results, or the times of administration of medical gas to Mr. Solomon as recorded on his chart were in error.

Mr. Solomon survived the administration of nitrous oxide from the oxygen wall outlet in the emergency treatment room for at least 30 minutes as recorded on his chart.

"I don't believe he could have survived that long had he been receiving 100-per-cent nitrous oxide," Dr. Pelton said.

Dr. Robert Shine, an anesthetist, testified he inhaled the patient—placed an endo-tracheal tube in his throat to facilitate easier breathing—and the tube was fed by medical gas from the wall outlet.

Mr. Solomon suffered a respiratory arrest followed by a cardiac arrest and was pronounced dead at 1:25 p.m.

Dr. Shine said he picked up the piping from the wall outlet and took a whiff of the gas following the patient's death. He had performed a similar experience following the death of Randolphe Freake last June 28.

"There was a sweet smell," Dr. Shine testified. "I said at the time that this was the way the gas smelled before (following the Freake death)".

Dr. Stewart Strong testified he performed an autopsy on Mr. Solomon and concluded death was caused by obstruction of the coronary arteries.

The jury concluded the Solomon inquest in less than five hours after Jury foreman Barry Farmer of Sudbury rose at the beginning of the day's proceedings to voice the jury's disapproval with the amount of time the inquest was taking.

Dr. Ross Bennett, Ontario's deputy chief coroner, called the jury and lawyers together prior to the afternoon sitting to discuss ways of speeding up proceedings.

No announcement was made but in the following three hours, Crown Attorney John Takach was able to complete the inquest.

Expressway Plan Opposed

TORONTO (CP) — Plans for a Scarborough expressway should be abandoned and priority given to public transit, Metropolitan Toronto's transportation committee agreed Monday.

CP News Roundup

Emission Controls Opposed

OTTAWA (CP) — Citing fuel shortages and rising gasoline prices, the Canadian Automobile Association (CAA) has urged the federal government to halt current moves toward more stringent auto emission controls.

At CAA brief to the cabinet released Monday said there must be careful study before implementing any more emission control. Costs could outweigh benefits.

The auto group, which represents 1.2 million motorists, recommended the government persuade manufacturers to develop cleaner, more efficient engines rather than attach anti-pollution devices to car motors.

The CAA also said the government should try to maintain a 2.5¢ gasoline price in all regions, reject moves to increase truck size and weight limits in Western Canada, improve roads and convince provincial governments to make seat belts compulsory.

Driver Jailed

KINGSTON (CP) — Claude J. Vaslongbien, 23, of Kingston was sentenced Monday to a 111-day jail term, fined $1,400 and prohibited from driving for 2½ years following his conviction in provincial court on eight charges resulting from his erratic driving Jan. 11 in Kingston.

Vaslongbien was charged with impaired driving, refusing a breath analysis test, driving while disqualified, careless driving and failing to remain at the scene of an accident.

Study Belts

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — Attorney-General Robert Welch said Monday his ministry is investigating means of encouraging motorists to use seat belts.

"There are a number of ways to produce incentives to use them," said Mr. Welch who was appointed attorney-general two weeks ago.

"It could be part of the demerit system or licensing."

Lands on Road

WATERLOO, Ont. (CP) — Engine trouble forced a Cessna 150 with two persons aboard to land on a highway in rush-hour traffic Monday.

The airplane was brought down by flying instructor Lyle Griffith, 23, of Waterloo after engine trouble developed while student flyer Ed Ringwald, 21, of Kitchener was at the controls.

Mr. Griffith took over the controls but decided fields were too muddy to attempt a landing.

Bombs Found

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Five dynamite bombs, found close to the New York Central Railway tracks in this city, were described and destroyed by police Sunday. Police Chief Gordon Preston said Monday police learned of the explosives through a telephone message. He said the bombs "could easily have been detonated" and "would have made quite a hole—there was enough there to blow up a city block."

Aid Proposed

OTTAWA (CP) — The provinces have been asked to consider federal proposals to help low-and middle-income families obtain child day-care centre services, Welfare Minister Marc Lalonde announced in the Commons Monday.

He said the provinces would provide the services and be reimbursed under the Canada Assistance Plan.

Given Life

TORONTO (CP) — A Supreme Court jury that deliberated for 5½ hours Monday found Roy Donald Kelly guilty of the non-capital murder of Dorothy Wilson last Jan. 31.

Mr. Justice E. G. Thompson sentenced Kelly to the mandatory term of life imprisonment and ordered that he must serve 20 years before being eligible for parole.

Metric System OK Is Sought

OTTAWA (CP) — A resolution seeking Parliament's approval of Canada's eventual conversion to the metric system will be presented during the present session, Industry Minister Alastair Gillespie said Monday.

Up to Provinces

OTTAWA (CP) — Foreign doctors are free to emigrate to Canada, at least until the provinces get around to stop them, Health Minister Marc Lalonde told the Commons Monday.

The provinces, responsible for health care, will have to decide whether doctors, entering Canada at the rate of about 1,000 a year, should be stopped, Mr. Lalonde told Stanley Korchinski (PC—Mackenzie).

Coal Pipeline Is Suggested

OTTAWA (CP) — A three-year Saskatchewan Research Council study says pipelines similar to those used to transport gas and oil could be built to carry western coal to eastern markets.

The study also says the technology is at hand to transport other solids such as sulphur, potash and sand through pipelines, Gary McLaughlin of the Canadian transport comission said Monday.

Safety Improved

TORONTO (CP) — The Metro Toronto and Region Conservation Authority is to enforce stricter safety precautions in its parks and other properties where 21 persons have drowned since 1957. Warning signs, safety barriers and more lifesaver poles along unsupervised reservoirs and shorelines are among safety features to be introduced this year. However, the number of lifeguards around swimming pools will not be increased.

Retail Beef Price Too Slow in Falling

OTTAWA (CP) — Chairman Beryl Plumptre of the food prices review board charged Monday that retail beef sellers have not responded to a drop in wholesale costs by lowering prices.

"Something is wrong," she told a Canadian Cattlemen's Association meeting. Normally, there was about a two-week lag before a drop in prices to farmers was felt in the supermarket.

The current lag "is too slow," she said.

Mrs. Plumptre said the board has been watching the beef-price situation closely and that it "hopes to contribute a useful study" on the subject.

Beef prices to farmers have been dropping sharply in the last three weeks following heavy imports of American cattle. The beef market has been erratic since late last October when the Nixon administration lifted a beef-price freeze.

U.S. farmers and ranchers, who held back cattle during the freeze, suddenly flooded the market and the overflow spilled into Canada. Prices to domestic cattlemen, which climbed to record prices of more than 60 cents a pound, dropped accordingly to roughly 45 cents a pound.

The government reacted to the increased imports by increasing tariffs on U.S. beef and cattle shipped into the country. But American cattlemen still found it profitable to export their animals.

Mrs. Plumptre said the document market still is suffering from the American freeze and following actions by cattlemen.

It would be a good long time before orderly cattle and beef marketing returned in the country.

Cattlemen have been complaining recently that it is un-

Government May Lose $12 Million on Oil Deal

OTTAWA (CP) Oil industry sources say the government might lose $12 million—75 per cent of its investment—on heating oil purchased last winter to head off anticipated winter oil shortages.

No shortages developed and the government still has the fuel on its hands and apparently no buyers in sight.

An industry spokesman said Monday the government paid an average 82 cents a gallon for a total of 26 million gallons it bought abroad in November, when prices were at record highs.

Government officials have not disclosed the purchase price.

Because prices have fallen in the meantime and most of the oil is stored in Nova Scotia and Newfoundland, well away from available markets, it probably will have to sell for profitable to raise cattle for the domestic beef market; that the price of feed grains has risen to the point that cattle are being sold for less than it costs to raise them.

The cattlemen's association says ranchers must receive 58 cents a pound for their animals to break even. But beef now is being sold for somewhat less than that by farmers and ranchers.

In his report to the meeting, Charles Gracey, manager of the association, said the beef industry is in "very difficult circumstances . . . that will exist for months to come."

about 15 cents a gallon, the spokesman estimated.

This would mean a total purchase cost of more than $16 million and a sale price of about $4 million, he added.

"They're going to take a real beating. There's no way around it."

Symposium Planned

WINNIPEG (CP) — University of Manitoba's second annual symposium of the Canadian film industry is to be held here early February. During the three days of discussion, a selection of the best Canadian films made over the past year will be screened. A cross-section of Canada's film community will be represented at the symposium.

Competition Bill Reintroduced

OTTAWA (CP) — Proposed business competition legislation to protect consumers and small business against unfair pricing and advertising practices was reintroduced in the Commons Monday.

The policy was contained in a bill introduced in the last session, but it got no further than first reading and died on the Commons order paper when the session ended Feb. 8.

Introduced by Consumer Affairs Minister Herb Gray, the bill would forbid misleading advertising and give consumers new protection on guarantees and warranties.

A variety of pricing and selling techniques, including pyramid selling and referral selling, would be banned or restricted.

Small businessmen would be protected under new provisions aimed largely at their major suppliers.

The bill, amendments to the Combines Investigation Act and other acts, is intended to be the first part of a two-stage competition policy.

Under the bill, the restrictive trade practices commission would be empowered to prohibit business practices found to be contrary to legislation in Canada of foreign

Price Up

TORONTO (CP) — Loblaw Groceterias Co. Ltd. of Toronto has increased its bread prices two cents a loaf.

James Gregory, vice-president of grocery merchandising for the firm, said Monday that the across-the-board increase was a reflection of the recent two-cent increase by Weston Bakeries Ltd.

Nixon's Counsellor Attacks Democrat

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House has stepped up its counter-attack on those who suggest that President Nixon should or will resign.

Presidential counsellor Bryce Harlow, with reporters on Nixon's jetliner en route back from Florida Monday night, accused Representative Wilbur Mills (Dem.Ark.), of engaging in McCarthy-like tactics.

Harlow, who had dinner with Nixon Monday evening at the president's Bayside Florida home, said Mills should "put up or shut up."

Mills said in Little Rock last week that he expects Nixon to resign, indicating he based his forecast on a report being prepared by the House of Representatives' Joint Internal revenue taxation committee. Mills is vice-chairman of the committee, which, at Nixon's request, is studying his federal tax returns for the last four years.

Harlow said if Mills has facts on which to base his statements he should make them known. Referring to the era of Senator Joseph McCarthy, Harlow said that 20 years ago the press became upset about a campaign of guilt by association, adding that he wondered why the press was notupset by Mills's assertions.

The presidential counsellor said he is among the advisers, who have urged Nixon to undertake the personal appearances across the United States, which have been scheduled during the next 10 days. People like to see the president in person and get their impressions first hand instead of through the "Washington filter," Harlow said in a reference to the news media.

In another Watergate-related development, a White House analysis says the House of Representatives Judiciary committee unsuccessfully sought tapes of 42 presidential conversations rather than six.

And, at the same time, the committee's chief impeachment lawyer, John Doar, asked for access to all the files of four Watergate figures who once were top aides to President Nixon.

News Briefs

Trip Postponed

WASHINGTON (AP) — United States State Secretary Henry Kissinger is putting off his trip to the Soviet Union for a week, apparently to concentrate on laying the groundwork for negotiations on a Golan Heights disengagements in the Middle East.

TV Statement Sought

HILLSBOROUGH, Calif. (AP) — Lawyers for two prisoners accused of murder are set to seek court approval for a televised news conference their clients say may save the life of Patricia Hearst. The kidnapers of Miss Hearst, the Symbionese Liberation Army (SLA), have said they will break off communications with Miss Hearst's family unless Joseph Remiro and Russell Little appear on television with a statement about their treatment in prison. The two men, charged with the cyanide-bullet slaying of Oakland School Supt. Marcus Foster last year, demanded the televised hearing last week.

Occupational Hazard

ATHENS (AP) — It is an occupational hazard if a sailor dies while having sex on shore leave and his family is therefore entitled to a navy pension, Greece's highest court ruled today.

Scientist Protests

TORONTO (CP) — Gerhard Herzberg, a Nobel Prize-winning Canadian scientist, said Tuesday the federal government is stifling "the spirit of discovery" among the country's scientists. Mr. Herzberg, a member of the National Research Council of Canada and winner of the Nobel Prize for chemistry in 1971, said the government is holding back on research funds.

Too Young for Guns

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Norfolk's recently hired young policemen are having trouble following a department rule that each own a handgun for off-duty use. The policemen are not old enough to buy their pistols and ammunition. "It's embarrassing, but it's the law," Cpl. Robert Sharpless, assistant training officer, said Tuesday.

IRA Housewife Held

DUBLIN (AP) — Police in the Republic of Ireland questioned a woman supporter of the Irish Republican Army today about the murder of a Protestant minister despite a statement by Protestant extremists that they killed the legislator, Marie Drumm, a housewife in her mid-40's was the only person reported arrested thus far in the investigation into the death of Senator Brian Faul.

Happy Hooker Loses

TORONTO (CP) — Xaviera Hollander, author of The Happy Hooker, lost an appeal Tuesday in the Federal Court of Canada against a deportation order. Her lawyer, Douglas Laidlaw, said the case now will consider whether to appeal Tuesday's decision to the Supreme Court of Canada.

OTTAWA (CP) — Another sharp rise in grocery prices led a one per cent rise in living costs in February, escalating the inflation rate to an increasingly faster pace than last year's 22-year record, Statistics Canada reported today.

Groceries climbed 2.8 per cent last month, and included sharply higher prices for beef, potatoes and sugar products, it said. All other major price categories—housing, clothing, transportation, health-personal care and recreation-reading—averaged five-tenths of one per cent higher, the report said.

The latest increase pushed living costs 8.5 per cent higher than a year earlier, approaching the 10 per cent inflation rate that many economic analysts have predicted for 1974. Living costs rose 9.1 per cent in all of 1973.

The figure means it cost $159.20 per week last month to pay for typical family living costs. That was $1.60 more than the months before, $13.90 more than a year earlier and $59.20 more than the 1961 period on which the index is based.

Put another way, the value of the 1961 dollar has declined to 63 cents in the 13-year period and six cents of the decline has been in the past year alone.

February's one per cent rise in over-all living costs followed an increase of eight-tenths of one per cent in January, and if that rate of rise continues for the balance of 1974 it would total 10.8 per cent by the end of the year.

February's grocery price rise was more than double January's increase and brought food prices up 17.2 per cent since a year earlier.

"The index for meat, poultry and fish rose 2.9 per cent as beef prices went up, on average, seven per cent," Statistics Canada said.

Poultry prices rose 1.6 per cent, sugar climbed 11 per cent and potatoes jumped 29 per cent, the report said.

The only declines noted in the report were 1.9 per cent for pork and 4.8 per cent for eggs.

Over the year, beef prices were up 34 per cent, poultry 25 per cent, eggs 26 per cent and sugar almost 80 per cent, the report said.

Cereal and bakery products increased 1.4 per cent in February, cheese was down seven per cent for the month and fruits and vegetables averaged 4.7 per cent higher, it said.

Alcoholic beverages rose 2.5 per cent in February and were 7.2 per cent higher for the year.

Housing costs rose six-tenths of one per cent in February because of increases for new houses, mortgage interest, home repairs, rents, electricity rate in some areas and furniture prices. Housing was seven per cent higher than a year earlier.

Food Board Backing Promised

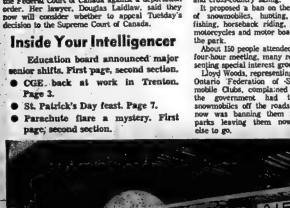
OTTAWA (CP) — The government is studying various ways to give weight to recommendations made by the food prices review board, Prime Minister Trudeau said Tuesday.

When the board finds fault with pricing practices in industry, the government will take action, he told Terry Grier (NDP—Toronto Lakeshore) in the Commons.

A number of proposals were being considered to make the board more effective and an announcement would be made soon, He did not elaborate.

The board acts in an advisory and information capacity. It has no authority itself to roll back prices it considers unjustified.

Frontenac Park Plans Outlined



KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — A draft plan for the development of Frontenac Park, a 12,000-acre recreation park about 25 miles north of here, was announced at a public meeting here Tuesday.

The plan, drafted for the Ontario ministry of natural resources by a consulting firm, emphasized the use of the park for hiking, canoeing, camping and cross-country skiing.

It proposed a ban on the use of snowmobiles, hunting, ice fishing, horseback riding, trail motorcycles and motor boats in the park.

About 150 people attended the four-hour meeting, many representing special interest groups.

Lloyd Woods, representing the Ontario Federation of Snowmobile Clubs, complained that the government had taken snowmobilers off the road, and now was banning them from parks leaving them nowhere else to go.

Air Canada Strike Goes Abroad

Wells Acts To End Strike

TORONTO (CP) — A bill designed to end the high-school teacher strike in York County was to come under scrutiny today by members of the Ontario legislature and education officials involved in the dispute.

Bill 12, introduced in the house Tuesday by Education Minister Thomas Wells, would force the 867 teachers back to work and send pupil-teacher relations and other contentious issues to compulsory arbitration.

While the house begins second reading—approval in principle—of the bill today, board of education officials and teachers will be busy debating the pupil-teacher ratio, a major point of controversy.

Until Tuesday, at least, a majority of York trustees refused to negotiate the ratio, claiming it as a management right. The ratio determines how many teachers a school board may employ and affects such working and learning conditions as class size and teacher workload.

The portion of the bill forcing the teachers back to work includes a clause requiring the board of education to rehire them.

Introducing the bill, which he hoped would end the strikes that began nearly a month ago, Mr. Wells said that "we have no alternative but to bring the stalemate to a conclusion."

However, he added:

"I stand ready to withdraw the bill at a moment's notice if agreement is reached and ratified by both parties and they come to me while we are debating the bill in the legislature."

About 14,000 students in 15 schools have been affected by the strike.

Don Ousenk, a member of the trustees' bargaining committee, said the most recent offer from the board for a-two-year contract would give a teacher in Category 1, with no previous experience, $7,600 in the first year and $7,800 in the second.

A teacher in Category 4 with 13 years of experience would receive $13,000 in the first year and $13,600 in the second.

Mr. Ousenk said the latest proposals by the teachers' call for a Category 1 teacher with no experience to receive $7,700 in the first year and $8,575 in the second while a Category 4 teacher with 13 years experience would get $17,600 in the first year and $19,300 in the second.

The bill, as it is being studied, requires that all offers be made be submitted to a three-member arbitration board which "shall examine into and decide all matters that are in dispute."

Liberals' Last-hour Switch On VLA Wins NDP Backing

OTTAWA (CP) The minority Liberal government made an 11th-hour switch in year vesterday's policy Tuesday and escaped what might have been a fatal defeat in the Commons.

The concession steadied an ailing New Democratic Party support which give the government the strength needed to vote down a Conservative non-confidence motion based on the 30-year-old Veterans' Land Act (VLA).

Veterans Affairs Minister Daniel MacDonald, delivering the crucial address in a day-long debate, agreed to review government plans to terminate the act March 31. He said only last week an extension of the legislation would be unwarranted and inappropriate.

By changing his position, he met a key NDP objection and won its support in the vote. The motion was defeated 129 to 109.

But NDP Leader David Lewis warned that a review must result in continuation of the program. NDP members would not accept the government merely trying to buy breathing time, he said.

An NDP spokesman said the party would have no alternative but to bring in its own non-confidence motion if this was the case.

The vote ended a day of intense behind-the-scenes negotiations that sources said involved Mr. Lewis, Mr. MacDonald, NDP House Leader Stanley Knowles, Prime Minister Trudeau and Government House Leader Allan MacEachen.

Ironically, the defeated Conservative motion asked for almost the same concessions as that announced by Mr. MacDonald—reconsideration of the act to end the veterans' land program.

But because it was presented as an issue of confidence, the government was forced to bargain with the NDP to ensure the motion's defeat. Approval would have toppled the government and likely would have brought on a general election.

The motion, introduced by Jack Marshall, Conservative veterans' affairs critic, was based on a similar motion presented by the late Hazen Mc-Knowles, a strong advocate of improved pension and veterans' benefits. The November motion was a routine resolution and was accepted by the House.

Wilson Is Daring His Foes To Oust Labor from Office

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Harold Wilson appears to be daring Opposition parties to topple his minority Labor government or risk seeing Britain withdraw from the European Common Market.

Either Wilson remains in power at the head of a minority government with only 301 seats in the House of Commons, 17 short of a majority, or he is voted down in Parliament and goes to the country with the new issue that promises to win him a majority in an election—opposition to the Common Market.

The strategy became apparent on Tuesday when Queen read the speech from the throne at the opening of Parliament.

The speech dropped all the radical planks in Labor's campaign platform except the pledge to negotiate new terms for Britain's membership in the European Economic Community and then let the British public vote on them.

This was a direct challenge to Conservative Leader Edward Heath, whose government took Britain into the market, and Jeremy Thorpe's Liberals, who want it to stay there. But it is the one issue that the Opposition is not likely to force an election on because opinion polls have consistently shown 60 per cent of the British public opposes Common Market membership.

The polls also show that a majority of voters believe their rising food prices are partly due to Britain's membership in the Common Market since Jan. 1, 1973. An election fought on the issue of the Common Market probably would produce another Labor government, and one with the safe majority it needs to go ahead with the radical programme it has put aside.

So far, Heath's statements have indicated reluctance to try to bring the government down before it has a fair chance at governing. And Labor has been vague on the timetable for negotiating with the Common Market, so these circumstances, which favor the government, may stay in office for months.

Syrians and Israelis Fight Artillery Duel

TEL AVIV (CP) — Syrian and Israeli long-range guns fought an artillery duel on the Golan Heights front today for the second straight day.

An Israeli military spokesman said the firing began on the northern sector of the front. The spokesman said that the Syrians opened the fire which was returned.

Half an hour later, the Syrians opened fire again, this time about 25 miles from Damascus, the spokesman said. This fire was also returned.

There were no Israeli casualties, he said.

The Israelis said they suffered no casualties in Tuesday's exchanges either.

Syria said it shot down an Israeli helicopter Tuesday, but Israel denied this.

Deputy Premier Yigal Allon warned late Tuesday that "any attempt by Syria to renew hostilities may backfire." But Premier Golda Meir said Israel "will make every effort to reach a disengagement of forces with Syria."

But Mrs. Meir reiterated that Israel cannot surrender the Golan Heights, which it took from Syria in the 1967 war. The plateau overlooks the Israeli agricultural settlements in northern Galilee.

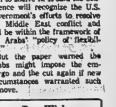
Arab Oil Ministers Meet in Libya Today

TRIPOLI (CP) — Arab oil ministers meet in the Libyan capital today and face pressure from Egypt to lift their oil embargo on the United States and the Netherlands.

Egypt's leading newspaper predicts that the oil ministers will follow Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's lead and end the embargo. However, diplomats here were doubtful.



The meeting was the Arabs' third try to get together on Sadat's proposal to end the embargo in appreciation for United States State Secretary Henry Kissinger's efforts in getting Israeli forces out of the Suez canal. Meetings scheduled for Feb. 14 in Tripoli and last Sunday in Cairo were cancelled because of Algerian and Libyan opposition.

The semi-official Egyptian newspaper Al Ahram, in a front page report from Tripoli, said the oil ministers were expected to agree on a return to normal production after a 15-per-cent cut fixed earlier this year.

Al Ahram said the meeting will end with a communique analyzing the effects of the oil weapon and explaining the decision to shelve it. It said the conference will recognize the U.S. government's efforts to resolve the Middle East conflict and will be within the framework of the Arabs' "policy of flexibility."

But the paper warned the Arabs might impose the embargo and the cut again if new circumstances warranted such a move.

CGE at Work As Strike Ends

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — The 250 workers at Canadian General Electric here are back on the job today following last night's count of their union's vote ratifying a two-year contract.

Gord Young, president, Local 526, United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, said the vote count could not be disclosed, only that "it was a close vote".

About 90 percent of the CGE workers here cast ballots throughout the day.

The strike closed 12 plants across Ontario for four weeks.

Mr. Young, following his ride to Toronto last night to deliver ballot boxes, says he's "reasonably happy" about the outcome.

For the majority of workers, the four-week strike means an increase in women's wages from $2.96 to $3.95 an hour, and pay rates for men up from $3.33 to $4.33.

About 6,500 workers struck at CGE, here and all plants in Toronto, Peterborough, Guelph and Barrie.

Trenton and Barrie each received special adjustment through negotiation, with Barrie employees winning an additional 14 cents an hour over the two years and Trenton winning 18 cents an hour.

The special adjustment will take place during the two-year term of the contract similar to the wage adjustments and will primarily affect women staff, according to Mr. Young.

Parity with Toronto and Peterborough plants is the next target for local union organizers.

The parity issue was defeated locally but Mr. Young says it is first on the line for talks in two years.

Vacations will be improved to provide for three weeks after five years, four after 15 years and five after 25 years, all to take effect this year.

An additional plant holiday will apply in 1975.

Sickness and accident benefits also are improved a union official said.

Pipes Pose Arena Problem

MARMORA — Marmora arena commission is looking for a solution to a problem, recreation chairman Leo Provost Jr. has told village council.

Because water lines may break if removed for a second year, and are expensive to replace, the commission is recommending the arena pipes not be taken up this summer. But, the problem then arises of how to carry on such activities in the arena as the Marmora Agricultural Society's Old-Time fiddlers' contest and the fall fair.

A plywood floor or platform over the pipes has been suggested but there are problems connected with that too, Mr. Provost said. While admitting concern in the matter, Reeve Jack Reynolds said he was sure the commission would come up with a solution.

The commission's recommendation will be sent to the agricultural society for its consideration.

Seek OFY Grant for Tourism

MARMORA — This village will have its own tourist information booth next summer — if an Opportunity For Youth program application now being prepared, receives federal government approval.

The project would provide employment for four young people, Jim Airhart, son of Deputy-Reeve and Mrs. Grant Airhart, explained while seeking village council's endorsement.

The booth would operate from the Bowen Rd Cocks' parking lot from Victoria Day weekend to Sept. 3.

Reeve Jack Reynolds congratulated the youth on his initiative and said such a booth would serve a useful end in Marmora, giving it a similar facility as other communities.

Councillor Bill McKenzie added that Lions Club had received permission to dismantle a sign now west of the village and relocate it at Cleeberry. Mr. McKenzie said he would suggest to the Club that the sign be placed near the tourist information booth, providing the project receives government approval.

It Pays

MARMORA — It pays to advertise a report from village clerk-treasurer William Shannon indicates.

He told council property taxes have been coming in quite well since January when an appeal was made through a newspaper article for residents to pay up their accounts.

Ready for the Count

Moments after the last ballot cast in the CGE strike, Gord Young, president of Local 526, United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, was placing vote boxes in a car trunk and speeding to Toronto for the master count involving all the company's Ontario plants. A new agreement ratified 250 Trenton workers were back on the job today.

Trenton Planning Chairman:

More Haphazard Growth If Official Plan Scrapped

TRENTON — Trenton's official plan is a starting point and not the be-all-and-end-all of town progress, says chairman of planning board chairman Doug Livingstone.

The seven-member Trenton Suburban Planning Board met Tuesday night to discuss a number of strong objections to the plan and the proposed zoning bylaws, mainly lodged by Trenton developers.

At a public meeting several weeks ago developers and realtors attacked the plan and bylaws, charging the two were placing Trenton in a development strait jacket.

As a conclusion to the meeting, planners invited complainants to air their grievances by mail.

According to Mr. Livingstone, a Trenton High School teacher, "seven major complaints and one minor one was received by the board for discussion."

The board vetoed publication of its findings on the eight letters until official reports could be mailed to the parties involved.

Mr. Livingstone, commenting on the eight letters, said "we can conclude some mistakes have been made."

He said this was the purpose of the earlier public meetings, to search out faults and have them corrected.

There is some indication members of Trenton's business community are formulating an entirely new official plan.

Mr. Livingstone, defending the existing plan which received provincial approval, said "we're looking for orderly progress and not haphazard development..."

"If we were to scrap the plan and start all over we'd have another five years of unorderly, random haphazard growth," he said.

In the wake of such strong opposition to the entire official plan question, some planners are of the mind that, for the moment, it is better to have something than nothing at all.

Frank Stokmans, deputy planning director with the Quinte Planning Board, said "you're not stuck with it. You can amend it." He was referring to the procedure of modifying the plan as applications for change are received. The philosophy was bitterly contested at the public meeting as developers outlined the lengthy delays experienced while waiting for provincial government approval for each official plan amendment.

After consideration of the objections, which were generally of local, isolated interest, the board set April 16 as the date for the next public meeting. It is expected lately received objections will be discussed at a board meeting to be held some time prior to the public session.

Complaints Bureau Sees Trend

TENTON — Trends have begun to establish themselves according to a summary of more than 500 Citizen Bureau clients and their problems, presented to Trenton Town Council Monday night.

Charles Hart, bureau manager told council the areas of consumer problems in Trenton are generally centred on consumer item warranties, landlord-tenant relations and home construction.

Mr. Hart also expressed a concern that "several" complaints were being received concerning "the practices of some automobile dealers in the area, especially in regard to high service charges for labor, indifferent repair work and doubts about the worth of many certificates of mechanical fitness that are being issued".

In connection with this latter area of complaint, Mr. Hart will meet with representatives of the Department of Transport in Toronto Wednesday.

Mr. Hart hinted to council the bureau — upon the approval of the Quinte District Labor Council, sponsor for the program — will start an investigation of government allowances.

He gave little detail regarding the allowance situation but told newsmen later it would affect persons seeking teeth and eye glasses.

Mr. Hart said he was pleased with the local acceptance of the bureau and thanked Trenton's merchants for their co-operation.

The bureau began operation here in January, funded through the federally-sponsored Local Initiatives Program.

Funds will run out in June and there is no indication at this time if funds will be available to continue operation past June.

Demonstrate First Aid

TRENTON — The Prince Edward-Hastings Industrial Accident Prevention Association will hold a first-aid demonstration here March 29.

The demonstration will begin at 5 p.m. in the Trenton Country Club.

Waste Glass Next for Recycling

MADOC — Forestry students at the Centre Hastings Secondary School here will collect used glass along with their April paper pickups in this area.

The first two paper pickups organized by the school forestry classes have scored successes and hopes are for continuing growth of the project.

The collection March 1-3 exceeded the first pickup in February but at this time it is not exactly known whether the goal of eight tons has been realized.

Project organizers have obtained a market for used glass and have announced that glass will be picked up along with the April 5-6 paper collection. Used glass, clean and free of plastic or metal caps, should be delivered to the same depots as the paper.

UCS' Future

The latest chapter in the checkered career of the United Community Services has opened with the prospect of operations being resumed under a new administrator-fund raiser.

As as yet unnamed Montrealer is expected to take up the post, but not before April 30, because of current commitments, and possibly not for some weeks thereafter. However the appointment has been made and it appears that the selection was made only after very careful consideration, there being 28 applications of whom 11 were interviewed. Of two finally eligible, one was from Belleville.

If there is criticism of the final decision to go outside Belleville for a capable appointee, this differs little from the situation obtaining in business and industry at large in which the executive personnel of any given company may be of varying national origin. To expect otherwise is to indulge in a form of nepotism that is self-defeating.

The appointee is being hired without contract and on an on-going basis and the job has been re-defined as one with fewer responsibilities than those of an executive director. The new man's experience reportedly has been mainly as a fund raiser.

The salary is $16,500, subject to review on the anniversary of the appointee's engagement.

All in all the position is one cloaked in a certain amount of uncertainty. But it offers perhaps more prospect of success for UCS operations than at any time in the past. The new man should be given a chance to prove his mettle, just as the UCS should have the support of the public in any endeavor that is for the community's good.

Certainly any judgment of the UCS' future performance and of the new administrator should be withheld until such events as properly may be thus adjudged. Public criticism in the past, though well enough founded, has also contributed to a element of divisiveness sowed not so much for any positive good that might accrue, but out of a desire to rock-the-boat for its own sake. Too often the honest efforts of community workers in many spheres are overlooked and it will be to Belleville's credit if it can remember those words of Winston Churchill: "Any fool can see what's wrong . . . but can you see what's right?"

Education Up North

The news of changes in the Loyalist College operation in Bancroft leaves a number of unanswered questions, not the least the long-term fate of the night school and Manpower Retraining programs in the community, and the publicity-shy attitude of the college board of governors.

The programs are continuing, but as was pointed out by reporter Lenny Williamson recently, they are subject to review, and there is talk of them being phased out before long.

Information on the developments came by way of a press release following a meeting of Loyalist's board of governors. Access to two documents on which that release was based reportedly was denied to members of the press.

What seems clear from this is the tenuous nature of Loyalist's operation in Bancroft, a situation confirmed in part by the fact that the Northern area supervisor will be operating out of Belleville rather than in the north country as before. And from Bancroft comes the word that the office will be asked to remain in the office in a "somewhat altered role," a position, furthermore, that will be under continuing review.

It seems the official view is that adult education in the north has "hit a plateau," but a spokesman who offered this suggestion feels there should be a more aggressive policy in seeking out students. Nobody will argue with that, if such a policy should bring results. It would be worth the effort at least, for if this program should fold now, it could be the last the Bancroft area will see of such an initiative for some time.

Mitchell Sharp Backs Off

Ottawa's Terrorist (African) Aid Program Is Shot Down

By RICHARD JACKSON.

OTTAWA — For the first time since the late Prime Minister Pearson back in 1965 moved Canada's foreign aid program over the $150 million mark, the External Affairs Department has been forced to back off, at least temporarily, from one of its more bizarre give-away schemes.

It was all set to funnel funds to what External Affairs Minister Sharp calls "indigenous groups" in southern Africa to help them in their battle for self-determination, in terms "liberation and self-determination."

Translated from the buzzwords of diplomacy, it meant that Mr. Sharp was about to hand out some of your tax dollars to intermediaries for payment to black guerrillas for use in their terrorist campaigns against the white governments of Rhodesia, South Africa and Portuguese possessions.

Mr. Sharp has called these governments variously "racist" and "white supremist," and through his program panics and things he has said both in and out of Parliament, indicates he has no great love for the practice of terrorism.

The aid for the black "liberationists," de "freedom fighters" — two other terms External Affairs uses — was being given under the diplomatic label of "humanitarian assistance."

It was being routed through third-party intermediaries to reduce the danger of confrontation between Canada and South Africa and Portugal which, just happens to be a NATO ally.

These intermediaries were being assigned by External Affairs to monitor the funds and guarantee their use only for "humanitarian purposes".

But, admitted the department under sudden and increasing pressure from politicians, the press and public, there was really no fail-safe way of guaranteeing the aid would not be used for "bullets rather than bread."

Why External let this foreign aid wildcat out of the department-mad bag is a mystery.

For swift and angry was the reaction.

Among the politicians speaking out was Eastern Ontario Conservative MP Douglas Altenbrock who made Page One of The Montreal Star with an attack on Mitchell Sharp for doing the same thing former French President de Gaulle had done — interfering in the domestic affairs of another nation.

Douglas Altenbrack wondered how Mitchell Sharp would feel if the French de Gaullists had funnelled hundreds of thousands of francs into Quebec to help finance the kidnap - murder terrorist campaign of the FLQ.

Editorial pages bristled with sharp criticism of Mitchell Sharp and his financial love affair with the black guerrillas.

And the taxpayers sounded alarms in letters to the editors and in the government.

So Mitchell Sharp back-tracked.

There would be no "humanitarian assistance" to those "indigenous groups" until Parliament has had its say, he promised.

The "saying" won't be confined to the Opposition, either, for a number of Liberals have been fretting about public opposition to this proposed new and literally "revolutionary" form of foreign aid.

In retreat, Mitchell Sharp has been speaking "confusion," explaining that people were a little mixed up about the whole thing.

They did not understand, he said in a press release, that "for many years the government has been concerned over the injustice of racial and colonial policies in southern Africa," and was simply doing something in the way of "humanitarian assistance" about it, but not now, of course, until Parliament has been consulted.

Mitchell Sharp has gone to some personal pains and public expense to sell this bill of "confusion" before Parliament gets around to saying about External Affairs financing terrorism.

Part of his sales pitch was to bring some 20 editors and columnist writers to Ottawa for dining, wining and, he obviously hoped, a little brain-washing.

He offered to fly them in and put them up here at public expense, but few, if any, tipplers for what would have been some sort of "domestic" tour.

They paid their own way, were lunched, wined, dined and given the old soft sell, which got you your bottled tax dollar did not include the information that foreign aid so far has cost Canadians $3,529,000,000.

Yet, that is correct, going on $4 billion, and spell that with a "b".

A Common Market Flourishes in Latin America

By JOHN D. HARBRON

Thomson News Service

Common markets have had mixed success outside Europe, especially when attempted under the vastly different economic conditions within the Third World.

African and South East Asian schemes have bogged down over artificial boundaries arbitrarily created by natural economic or resource regions in the first instance and over intense nationalistic differences in the second.

Most of France's former colonies in Africa decided to pursue the numerous and struggling republics of the Sahara and sub-Sahara region) have some kind of trade association with the European Common Market.

The same was true of many Commonwealth countries before British entered, although major concessions remained, such as the British market for New Zealand butter after British entry on Jan. 1, 1973.

Paradoxically it is in Latin America and the Caribbean west of so much nationalistic and regional political conflict that common market concepts are working best outside Europe.

The first such scheme called LAFTA or Latin American Free Trade Area has not done so well. But it has set the stage for lesser ambitious and more widely schemes such as the new Andean Andean Pact.

Where LAFTA included all the major nations of South America except Venezuela which did not join, but also Mexico in the Caribbean, the Andean Pact countries embrace those of the South American West coast and Andes area, Chile, Bolivia, Peru, Ecuador, Colombia and Venezuela.

The Andean common market or Andean Pact will also be concerned with proper diversification of industry within fixed national agreements, and the new concern that foreign-controlled industrial operations do not dominate it. This was not such a great concern in the early 1960s when LAFTA was in formation.

But the rising concern with multinational corporate power in emerging nations now dominates any common market structural planning.

Further north the Central American Common Market (CACM) and the restructured CARIFTA (Caribbean Free Trade Area) have their troubles but they are flourishing.

CACM is equally concerned with developing industry among small Central American republics with a wide range of manufactures and manufacturing outlets.

Hence Guatemala the most advanced industrially of the group, should not be the best at all incoming industries. Some of these should be placed in very backward Honduras or small but dynamic El Salvador.

Along with this kind of planning goes further infrastructure needs for roads, new deep-sea ports to link the hinterland to which place plants and industries in various member countries.

So in the Caribbean, a somewhat changed CARIFTA tries to do the same, impeded as one participant put it by the fragmented nature of each member-country.

Again the problem is to reduce the role of Jamaica as a major industrial centre for the region, diversify incoming industry into the smaller peoples' islands while sharing basic agricultural products among the islands.

Jamaica should no longer be a major importer of food for example, when smaller islands have food surpluses to sell,

Foreign Banks Display Interest in Canada

By VINCENT EGAN
Businessand Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service . .

Remember the story about the sun-loving farmer who thought he had a nocturnal prowler cornered in the chicken house, and shouted for the prowler to come out?

"Ain't nobody here but us chickens," came the reply.

What brings such an ancient joke to mind is the large and rapidly growing number of foreign banks that are setting up business in Canada.

They are barred by law from doing business as bankers in Canada—because banking is one of those businesses that we reserve for ourselves—and so the foreign bankers must profess to be something other than what they really are.

Latest foreign bank to open a "representative office" in Canada is Bankers Trust Co. of New York. An official of the U.S. bank told a reporter that the company felt it should be represented here because so many of its competitors were already established here.

Some of the foreign bankers beg pardon, representative offices—have gone fairly deeply into the business of making loans to Canadian business. To obtain the funds to lend out, they issue "commercial paper"—that is, unsigned maturing within a short period such as 90 days.

Many others are content simply to establish a presence here, familiarizing themselves with Canada's economy but not doing business.

How long can this grey area continue to exist?

That's up to the federal government. Banks in Canada operate under the authority of the federal Bank Act, which is revised every 10 years.

At the 1967 revision, no moves were made against foreign banks' activities in Canada, which had existed for several years even then. Although on a smaller scale than today.

Since their activities are becoming more open and more controversial, the government could hardly ignore the foreign banks at the next revision of the Bank Act in 1977.

But the problem may not keep that long. Ontario is believed to have asked all the representative offices in the province (many of them are concentrated in the Toronto financial district) to pay provincial business tax.

If they do, the foreigners fear they will be admitting that they are carrying on business here—and could then be in open breach of the federal law that restricts the banking business to Canadian chartered banks.

Ontario may decide against pressing for its business tax. It is customary for governments in other countries to distinguish clearly between banking operations and representative offices, and not to treat the latter as full-fledged businesses.

In the City of London—which is to banking what Switzerland is to watch-making—such a distinction is made openly and rigidly.

A foreign bank seeking to enter the United Kingdom must be sponsored by a domestic bank. If it chooses to be a bank, it must "join the club" and be a credit to the business. If it remains a representative office, it must trim its sails.

Before long, our government must recognize the expanding colony of foreign banks in this country, and either give them the legitimacy they have in other countries, or clamp down on them.

If the decision is to recognize them, then clear requirements (as to capital) and restrictions should be set out to ensure that the foreigners don't gobble up small Canadian banks.

But if the decision is to close the door on them, Canadian banks must be ready to accept similar treatment in the foreign countries where they are flourishing.

Editor,
The Intelligencer

It was very considerate of you to allow space in The Intelligencer inviting information from your readers regarding the circumstances surrounding the train wreck in the spring of 1925, and your Tweed reader's ready response to aid the inquiry impressed me.

I have dispatched a letter to the CP office in Toronto providing them with the approximate date of the train info & map, information they requested before undertaking a search in their files.

Housing Dilemma

Brantford Expositor

Prominent in a draft Ontario throne speech were more government promises of action to maintain housing production at the rate of 100,000 a year for the rest of the decade. Yet even if this is achieved, only a minority of people who think they can afford the inflated prices will benefit.

No indication is given as to how developers will be "encouraged to increase the supply of serviced lots and work towards stabilization of land and housing prices". Their spokesmen have welcomed the government's policy of hurrying land onto the market to cut profiteering and the extreme inflation it has helped produce. But there is no way the government can force them to build apartment buildings if they decide shopping centres are a better investment.

Premier Davis spoke of using development of land for farming. He has also spoken of environmental and planning restrictions, but are they that stringent now? Another of his suggestions is that land set aside around Metro Toronto for greenbelts be used partly for housing. This is an erosion of the entire idea of limiting and channeling Toronto's expansion and providing public havens from the sprawl of concrete.

Barring unprecedented radical action to limit land-sale profits and inefficient use of serviced land to house the rich, the provincial government probably will do no more than enable the housing industry to keep from falling much behind the general demand.

One factor militate against the success of all but bold measures. Demand for new housing outside cities will go higher because the city developers are being forced to cut back apartment construction because of neighborhood opposition and, because of rising costs of land, rents will go up. Some utility commissions are having trouble servicing new subdivision because of raw material shortages and "unprecedented demand." Increased capital spending by business and industry is expected to cut into already short supplies of material and labor for house building. Construction costs may rise by 10 per cent this year, on top of last year's 16 per cent — and record high mortage rates and an increase in mortgage availability have not only failed to stimulated for housing. The price of sod will rise by 70 per cent this spring. On top of this is the speculation by individuals, many of whom buy and hope to sell there within months or buy extra houses in the hope of making profits.

Tackling the housing problem is like working around a volatile burner without asbestos mitts. It will be interesting to see if the weight will behind the expressway and separate school issues will make the last election can escape being burnt.

Thomas Paine's book, The Rights of Man, was published in England 181 years ago today—in 1791. Written in reply to criticism of the French Revolution, the book inflamed the idea of liberty in human hearts.

1940—Russia and Finland signed a peace treaty giving Russia the Karelian Isthmus.

1868—Eileen Vollick became the first woman to receive a pilot's licence in Canada.

1917—China severed diplomatic relations with Germany.

CP News Roundup

Dump Used Without Any Permit

MAPLE, Ont. (CP) — Garbage trucks rolled by a hall in this community 15 miles north of Toronto Tuesday while inside lawyers debated before an Ontario environmental hearing board the use of the land the trucks were destined for.

Board chairman David Cavarly said he knew Disposal Services Ltd. had been using the 20-acre site as a dump without a licence since January.

Fertilizer Is in Demand

TORONTO (CP) — Fertilizer consumption records will be broken in Western Canada this year, E. A. Kowalenko, Canadian sales manager for chemical and fertilizer sales of Cominco Ltd. of Vancouver, said Tuesday.

Bread Dearer

TORONTO (CP) — Three more major food-store chains have announced a two-cent-a-loaf increase in the price of bread.

The increases were announced Tuesday by Dominion Stores Ltd., IGA and Steinberg's Miracle Food Mart, following similar moves Monday by Loblaw Groceterias Co. Ltd. and Corporate Foods Ltd.

Policy Given

OTTAWA (CP) — Revenue from the federal export tax on crude oil will not be taken into account in calculating federal equalization payments to poorer provinces, Finance Minister John Turner told the Commons Tuesday.

He was immediately accused by Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield of reversing a position announced in January.

Strike Again

TORONTO (CP) — J. T. Saunders, president of the Canadian Airline Employees Association, said the rotating strikes by passenger agents employed by Air Canada will continue today in Sydney, N.S., Halifax, Saint John, N.B., Moncton and Fredericton.

Nominated

TORONTO (CP) — Hal Jackman, business executive and Progressive Conservative Party veteran, won the nomination for the federal riding of Rosedale Tuesday night, defeating Warren Beamish, in his second nomination bid, by an undisclosed number of votes.

Few Takers

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors' hopes of selling 50,000 big cars equipped with air bags this model year are slowly deflating.

Three months after GM first offered the safety devices in its full-size Oldsmobiles and Buicks and just a few weeks after making them available in Cadillacs, the auto-maker reports only 2,000 air bag-equipped cars have been sold or ordered.

Popular With Visitors

HASTINGS, England (CP) — Postmarks on letters from this picturesque seaside resort read: "Hastings, popular with visitors since 1066."

Whelan Wants Smaller Herds

WINNIPEG (CP) — Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan says cattle producers must receive higher prices if they are to increase production. But at the same time, cattlemen say Canada's beef herd must be reduced if their industry is to thrive.

Mr. Whelan said in Winnipeg Tuesday that beef prices may increase 30 to 40 cents a pound. He said ranchers, cow-calf operators and feedlot operators have been hit by the instability of the beef market—and their problems affect consumers.

The minister said Americans are taking over 30 to 40 per cent of the Canadian beef market and Canadian beef prices have to improve to entice cattle operators to stay in business.

In Ottawa, spokesmen for the Canadian Cattlemen's Associ-ation said they reject the federal government's call for increased production but agreed consumers can expect higher prices, along with reduced supplies this year.

"If they're going to eat, they're going to have to pay for it," said association representative Chris Mills.

"The problem right now is too much production, not too little."

The association said the country's herd has expanded too rapidly because of the government's incentive programs between 1968-72.

In the last two years, however, world demand and prices for grain have soared and farmers now find it more profitable to sell grain, a reversal from the last few years when it was more profitable to feed cattle and sell meat.

Port Hope and Cobourg Amalgamation Approved

PORT HOPE, Ont. (CP) — The amalgamation into one municipality of Port Hope and Cobourg towns and the adjoining townships of Hope and Hamilton was approved Tuesday by a 29-to-1 vote at a joint meeting of the four municipal councils.

The councils now must ratify the measure in their respective municipalities.

Target date for implementation of the amalgamation is Jan. 1, 1975.

Repair Cars

OTTAWA (CP) — The government has moved to counter a sharp decline in grain shipments this winter by agreeing to spend $4 million repairing old railway boxcars.

Announcement of the program to add 2,400 cars to the 22,000-car grain fleet, however, did little to take the sting out of opposition complaints that the government has let the grain transportation system deteriorate.

Apps Praised

TORONTO (CP) — Sylvan's Apps, former Ontario minister of correctional services, was praised in the legislature Tuesday.

Morton Shulman (NDP—High Park) said that the ministry had been the subject of considerable controversy when Mr. Apps, member for Kingston and the Islands, took it over.

He said Mr. Apps "in his few years in office and with no fanfare" had eliminated "most of the abuses and has earned the respect of prisoners, staff and opposition critics."

Won't Change

TORONTO (CP) — Health Minister Frank Miller told the legislature Tuesday he will not change provincial regulations which allow 16 year-olds to receive abortions without parental consent.

Patrick Lawlor (NDP—Toronto Lakeshore) asked the government to consider excluding abortions from other surgical operations governed by a new provincial regulation.

Expand Plant

MONTREAL (CP) — Allied Chemical Canada Ltd. has announced it will undertake a $13-million expansion of its Amherstburg, Ont., plant to increase production of soda ash and calcium chloride.

F. L. McDonald, company president, said construction will begin shortly and the project should be completed by the end of 1975.

POPLAR IN ONTARIO

Four species of poplar trees are found in Ontario, of which the aspen and the balsam are the most common.

Ann Landers

'Death with Dignity,' Euthanasia Different

Dear Ann Landers: You had another letter in your column supporting Death With Dignity. I can't just sit by and say nothing when I read letters from sadists who believe certain people should be "put to sleep."

Once this sort of thing gets started there is no limit to where it might lead. First, it's those who have a terminal disease and are in great pain. Next it's the Mongoloids and the elderly. Before you known it, it'll be the mentally ill. Who, pray tell, is going to make these life-and-death decisions?

Please remind these who are in favor of "putting people out of their misery" that God gives life and only God should take it away. My husband, and I can't understand why you support those kooks. Please explain.—Argnail-yed In Michigan

Dear Argus: I have repeatedly said I am opposed to any positive means of ending life. (This is called euthanasia.) Death with dignity is something completely different. It is refusing to allow a pain-wracked, terminally-ill patient, one for whom there is no hope, to expire. As he would surely do if God didn't insert needles and tubes into his body and prolong the agony. How much better to leave these people in God's hands and let them die in sleep.

Dear Ann Landers: You are probably sick and tired of this problem, but I don't have anyone else I can talk to. It's the sex-before-marriage argument, and it's driving me nuts. Once again I have lost a boy-friend because of it. I am tired of being hurt and dropped. Is "love love" so much in demand that a 19-year-old virgin is considered a freak? Are there any guys who can go out with again and not expect her to share his bed at the end of an evening? I am turning so sour on men that it's going to take a while before I can trust a fellow to settle just for my company.

Please throw me a lifeline, Ann. Every now and then I get the crazy idea that bed-hopping will make my life peaches and cream.—Disenchanted

Dear D.: I'm glad you called it a "crazy idea"—that's exactly what it is. Bed-hopping has produced more unhappiness, guilt, self-recrimination, and muddy reputations than virginity.

Hang in there and keep it all together. If a guy won't settle for your company, tell him to bug off—and don't feel you've lost anything. A bargain he wasn't.

Dear Ann Landers: I was so glad to see something in your column about Food Pushers. They can be as dangerous as dope-pushers or drink pushers.

Why can't home hostesses take "no" for an answer?. Don't they realize that we dieters are always a little bit hungry? When the pressure gets heavy, it's so easy to break down and eat all the things we shouldn't. It destroys our morale and makes us ashamed of ourselves.

Once I was sorely tempted to hang a sign around my neck reading, 'Please don't urge me to eat. Food may be lethal to my health."

Please, Ann, print this letter. So many people need to hear or see something more than once before it actually soaks in.—Lbs. Away

Dear Away: T...st sign isn't such a bad idea. It would be quite a conversation piece, and at the same time give the person who wears it added determination to refuse all offers. I recomend it.

Successful Living

Middle Age Is Just the Beginning

Dear Doris: After 10 years of married life I have recently lost all traces of any kind of sensation or physical pleasure with my husband.

There has been no major factor to warrant this type of behavior on my part except that I celebrated my 40th birthday and found it to be a traumatic experience. (simply becoming 40).

Frustrated

Dear Frustrated: You say you "celebrated" your 40th birthday. It must have been more like a wake!

You aren't the only one who feels a figure on the calendar mark a beginning or end of an era— and when you have sufficient imagination, sufficient emotional reaction, the effects can be jarring, one way or another.

One writer reacted by writing a book entitled, "Life Begins At Forty" and had good reason for saying so. Far from being finished, this is a time of your life when you are free and mature enough to do many of the things you dreamed of doing sooner.

The menopause could have something to do with your doldrums, but this shock passes. I'm sending you my 2-5-cent leaflet, "Facing Forty", and would suggest you have a frank and completely honest discussion with your doctor. If you need a physical build-up, get it. Stop worrying about your sensations and meet this tricky period head on by involving yourself in a new interest.

Ten to one your discomfort of physical pleasures will increase as other things do.

Judge's Advice for Wives Keep Record, Get Witness

CALGARY (CP) — Mr. Justice David McDonald of the Alberta Supreme Court has some advice for women who want to be assured of an interest in their husband's property if he should die or they should separate:

When the assets are purchased, the wife should have a conversation in front of witnesses in which he says: "Half of it belongs to you, dear," or preferably, "Half of everything I have is yours, dear."

Mr. Justice McDonald cited the case of an unmarried woman living with a man in Edmonton who won her claim to half his property because the man had stated "This is your house" when the home was purchased.

—The wife should pay part of the purchase price of the house.

She should keep a record of the number of times she entertains her husband's clients and their wives.

—She should keep a record of the times she puts up the storm windows or shovels the walks.

—She should keep a record of the times her husband begged her not to take a job because it meant more to him to have her run the house gracefully and without fatigue.

Wife Waits

MEDIA, Pa. (AP) — Mrs. Theodore Burtis has been joining many other suburban housewives in waiting in long lines for gasoline. The threatened shutdown by service station owners makes her hour long waits more necessary, she said. "I guess we all have to sacrifice together," said Mrs. Burtis, the wife of Theodore Burtis, president of the products group of the Sun Oil Co.

Mr. Justice McDonald gave his advice to a meeting of lawyers' wives examining the case of Irene Murdoch of Nanton, Alta., in which the Supreme Court of Canada ruled that she had no claim on her estranged husband's ranch business.

Mrs. Murdoch contended that for 18 years she had contributed financially and by her work to the acquisition and increasing value of the ranch and was therefore entitled to a half interest in all her husband's assets, including three quarter-sections of land.

She testified she had done "haying, raking, swathing, mowing, driving trucks and tractors and teams, quieting horses, taking cattle back and forth to the reserve, delivering, vaccinating." Translated, anything that was to be done while her husband was away for five months each year.

But the court upheld the trial judge's finding that what Mrs. Murdoch had done was "the work done by any ranch wife" and that there was no evidence other than that the property belonged solely to the husband.

Cook an Irish Dinner For St. Patrick's Day

Though little is actually known about Saint Patrick, the missionary bishop who converted large sections of Ireland to Christianity in the middle of the fifth century, his anniversary is celebrated as a national holiday in the Irish Republic.

Patron saint of the "Emerald Isle", he has also become a symbol of the sentimental, patriotic fervor that has kept Irishmen Irish through countless generations in North America.

In fact, March 17 celebrations are far more festive in New York City than in Dublin, with parades that go on for hours.

In Ireland the day is observed fairly quietly, since all the pubs and bars are closed. Families often use the holiday to get together, for dinner and evenings of music and dancing. Tradition-minded persons decorate the houses with shamrocks, and wear them in their buttonholes.

If yours is a family that likes special occasions, make Sunday an Irish day at your house with a traditional St. Patrick's Day meal! Vegetable soup followed by roast pork, potato cakes, cabbage and tea (or a little Irish whiskey), with raisin bread and jam for "afters".

Or perhaps you'd like to try Irish colcannon with any meat dish as the entree.

Another typical dish is Irish stew, either traditional (with lamb) or modified (with beef), a whole meal in itself.

If you're looking for a touch of green on your table, remember spinach (try a spinach soufflé) - and there's always lime sherbet for dessert!

Vegetable Soup

2 medium onions
2 potatoes
2 carrots
1 piece of turnip
1 parsnip
4 cups meat stock
salt pepper
dash of marjoram
2 tbsp. butter
1 tbsp. flour
1 cup cream
parsley for garnish

Wash, peel and dice vegetables. Cover with meat stock, add all seasoning. Bring to a boil and simmer slowly for about 45 minutes. Strain. Pour soup back into pot. Mix flour with melted butter, add to soup and bring to a boil. Add cream and serve garnished with chopped parsley.

This traditional recipe removes the vegetables in the classic manner. You might improve on this technique if you have a blender by puréeing the vegetables in the stock after the 45-minutes cooking time. You'll have a thicker cream soup, and you won't have lost any of the goodness.)

Potato Cakes

1 lb. mashed potatoes
¼ cup butter, melted
¼ cup milk
salt
2 oz. flour
¼ tsp. baking powder

Beat potatoes with melted butter and milk. Add sifted flour, salt, and baking powder. Mix well. Shape into small cakes and bake on a greased sheet in a hot oven.

Irish Raisin Bread

2 cups bread flour, sifted
1½ tsp. baking powder
½ tsp. salt
¾ tsp. baking soda
½ cup seedless raisins or currants
1 tbsp. caraway seeds
1 cup buttermilk (approximately)

Combine the flour, baking powder, salt and soda, and sift together over the washed, dried and cut raisins and caraway seeds. Blend thoroughly. Stir in enough buttermilk to make a soft dough. Turn dough upon a scantly floured board and knead lightly until smooth and not sticky (about a minute). Shape the dough into a round loaf, and place in a greased round pan.

With a knife cut a cross on the top and bake in a moderate oven until the loaf is brown and shrinks from the sides of the pan. (The bread should sound hollow when tapped.) Let cool before cutting.

Savoury Irish Stew

3-4 lb. stewing beef, cut in 1 inch cubes
¼ cup flour
3 tsp salt
¼ tsp pepper
3-4 tbsp salad oil
3 cups cold water
1 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
½ tsp. dry mustard
¼ tsp. thyme
¼ tsp. savory
1 bay leaf
½ cup pared, sliced parsnip
2 cups pared, diced yellow turnip (rutabaga)
1 cup pared, sliced carrots
1 cup sliced celery
1 cup mushrooms halved
8 small onions peeled
8 small potatoes pared and halved
2 tbsp. chopped parsley

Combine flour, salt and pepper in paper bag. Shake beef in flour until coated. Brown meat, a few pieces at a time in salad oil, in a frying pan. Transfer meat to a large saucepan or dutch oven. Add water and next five ingredients. Simmer covered for an hour; stir in vegetables and simmer, covered for 45 minutes to an hour longer, or until meat is tender and vegetables are done. Thicken gravy if desired with three tbsp. of flour blended with sufficient cold water to form a smooth paste. Garnish with chopped parsley. Serves with hot, crusty bread or rolls. Serves 6-8.

To Plan Ahead:

Prepare Irish stew and simmer for 1 hour. Cool then freeze. Defrost when needed; add the fresh vegetables and simmer for one hour or until meat is tender and vegetables are cooked.

Traditional Irish Stew

2 - 3 lbs. stewing lamb
1 cup chopped onion
1½ cups grated potato
3½ cups water
1½ teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
4-5 medium potatoes quartered
8 small onions
chopped parsley

Cut lamb into 1" cubes and place in a saucepan with chopped onion, grated potato, water, salt and pepper. Bring to a boil, reduce heat and simmer covered for 1 hour. Skim off excess grease. Add potatoes and onion and continue cooking for 45 minutes to one hour or until meat and vegetables are tender. Sprinkle with chopped parsley. Serves 4 - 6.

Colcannon

6 medium potatoes, peeled and boiled, mashed when soft but tender
1½ cups hot boiled cabbage, finely chopped
¼ tsp. mace
two tbsp butter warmed milk
salt
pepper
two tbsp. finely minced onion melted butter

Mash potatoes until fluffy with mace, butter, salt and pepper, minced onion and as much warmed milk as necessary. Stir in hot boiled cabbage, and dribble in place in warm serving dish. Drizzle generously with melted butter.

Oxygen Might Have Saved Woman with Drug Overdose

SUDBURY (CP) A woman who died in Sudbury General Hospital after taking a drug overdose might have recovered had she received oxygen, a medical drugs expert testified Tuesday.

Dr. Stewart MacLeod, senior physician at the Addiction Research Foundation clinical institute, Toronto, told a coroners inquiry into 23 hospital deaths that if Lisette Boullard, 31, had received nitrous oxide at the hospital it would only have made her condition worse.

Mrs. Boullard of nearby Val Therese was given medical gas July 26 during resuscitation attempts in one of four hospital rooms later found to be emitting nitrous oxide from oxygen wall outlets.

Dr. MacLeod said her death was consistent with the inhalation of nitrous oxide but not consistent with nitrous oxide inhalation only.

He said he agreed with an autopsy report by Dr. Bernard Oliver that the woman's blood contained more than a lethal amount of the drug Darvon.

"Most patients such as this could be resuscitated," he said.

Dr. Stephen Roush said when he spoke to the woman in hospital she complained of being depressed for several months and of taking an overdose of pills. Ninety minutes after her arrival she suffered a respiratory arrest.

A mask connected to an oxygen wall outlet was placed on her face by a nurse, and Dr. Kosar was called into the room and removed the mask because "the patient was not breathing," said nurse Beatrice Stevens.

His Duty To Advise Says Leger

MONTREAL (CP) — Canada's new Governor-General sees himself as a "hyphen" in the government process and in reconciling the different views people have of his job.

"Some of you may find the symbols surrounding the Governor-General rather obsolete and sometimes irritating," Jules Leger said in a speech Tuesday to the Montreal Chamber of Commerce.

"There are also those who are indifferent, undoubtedly the majority of Canadians," he said.

"However, there are a considerable number of citizens who attach great importance to these symbols.

"Between these two groups a balance must be found, which takes one another into account."

On his role in the government process, he said he feels the Governor-General provides a "time of reflection" between the passing of laws and their going into effect.

"The role," he said, "appears to me as the symbol and guarantee of the stability, permanence and flexibility of our political system.

"The Governor-General must see to it that the country always has a prime minister."

Mr. Leger said the Governor-General "who has made a career of being well-informed can and must give advice, encourage and, should the occasion arise, put the government on its guard.

He said his role as Governor-General seemed all the more necessary as "we are in the time of the computer and decisions, even the most important, must be made rapidly at times.

"I feel a little responsible for an institution called Canada."

Coal Sold

VANCOUVER (CP) — Kaiser Resources Ltd. said Tuesday it has concluded agreements for sale of thermal coal to buyers in Europe and Eastern Canada.

Thermal coal is used for energy production.

Government Control of Economy Forecast

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — The nation is headed for total government control of its economy by the year 2000 unless Canadians act to halt the trend, President Keith H. Rapsey of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association said Tuesday.

Federal, provincial and municipal governments already spent an amount equal to half the total income of all Canadian citizens and all business firms, Mr. Rapsey said in remarks prepared for an address to the Ontario chapter of the Association of Consulting Engineers of Canada.

Mr. Rapsey said governments spending is the chief factor in the nation's worst inflationary spiral in 22 years, and that ultimate state control of all economic activity would mean the loss of basic freedoms by citizens.

"We are fast losing our freedom to choose between the governmental employer and the competitive-enterprise employer in the marketplace. We talk of a 'mixed' economy, but Canada is moving in the direction of the 50-50 proportions of that famous stew which contained one horse and one rabbit. The share of the private sector is steadily shrinking. . . .

"If the present trends continue, the state will operate or control all economic activity in Canada within the next 25 or 30 years. . . . It is easy to predict that the one remaining employer will begin to dictate wages and working conditions. There will be no other employer to compete for your services."

He said government spending since 1950 has increased more than 1,000 per cent, while wages and salaries rose 615 per cent, gross national product 540 per cent and before-tax corporate profits 470 per cent.

Over the same period, living costs have climbed 90 per cent, manufacturing wage rates per hour 370 per cent and personal disposable income after taxes 470 per cent.

Canada's population over the 23-year period increased 62 per cent, he said.

"It is an irrefutable fact that wage rates have risen twice as fast as the cost of living. Secondly, already the total personal income of Canadians has more than kept pace with the growth of the economy, our personal disposable income after taxes has lagged behind the growth of Canada's gross national product.

"The facts belie the screaming of those Canadians who charge that corporate profits are too high, and who maintain that we should scrap the competitive-enterprise system in favor of the centrally-planned all-powerful state.

"Corporation profits have, since 1958, grown only thereabouts as much as total wages and salaries, less than total personal income and less than the gross national product.

"The figures clearly spotlight the villain of the piece. Governmental spending has been growing close to twice as fast as our gross national product."

A text of Mr. Rapsey's address was released before delivery.

Hotels Provide Profit For Many Big Airlines

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Some airlines make more money housing people than flying them.

In recent years, airlines have jumped into the hotel business on a big scale and more expansion is ahead.

Pointing up the trend is American Airlines' opening in March of the 400-room American Hotel near Los Angeles International Airport. It will be American's 21st hotel in a chain stretching from Seoul, South Korea, to San Juan, Puerto Rico.

In the United States, American Airlines hotels include the Americana in New York, the Sheraton in Washington and the Bal Harbour Americana in Miami Beach.

"The airline-hotel business should grow because international travel is developing tremendously," said James R. Heimbaugh, president of Americana Hotels.

Pan American World Airways pioneered the airlines' entrance into hotel operations to provide modern accommodations for its customers in remote places.

Other international airlines followed suit, then all moved to operate hotels in cities along U.S. routes.

Many airline hotels are downtown but the recent trend has been to build them on or near airports, where businessmen can transact their business without going into the central city for meetings.

Most airlines don't report their hotel subsidiaries' earnings separately, but Trans World Airlines recently announced highly successful results for its Hilton International Co. in 1973.

The Hilton subsidiary's profits totalled $27.1 million, up 24 per cent from $17.4 million in 1972. TWA as a whole earned $46.8 million, compared with $43.1 million in 1972.

Hilton International, acquired by TWA in 1967, operates 39 hotels in 29 countries and has several under construction.

Pan Am's Intercontinental Hotels Corp. is the biggest of the airline-hotel operations with 79 hotels, including such as Amsterdam, Berlin, Helsinki, London, Munich and Paris. It has seven in Africa and 16 in Latin America and plans to open two in Hawaii this year.

Pan Am's practice is to build hotels in conjunction with local governmental or financial interests.

United Air Lines' Western International Hotels subsidiary operates 40 hotels in 11 countries. They include the Century Plaza in Los Angeles, the St. Francis in San Francisco, the Continental Plaza in Chicago and the Crown Center in Kansas City.

Eastern Air Lines runs the Ceiromna and Dorado Beach hotels in Puerto Rico.

Our plan is not to expand just to be growing but to provide the best hotel operations in areas throughout the world which American serves," said Heimbaugh.

Heimbaugh is a 33-year veteran of the hotel business. He was executive vice-president of Laurel Corp., a major hotel operator, and has been connected with Hilton Hotels and Chicago's famed Palmer House.

Heimbaugh said he envisages "acceptance of a greater standard of quality from us in international travel than from independent hotel operators. Countries that are interested in tourism and development will seek out airlines to work with them in operating their hotels."

On Show

TORONTO (CP) — More than 125,000 visitors are expected to wade through the display of 200 boats at the International Boat Show which opens at the Canadian National Exhibition in early February. Along with model boats and boat trailers, foul-weather gear, winches, boats and other sea-going accessories will also be on display during the 10-day exhibition.

He Finally Gives Up

Vets Choose Private Practice Ahead of Livestock Treatment

SASKATOON (CP) — Should Canadian taxpayers foot the bill to train veterinarians for dog and cat practices at the expense of the livestock industry?

Dr. F. M. Loew, director of the Animal Research Centre at the Western Veterinary College at the University of Saskatchewan, asks this question in reply to queries about the shortage of animal doctors in the cattle industry.

"More and more graduate veterinarians are going into small-animal practices in the cities," Dr. Loew said in an interview.

"Sure, this may be an advantage to them personally, but is this really a good use of public money?"

Dr. Loew said the problem is much broader, considering the growing use of plant protein rather than animal protein in human diets. But at the present time, the livestock industry is crying for more animal doctors.

"Many people will argue that the city-dweller who has cats, dogs or whatever, is a taxpayer and that he wants services for his pets.

"But, surely, when you look at the situation closely, the real national interest is in feeding the people in the cities."

Dr. Loew said the federal government has asked the university to estimate how much it would cost to increase the capacity of the college to 90 students from the present 60 to 66.

"This agitation probably originated in Alberta where the beef industry is experiencing a real shortage of large-animal doctors," he said.

"But, perhaps they are going off half-cocked on this because there are indications the livestock population is declining and it is being suggested that in the future humans will get 60 per cent of their protein requirements from plants compared with may have to go again, this year."

There are three veterinary colleges in Canada; two English-language and one French—the University of Montreal at St. Hyacinthe, Que.

The Quebec college graduates about 60 vets a year while the facility at Guelph Agricultural College provides about 130 a year now, a recent increase of about 30 a year.

Dr. Loew said federal officials, during the last two years, have completed a document advocating the expansion of veterinary training facilities.

"I think the idea is to saturate the private practice field to the extent that future graduates would have to think twice about turning down government jobs."

Population Conference to Be Held In Land Where Problem Is Few Births

BUCHAREST (AP) — The first World Population Conference, aimed at dealing with the earth's population explosion, will meet this year in Romania, where efforts to forces the birth rate up have failed.

The United Nations, which is sponsoring the conference Aug. 19-30 in Bucharest, has proclaimed 1974 World Population Year. The earth's population will grow during the year by four Romanias—a million people—to reach nearly four billion.

But Romania's problem is the opposite. While the world population growth rate is two per cent and rising, Romania's is below one per cent and falling despite efforts to boost the baby crop.

The Romanian Communist party paper Scinteia says "a fundamental task affecting the prosperity and future of our homeland is the increase in a constant rhythm of the birth rate."

In 1965, only 250,000 babies were born in Romania, while an estimated one million abortions were procured. Abortions were outlawed in 1966 except for women who already have four children or in cases of rape, incest or severe danger to the mother.

Births jumped to 527,764 in 1967, but since then have dipped to about 350,000 in 1973. Reasons for the decline include increases in illegal abortions and in the use of contraceptives.

Measures to stimulate the birth rate include allowances for children, more nurseries and kindergartens and higher taxes for childless families.

But women are attracted to jobs in Romania's growing labor-short industries, and surveys show working wives have fewer children. Urban housing is cramped and many families still share bathrooms and kitchens.

"They are trying to turn us into monkeys, just producing to fulfil the norm," said one young working wife. She said she wants children but "it would make life too complicated."

Some have questioned Romania's suitability as a site for the population conference. UN resolutions on human rights declare that only the couple has the right to decide how many children it should have and it should have access to knowledge and methods necessary to exercise this right.

The Romanian government says each nation must decide its own population policy, and since contraceptives and abstinence are available for birth control, it is complying with the resolution.

Blacksmith Kept Busy At Trade

OAK RIDGES, Ont. (CP) — Charlie Langen, 58, says he has been told at least a dozen times in his 45 years of blacksmithing that his trade was a dying art.

"If it is, I wish it would. Me down once in a while," he said as he stuck another horseshoe into his roaring forge. "How come I can hardly take time for lunch?

"It's been this way ever since I specialized 10 years ago," Mr. Langen said. "You have to specialize these days. My specialty is shoeing standardbred racing horses and I have so much I have to turn some down."

Mr. Langen keeps about 125 horses in footwear, either in his blacksmith shop near this community, about 15 miles north of Toronto, or with his portable smithy shop in a truck he takes to nearby racetracks.

He said the price of horseshoeing, like everything else, has gone up. He recalled when you could get all four shoes filed and attached for $2.75. Today the price ranges from $14 to $25.

"It takes me an hour to do it, but I'm slow," he said, adding that he gets an occasional kick out of it.

"Not more than 25 of them were real kicks by the horses. A lot of others were but little taps with the hoof and I've had quite a few scratches from horseshoe nails."

While getting an education to Grade 8, he picked up the trade from watching and getting tips from John Gooding, the blacksmith in Tilley, N.B., not far from Mr. Langen's 100-acre farm birthplace at Perth.

"I thought I was through with blacksmithing when I came to Toronto 10 years ago, but a guy was so hard up for a blacksmith that I had to give in," he said. "Every blacksmith in the country is busy since the rise in popularity of harness horse racing. We're getting calls from new customers every day."

Alberta Big In Potatoes

LETHBRIDGE (CP) — Irrigation and fertilizers are being used in Alberta to challenge New Brunswick as Canada's largest potato-producing province.

Scientists at the federal agriculture research station estimate that the potato yield in southern Alberta may eventually reach 25,000 an acre—twice the average yield in New Brunswick.

The use of irrigation and fertilizer in southern Alberta since 1960 has helped triple the region's potato crop and average yields have jumped to 12 from 7.5 tons, with total production in 1972 about 180,000 tons.

Researchers are attempting to develop new potato varieties suited to the area and other research involves pest and disease control.

The introduction of disease-free seed produced at the Vancouver research station is contributing to optimistic forecasts of major improvements in the quality of southern Alberta potatoes.

Sunrise Service Planned

Parkdale Baptist Church is planning an Easter Sunday morning sunrise service at Zwick's Island Park.

City parks board and the recreation-arena committee Tuesday approved the request for use of the park on the morning of April 14. The request was granted on condition that there is no collection taken at the service.

At its February meeting parks board approved a motion giving the Salvation Army use of the Island bandshell for one Sunday evening a month during the summer season.

Y President Re-elected

During a board of directors meeting Tuesday, Dr. Douglas Horne was re-elected as president of the Belleville YMCA for his third consecutive term.

Re-elected for a second term are Frank Hicks as first vice-president, Robert Wood as recording secretary, and Ray Tripp as treasurer. Steve Davidge enters his first year as second vice-president.

Hobby Display Thursday

The city's cubs and scouts display their hobbies to the public in a hobby show Thursday night at Eastminster United Church.

The show opens at 6:30 p.m. and runs until 9:30 p.m. Entrance is off the parking lot at the back of the church.

Categories include modelling in clay, soap carving and pastic models. Natural science displays feature rocks, insects, seeds, and leaves.

In handicrafts, there will be such displays, as bird houses, birdfeeders, toys, puppets and collections of all kinds, coins, stamps.

Everyone is welcome and there is no admission charge.

Up with Spring

Norman and Julie Johnstone of Trenton put March's gusty winds to good advantage Tuesday as their kite soared on its maiden flight. More winds and cool temperatures are expected for winter's final ebb.

Parks Budget Increased $60,000 Over 1973

Maintenance and development for Belleville parks this year will cost an estimated $472,100, according to budget proposals approved by board members.

This is the budget figure that has been recommended to city council for inclusion in this year's current city budget. Of the total, approximately $38,000 would be covered by grants or other revenues, leaving $434,100 to be levied on the city.

By comparison, last year's total parks budget was $416,000, while in 1972 the figure was $367,800.

Big item in the year's proposed budget is parks maintenance with board members slashing considerably the amount recommended by parks staff for parks development. Staff had proposed a budget of $517,000.

An amount of approximately $18,000 is proposed for extension of the roadway at the new West Riverbank Park in the city's north end. Of this amount a 50 per cent grant would be received by the parks board.

Also this year the parks board proposes paving of the Ben Bleecker auditorium parking lot, which with necessary curb cuts on Sidney Street will cost an estimated $16,000.

Also at the fairgrounds the parks board expects to spend about $1,300 in repair of the grandstand.

Another $10,000 is expected to be spent on site preparation at the Haig Road school site; $1,800 is earmarked for construction of a new backstop at the Parkdale playgrounds; $1,500 is being set aside for grading and seeding at the new parkette west of Sidney Street on Moira and an expenditure of $550 is proposed for a development sign on a small park at the St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church grounds.

Major Personnel Shifts Made by School Board

Major staff changes in county schools, effective Sept. 1, 1974, have been announced by Hastings County board of education.

Robert Henderson, vice-principal of Moira Secondary School has been appointed principal of Centre Hastings Secondary School in Madoc. He replaces Wally Beever, who was appointed a superintendent earlier this year.

Wally Moffatt, now an assistant department head at CESS will become vice-principal of the school.

Robert Leach, now vice-principal of Trenton High School will become principal of North Hastings High School in Bancroft after the retirement of F. S. Beckley.

Harry Birkenshaw, now vice-principal of Quinte Secondary School will return as vice-principal to Moira, where he held the post for many years.

Dudley Hillier, now vice-principal of Centre Hastings has been transferred to Centennial in Belleville and James MacKay, now vice-principal at BCI has been transferred to Quinte.

Other newly created vice-principals are Richard Brewer, a Trenton High School teacher who will become the school's vice-principal and Frank Chapman, Quinte Secondary School teacher who will become its vice-principal.

Five elementary school principals have been appointed by the board. They are: Jim Burns, now vice-principal of Sir John A. Macdonald School, who will become principal of the school; Jack Dix, now vice-principal of Queen Elizabeth School in Belleville who will become principal of Hillcrest School; David Weir, now a teacher at Marmora Senior School in Marmora who will become principal of the school and Allan Stitt, now vice-principal at Earl Prentice school who will become principal there.

Elementary school principals who have been transferred are David Boyd of Sir John A. Macdonald School in Belleville to Bancroft Public School; John Morrow of Hillcrest to the Frankford-Sidney Bowell Senior School; John Emerson Harrower from Hillcrest to Foxboro Senior Elementary School and Wayne Carleyy from Douglas M. Hunter Public School to Harmony School.

Mrs. Beverly Brooks, now educational assistant, has been appointed vice-principal of Sir John A. Macdonald School.

Elementary school vice-principals transferred are: James Duncan from Tyendinaga School to Sir Winston Churchill School; Douglas Knight from Sir Winston Churchill School to Bayview-D. R. Atkins School and John Smith from Prince of Wales School to Foxboro Senior Elementary School.

Those who have been appointed education assistants are: Nelson Berting, assistant department head in science at Trenton High School, science supervisor; David Sneddon, department head in mathematics at Moira Secondary School to mathematics co - ordinator; Robert Freeland, educational assistant in the Quinte Area to English and reading coordinator; Lloyd Jones, department head in history at Centennial Secondary School to history co-ordinator; Gary Thomas, department head in geography at Centennial Secondary co - ordinator; Murray Irwin, vice-principal of Centennial Secondary School to arts co-ordinator; Lyle Sutherland, principal of Sir Mackenzie Rowell School to the Centennial associated school group; Kenneth Gillies, principal, Earl Prentice and Marmora Public Schools to Centre Hastings associated school group and Gary Stevenson, principal, Bancroft Public School to North Hastings associated school group.

It's a Puzzlement!

An unidentified parachute flare dropped to the ground beside Silvano Pallaca (left) and Doug Thorn yesterday noon on Station Street and opened up a flood of conjecture. Neither military or civilian aviation authorities in the area can account for the mini-chute. The boys have one comfort . . . if it came from outer space, they have convincing evidence that inhabitants of other planets are smaller than human beings.

Mysterious Parachute Baffles the Experts

An unidentified flying object settled in the feet of two school boys on Station St. yesterday.

Twenty-four hours later, the origin and purpose of the small parachute flare is still a mystery.

Doug Thorn, a student at Queen Elizabeth School and Silvano Pallaca, a student at St. Michael's were on their way to school at 12:30 p.m. Tuesday when they saw a bulging ball about a foot in diameter approaching them. It was floating toward them from the north as they walked along Station St., near the Centennial Park. The orange ball disappeared as the object hit the ground and the two boys found a small white parachute on the spot. They had the presence of mind to search the sky, but could not see a plane overhead.

The parachute is made of white silk, about 15 inches in circumference, with shrouds about two feet in length. At the base is a small, charred metal disc. The short length of electric wire that connects the shrouds and the disk is marked by a knitted asbestos sleeve.

The meteorological office at CFB Trenton said the parachute could not be of government origin. "All the government of Canada can afford is paper or plastic," a spokesman said.

He added that flares are usually dropped at night, when they are more easily tracked. Winds at noon Tuesday were from the north.

A query at the CFB Trenton control tower disclosed that the only aircraft near Belleville at noon Tuesday was a Being 707, a plane that would not be in the flare-dropping business. They suggest you find the matter in the hands of "civilian police," said the tower spokesman.

Jim Marker of the Belleville Flying Club examined the chute and admitted he was stymied.

Kinsmen Offer Free Skating

The students' winter break holiday is almost a week old if any young people in the city find they have nothing to do that week, the city's Kinsmen have a solution.

Starting on Monday, students on holiday can skate free at the Memorial Arena provided by a knitted asbestos sleeve.

The Kinsmen are offering the free ice time from 1:30 p.m. to 2:30 p.m. from Monday until Friday.

"All chutes used in military and civil aviation are marked with letters and numbers that identify them," he said.

The small white parachute is innocent of markings.

The neat stitching that attaches the shrouds to the chute looks like the work of a talented needlewoman, but Mr. Marker said the assembly that attaches the shrouds to the remnant of the flare is a factory job. He doubted that the object was homemade.

Most flares burn for a maximum of three minutes, he said. If the flare had been ejected north of Belleville on the CFB Trenton glide path, it would have burned out before the two boys saw it floating toward them.

Although the boys couldn't spot a plane, "there was somebody up there somewhere," said Mr. Marker.

But who was he, and why was he dropping flares at noon on a sunny day over a densely populated area? And why didn't his aircraft register on CFB Trenton's control tower equipment?

Dance Students Registering

Quinte Dance Centre above Eaton's Order Office on Front St. is again registering students. The centre's third term begins this week and continues until June 8, with instructor Brian Scott in charge. Registrations will be accepted at the school every day this week after 4 p.m.

The school has enrolled about 100 students this year in a second year of operation. After the winter break a group of six young dancers from the centre will give ballet demonstrations at six Belleville elementary schools. The demonstrations, patterned on those successfully conducted in Toronto schools for several years, include both a short ballet performance and an instructional period.

Convention-goers Bring Back Ideas

Traffic problems in Belleville are nothing compared to those in many other Ontario centres.

That is the story brought home by members of the city council - traffic and light committee following attendance at the Ontario traffic seminar for elected representatives held in Toronto early in March.

Local traffic committee members attending the Toronto seminar were Arthur Keegan, Stu Meeks and George Zegouras.

But even though Belleville's traffic problems might be small compared with many other centres, committee members brought home a few ideas they felt might be worth considering here.

One of these was a possible shuttle service to bring people to downtown from outlying parking areas.

Such an idea, it was felt, could help to reduce traffic congestion in the downtown area.

Another idea was the designation of certain streets for overnight parking so commuters who have no driveways in which to park.

This idea was said to have been put to use in some Metro Toronto areas where a predominance of large single family houses converted to apartments exist.

But this idea didn't sit too well with City Engineer Wilbur Purcell, who foresees snow removal and street cleaning problems resulting from any the overnight parking.

And Alderman Paul Russell felt that before any streets were designated for overnight parking, there should be an established need.

"We haven't had so common in Belleville," he said.

Alderman Keegan noted that the next traffic seminar would be held in Ottawa and he asked if there were any small city problems which should be placed on the agenda.

He said that mass transit problems in the large cities were considered at the seminars but there was little discussion on mass transit for the smaller centres.

Clare Heads Local Group

Belleville hairstylist Paul Clare, owner of Paul's Place on Victoria Ave., was elected Quinte area president of the Hairstylists of Ontario Association, Inc., Tuesday.

Speaking during an organizational meeting yesterday, provincial president Jean Andari said part of Mr. Clare's duties will be to find new members for the professional trade organization, his area of responsibility will be Northumberland, Hastings and Prince Edward Counties.

George Bastlone, of Lido Men's Stylists at the Quinte Mall was elected vice-president and A. Bloomfield barber, R. J. McEwan was elected recording secretary.

New Barbers' Group Attracts City Members

Most of an estimated 30 Belleville barbers and hairstylists attended an organizational meeting Tuesday for one of the newest Ontario-wide professional groups, the Hairstylists of Ontario Association, Inc.

During the meeting, association president Jean Andari explained the purpose of the organization, saying that not only would the association provide benefits to members but would act as the profession's lobbying force with the provincial government.

Incorporated as a non-profit corporation in September 1973, the groups plans to work toward setting minimum standards for customers fees, salaries to shop employees, and compulsory licensing of practising barbers across the province.

"We'd like to see a minimum fee established so that all industry members can make a decent living," said Mr. Andari.

The president claimed nearly 1,000 of the province's 8,400 barbers and hairstylists have joined the association to date, most in western Ontario.

Six Belleville barbers and one Bloomfield man paid the $50 annual membership fee last night.

Through association efforts Mr. Andari hopes the province's barbers and hairstylists will increasingly look upon themselves as professionals.

To that end, part of the group's program would include lobbying for some control over licensing in Ontario. Redrafting of provincial barbering legislation will also be sought, he said.

At present, the Department of Labor certificate of qualification allows all 8,400 registered barbers the right to practise. However, the president claimed of this number, 2,400 are not full-time professionals. These men are "moonlighters" holding other jobs and barbering on weekends or in the evenings.

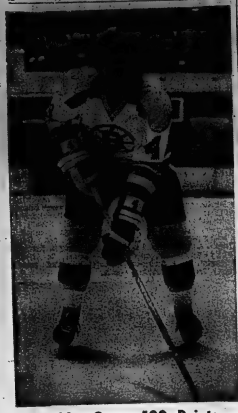
To fix members, the association provides no-cost yearly refresher courses, a certification of qualification, province-wide publicity, a trade newspaper and convention registration.

Barbering supplies are partially discounted for members. An optional low-cost group insurance plan is provided at a cost of $21 yearly. The plan would pay a barber or hairstylist $200 a month up to two years should an individual be without work.

Stylists Join Up

Bloomfield barber R. J. McEwan was one of six men who signed on the dotted line Tuesday to become members of the Hairstylists of Ontario Association, Inc. . . . the newest bar bering professional group in Ontario. Bested Sam Mete and association president Jean Andari spoke to to nine of Belleville's estimated 30 barbers and hairstylists during an organizational meeting outlining the groups objectives and benefits to members.

Parkland Trees To Be Purchased



City parks board will purchase a total of 175 trees from the Ministry of Natural Resources for planting in the new East River Bank Park in the north end of the city.

The trees, to cost $1 each, will be purchased through the Moira River Conservation Authority and will be planted on the west riverbank parkland leased from the authority.

Twenty-five trees each of seven different varieties will be ordered. The varieties are Austrian Pine, Douglas Fir, Norway Spruce, Weeping Willow, Amur Maple, Basswood and European Larch.

Trees of a comparable size purchased by the parks board for planting in city parks normally cost much more than $1 that will be paid to the ministry of natural resources.

Parent May Get A Few Games Off Before Playoffs

By THE CANADIAN PRESS.

The way Philadelphia Flyers are winning, goaltender Bernie Parent may finally get a few games off before the Stanley Cup playoffs begin.

Coach Fred Shero had said he would not rest Parent until the Flyers took a firm grip on either first or second place in the National Hockey League West Division.

Tuesday night the first-place Flyers opened a nine-point lead over Chicago Black Hawks with a 2-1 win against New York Islanders at Uniondale, N.Y.

Parent appeared in 62 of the Flyers' first 65 games and established a 1.82 goals-against average. Most other NHL teams have two or even three goalies sharing the load.

Shero said Tuesday he has taken special steps to ensure that Parent has the stamina to play virtually every game.

"We don't overwork him in practice and we do everything possible to rest him. We let him room alone on the road and we keep checking to make sure he doesn't lose too much weight."

Goals by Simon Nolet and Bill Barber gave the Flyers their sixth win in a row.

In other games, Detroit Red Wings downed Vancouver Canucks 3-1, St. Louis Blues edged Toronto Maple Leafs 2-1 and Boston Bruins blanked Buffalo Sabres 4-0.

Wings 2 Canucks 1

Vancouver missed a chance to climb out of a tie with the Islanders for last place in the East Division when Mickey Redmond scored the decisive goal, his 45th of the year, late in the second period.

The Wings held a two-man advantage when Redmond unleashed a 45-foot slapshot that went through the pads of Vancouver netminder Gary Smith.

Blues 2 Leafs 1

Wayne Stephenson blocked 25 shots as the Blues ended an eight-game winless streak.

Larry Giroux and Pierre Plante gave the Blues a 2-0 lead before Jim McKenny made it close with a third-period goal.

Bruins 4 Sabres 0

Bobby Orr topped the 100-point mark for a record fifth year in a row when he assisted on John Bucyk's third-period goal.

Phil Esposito scored his 59th goal and picked up his 68th assist and Gilles Gilbert recorded his fifth shot for the Bruins.

Tonight, Montreal Canadiens are at Chicago Black Hawks, Detroit Red Wings visit California Golden Seals, Pittsburgh Penguins go to Los Angeles and Atlanta Flames are at Minnesota North Stars.

Johnston Finished As a Wing

DETROIT (AP) — Larry Johnston and Detroit Red Wings parted company Tuesday in a contract dispute.

The National Hockey League club said the defenceman's "services for the balance of this season will not be required."

The team said it has paid off Johnston's 1973-74 contract and has withdrawn a new three-year agreement which was being negotiated. Johnston is the NHL players' representative for the Wings.

Sources reported Johnston was told he had to sign the new contract before being allowed to go on the team's current West Coast swing.

He was not allowed to board a team bus Sunday and coach Alex Delvecchio said Monday Johnston would stay home until he "gets his contract straightened out."

Neither Johnston nor Jimmy Skinner, the acting general manager, were available for comment Tuesday night.

Remparts And Hawks Still Hot

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Sorel Black Hawks and Quebec Remparts are leaders in the East Division of the Quebec Major Junior A Hockey League mainly because of their ability to outscore their opposition.

Tuesday night they continued their scoring splurge as the Black Hawks thumped Shawinigan Dynamos 6-0 and Quebec outlasted Sherbrooke Beavers 7-5.

The Remparts also reached a milestone Tuesday night, becoming the second team in the league to register 500 goals. Their total brought them to 502, still far behind Sorel's league-leading 575.

Sorel has threeplayers with more than 60 goals each and the Remparts four with more than 60 goals each.

Robert Ritchie, not one of the Big Three with the Black Hawks, scored three goals in the win over Shawinigan. Larry Lovasy, Michel Frechette and Jacques Cossette added the others. For Cossette, one of Sorel's top three scorers, it was his 62nd goal of the season. He also has 106 assists for 200 points.

Oilers Protect Goalie Worthy

By THE CANADIAN PRESS.

Edmonton Oilers made it easy for goalie Chris Worthy Tuesday night in the third period of their World Hockey Association game.

The oilers tightened their defence to allow just one shot on Worthy while they scored four times in the final 20 minutes to beat Los Angeles Sharks 5-1.

He stopped 31 shots while the Oilers established a 4-0 lead.

The Oilers equalled their highest goal output of the season as they took sole possession of third place in the West Division, moving two points ahead of the idle Winnipeg Jets.

The Sharks, in the West Division basement with 45 losses, have 16 games in which to equal the WHA record of 50 defeats, set last year by Chicago Cougars.

Blair MacDonald led the Edmonton attack with two goals. The Sharks' Gerry Odrowski spoiled Worthy's shutout with a goal in the second period.

In other games, the Cougars downed New England Whalers 3-1 and Houston Aeros edged Minnesota Fighting Saints 3-2.

Cougars 3 Whalers 1

The win moved the Cougars to within one point of Cleveland Crusaders, who occupy fourth place in the East Division. Cleveland has played one more game than Chicago.

Don Gordon and Ralph Backstrom scored tie-breaking goals for the Cougars in the third period. Backstrom and Duke Harris each had two-goal nights for the winners.

Aeros 3 Saints 2

The Saints saw their chances of overhauling the West Division-leading Aeros dwindle as they lost their second in a row after an 11-game unbeaten streak.

Houston now leads the Saints by nine points.

The Saints complained that Houston had a man in the crease when Gord Labossiere scored the winning goal.

Tonight the Sharks visit Vancouver Blazers and Winnipeg is at Cleveland.

Greatest Triumph

CHRISTCHURCH, N.Z. (Reuter) — New Zealand scored the greatest cricket triumph in its history today when it beat Australia by five wickets in the second test match. Needing 229 runs in its second innings to win, New Zealand finished with 230 five. Scores were Australia 223 and 259, New Zealand 255 and 235 and 230 for five wickets.

Angotti Sounds Off

TORONTO (CP) — A former team-mate has told The Globe and Mail the problems Bobby Hull is having as a coach are similar to those he had as a player.

Lou Angotti, who now coaches St. Louis Blues of the National Hockey League, played with Hull for Chicago Black Hawks of the NHL.

Hull left the Hawks to become player-coach of Winnipeg Jets of the World Hockey Association.

"I hear now about Bobby Hull complaining players have no discipline," Angotti told the newspaper in an interview in St. Louis before the Blues beat Toronto Maple Leafs 3-1 Thursday night.

"He doesn't have it as a coach because he wasn't disciplined as a player." The Globe and Mail quotes Angotti as saying.

"He could miss practice. He could fly out of town on business. He never sat down and looked at Lou Angotti or Chico Maki and said, 'Those guys aren't getting the same privileges as me.'

"How about all the times we were ordered to get on the bus right after a game, only to have to wait for him to sign autographs?

"And we'd been ordered to get on right away and look bad for turning people down when they asked for autographs."

Sabres Alive

WELLAND (CP) — Welland Sabres remained alive in their Southern Ontario Junior Hockey League semi-final playoff series Tuesday by edging Chatham Maroons 7-6 before 1,458 fans.

Despite the loss, Chatham leads the eight-point series 6-4.

The sixth game in the series will be played today in Chatham.

The Sabres jumped into a 3-0 lead in the first period but the Maroons bounced back to tie it. However, before the end of the period the Sabres managed to regain a 4-3 lead and never looked back.

It's Cats, Blues In Metro Final

The Metro Junior B Hockey League final series will open in Belleville Friday night. Game time is 9 o'clock.

Bramalea Blues, fresh from an upset victory over Markham Royals, will supply the opposition for Belleville Bobcats in the championship series.

Bobcat general manager Soize Matthews said this morning that reserved seat tickets will be available only for season subscribers. The season ticket holders may pick up their tickets for the Friday game at McKnight's Variety.

The remainder of the seats at Memorial Arena will go on a first come, first served basis, Friday.

Matthews said the second game in the Belleville-Bramalea set will be played in Bramalea, Sunday night, at 8:15. Dates of remaining games in the playoff have not been announced as yet.

Bramalea disposed of Markham, Tuesday night, posting a 7-4 win in the home of the Royals. Blues took the semi-final series 4-1.

Royals were second during the regular season. Blues finished fourth.

Since they finished in third place, Bobcats will get the odd game in the final playoff.

During season play, Bobcats held the edge on the Blues, winning twice and dropping one decision. A fourth meeting between the two teams ended in a 5-5 tie.

Top Shuffleboard Team

McInroy-Maines Club Gets Even

TRENTON — When Belleville McInroy-Maines met Trenton Kiwanis hooked up in a minor bantam exhibition contest in Belleville, Saturday night, the teams scored seven goals, Trenton had four of them.

In a rematch here Tuesday night, there were five goals scored. Belleville accounted for all the scoring plays, to average the weekend setback in convincing style.

Bruce Bell turned back everything the Trenton shooters could muster here Tuesday. His mates chalked up a single counter in the first period and added two in each of the second and third frames.

Dan Duffy led the Belleville scoring parade with two goals. Danny Vance, Ken Revoy and Nelson Frederick checked in with one each. Gary McInroy was in on two of the goals.

It was the second win in as many nights for McInroy-Maines, Monday, the club slipped Frankford 5-4.

Duff topped the Belleville scorers in that one, too, clicking for two markers. Nelson Frederick, Revoy and Mike Bryant added the others.

Paul Bedard had a big night for the Frankford squad, scoring three times. Randy Scott shot the other goal for the losers.

Rollins On Spree

Rollins Construction major peewees have found the scoring touch, at least against AA competition.

In a pair of weekend exhibition encounters, the club chalked up a total of 23 goals. And the goaltenders held the opposition to four counters.

Rollins added a 13-1 win over Kingsford Township to go with a 10-3 defeat of Napanee.

Big point-maker for the Belleville youngsters in the 13-1 victory, was Shawn Mulrooney who scored once and added five assists. Kevin Meagher checked in with two goals and three assists while Bill Rowe was good for three and one.

Mark Crawford and Clarence Broekema each scored twice with singles for Greg Sproul and Steve Murphy. Defenceman Tim Soule earned three assists.

The lone Kingston goal came off the stick of David Boston.

Bears Win In Overtime

SMITHS FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Beaver Corkran's goal in sudden-death overtime Tuesday night gave Smiths Falls Bears a 6-5 win over Pembroke Lumber Kings and a 1-0 lead in games in their best-of-seven Central Junior Hockey League final series.

Des Allen, John Kenney, Barry Kerfoot, Terry Fournier and Don Robertson scored the other Smiths Falls goals.

Randy Rich and Steve Croucher each netted twice for the Lumber Kings and Peter Palibski once.

The lead see-sawed through regulation time and one 10-minute overtime period before the play moved into sudden-death overtime.

After leaving the first period in a 1-1 tie, the teams jockeyed through the second period to a 3-3 deadlock and then added one apiece in the third period.

The initial 10-minute overtime period saw Robertson score at 5:05 before Croucher tied the game again with his second at 9:26.

In the sudden-death, Corkran finally beat Pembroke goalie Gerry Armstrong.

Fraser Greenwood went the distance in the Smiths Falls goal.

The series resumes Thursday in Pembroke.

Eight Teams Open Playoffs

The Gas House Hockey League opened playoffs last night, with two groups of four teams competing for titles in a unique playoff setup.

In the setup, the top four teams over the regular season compete for the A Crown, while the next four in the 11 team league shoot for the "B" Crown. All series in the first round are best of five sets.

In A division results, Mead Johnson, pennant winners with 43 points, defeated Stanley Structures 6-1. Stanley was the fourth place finishers, with 23 points. In the other A division game, Belleville Generals and Golden Mile Restaurant played to a scoreless tie.

Fraser and O'Neil Real Estate took a one game lead in the first game of the B division over Constellation with a 3-0 win, while the Intelligencer and Rollins Lumber tied their contest at four goals each.

Defenceman Ted Rowlands scored two goals and added a pair of assists in Mead's win, with Ralph Brant, Keith Park, Mike Keegan, and Bob Mulvihill scoring the other markers. Charlie Rowbotham added two assists.

Rob Brown was the only Stanley marksman to put a dent in Mead goalender Vera Whalen's shutout bid.

Bob Harrison of Golden Mile and Belleville Generals' Ron Green matched shutouts for their respective teams in the rare scoreless tie.

Fraser and O'Neil got goals from Bill Lynch, Wayne McGeachy, and Glen McEachan as their win over Constellation, while Jim Parker recorded the shutout. Larry Pascoe drew two assists, as did Wayne Andersan.

Denny Barager had the scoring touch for the Intell, firing three of his team's goals in the 4-4 tie. Paul Rutlan scored the other goals, while Bruce Symons and Austin Wilson added two assists each.

Mike Lazier fired a pair of goals for Rollins', with Keith Dickey and Scott McLaren scoring the singles. McLaren also added a pair of assists.

Tonight, the League All-Stars take on the South Hastings League All-Stars in an exhibition game in Trenton. Proceeds of the game will be split between leagues, with the game time set for 8:45 p.m. at the Trenton Community Gardens.

Penalties, Goals Galore

LINDSAY (Special) — Punctuated by a steady parade of penalties which marred the game, Trenton Birt's Hanby Stand and Lindsay hooked up in Ontario Minor Hockey Association Juvenile AA playoff action here Tuesday.

Total of 135 minutes in penalties resulted.

The Trenton team came out on the short end of the penalties (97 minutes to 40) but when it came to scoring goals, it was the Birt's squad all the way. The visitors took a commanding 3-0 lead in games in the best of seven set with their 12-3 win.

Seven of the Trenton goals came on the powerplay. Birt's built an 8-0 lead before Lindsay bit the scoreboard. And after the home side clicked for three in a row, the potent Trenton shooters decided enough was enough and proceeded to rap in four more counters.

Birt's can wrap up the series in straight games Thursday night when the series resumes at Trenton Community Gardens. Game time is 6.45.

Centre Don Armstrong spearheaded the Trenton attack, counting four goals and picking up three assists. Linemates Al MacIntosh and Curt McLean each scored twice and earned two helpers.

Bob Cameron was another two-goal man for Birt's with singles for Bill Glover and Scott Poole.

Pat Lynch, Wayne Patton and John Hannivan replied for Lindsay.

Petes Are Back in Contention

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Peterborough Petes moved back into contention in the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A series with a 3-1 win over Oshawa Generals Tuesday night.

The win was Peterborough's second in its last 11 games and moved the Petes to within eight points of idle Kitchener Rangers and three back of second-place St. Catharines Black-Hawks. The three clubs have all played 61 games.

Stan Jonathan, Gord Duncan and Doug Fox scored for Peterborough with Jarvis's goal coming into an empty net with 22 seconds remaining in the game. Rick Fraser got the goal for the Generals, who were outshot 37-24.

Tempers flared in the first period in which referee Tom Brown assessed eight majors and a game misconduct. A total of 78 minutes in penalties was handed out in the contest.

The win avenged the 7-3 loss Peterborough suffered in Oshawa last Sunday.

In other games, Toronto Marlboro defeated Ottawa 7's 5-2 while London Knights trounced Hamilton Red Wings 8-3.

Action resumes in the circuit Thursday with Kitchener at Peterborough and St. Catharines playing host to Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds.

Marlboros 5 7's 2

Toronto overcame Ottawa's early 1-0 lead with two quick goals before the first period ended and outscored the 7's 3-1 in the second 20 minutes. The final period was scoreless.

Josh Tonelli, Mike McEwen, Mark Napier, Craig Crawford and Brad Winton scored for the Marlboros who outshot the 7's 35-27. Dale Ross and Derek Smith replied for Ottawa.

Knights 8 Red Wings 3

Terry Martin and Dennis Maruk each scored twice for London which remains one point back of Peterborough. Peter Vighe, Paul Nicholson, Ron Zuke and Tom Rowe got the other goals for the Knights who outshot Hamilton 45-34.

Mike Cosentino, Greg Hickey and Mike Mahin replied for the Wings who remain mired in last spot with 14 wins in 65 starts.

5-point Lead for Bears

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hershey Bears won their fifth straight game Tuesday night, enabling them to open up a five-point lead on top the south division of the American Hockey League.

The Bears, now with 86 points, defeated Jacksonville Barons 4-1 for their 37th win in 67 games. Cincinnati Swords are second in the south with 79 points, one more than Baltimore Clippers and 26 ahead of the Barons, who hold the fourth and last playoff berth.

In the only other game, Boston Braves edged Virginia Red Wings 3-2.

Bears 4 Barons 1

Terry Ewaniuk scored two goals, one at the 45-second mark of the first period, to lead the Bears before 1,168 fans in Jacksonville. Jim Wiley also scored twice for the Bears, including his second goal into an empty net with eight seconds remaining.

Ed Hoekstra spoiled goalie Dennis Herron's shutout with a goal at 4:08 of the final period.

Meanwhile, general manager Jack Vivian announced Tuesday that the Barons have been sold to a group in Syracuse and will move there next season.

The purchase price was reported to be $250,000.

Braves 3 Wings 2

Ron Boehm's goal at 15:32 of the third period snapped a 2-2 tie and gave the Braves their win before 1,277 fans in Hampton, Va.

Bob Gryp and J. P. Burgoyne got the other Boston goals. Gene Sobchuck scored twice for Virginia.

Indians Producing

Cleveland Indians pounded out 11 base hits and outscored California Angels 9-6 Tuesday for their third exhibition baseball victory in four outings. Cleveland has collected 41 runs in its four games.

George Hendrick hit his second homer of the spring and also had a single for Cleveland. Leroy Stanton homered for California.

Milt Wilcox was the winner and Rudy May the loser.

In other exhibition games, Oakland As topped San Francisco Giants 8-3, San Diego Padres routed Chicago Cubs 11-6, Chicago White Sox split their squad and lost to Pittsburgh Pirates 9-5 and to St. Louis Cardinals 2-1, Cincinnati Reds defeated Los Angeles Dodgers 4-3, Houston Astros shaded Minnesota Twins 4-3, Philadelphia Phillies bulfed Detroit Tigers 10-2, New York Yankees blanked Kansas City Royals 9-0, Boston Red Sox beat New York Mets 3-1, Texas Rangers downed Atlanta Braves 7-3, and Milwaukee Brewers dumped Arizona State University 5-2.

Burr's Stock Up In Spite of Loss

CALGARY (CP) — Chris captain of the Canadian Davis Cup team, after Nick Kalogeropoulos, lost his first-round match Tuesday but he apparently won something more valuable in the process.

"That's the best game I've seen Burr play in some time," said Don Fontana of Toronto, assistant captain of the Canadian team. "He has done some things to improve his ground strokes. It seems he should be able to do something now to improve his concentration. If he keeps improving he'll be quite a player."

Nine members were played Peter Burwash of Toronto could not make connections from Hawaii and defeated to Bob Giltinan of Australia 6-4, 6-4 between Kjell Johansson of Sweden and Frantisek Pala of Czechoslovakia was delayed until today after play fell behind schedule Tuesday night.

Only two sets went to the nine-point tie-breaker, one in the Kalo-Burr match and the other when Rick Bobustoff of Redlands, Calif., defeated Jan Placcky of Czechoslovakia 6-7, 6-3, 6-3.

Four of the day's matches went to three sets, an unprecedently high number in first-round play. Officials said the slow, synthetic surface contributed to long rallies.

In the only upset, Byron Bertram of South Africa, a former Wimbledon junior champion, downed Charlie Owens of Birmingham, Ala., seeded fourth, 6-3, 7-5.

Jergen Fassbender of West Germany, seeded second behind Australian Kael Metller became top-seeded Sandy Mayer of Stanford University did not appear, needed three sets to defeat Syd Ball of Australia 3-6, 6-2, 7-5.

In the other three-set test, Tony Swanson of Sweden rallied to whip Lars Ekstrom of Denmark 4-6, 6-3, 6-2.

In other games, Basilio Taroczy of Hungary whipped Ion Santeiz of Romania 6-2, 6-4, Hairo Velasco of Colombia bowed to Jose Moreno of Mexico 6-4, 6-3.

Magic Number Is Two

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Two is the magic number for coach Ray Scott and his Detroit Pistons.

If they can win two of their six remaining National Basketball Association games, the Pistons will accomplish both of the goals Scott set before the season started.

"One was to win 50 games and the other was to make the playoffs," said Scott.

And since Tuesday night's 113-108 win over Golden State Warriors was Detroit's 49th of the season, their arrival at the 50-win plateau will put them in the playoffs for the first time since 1968.

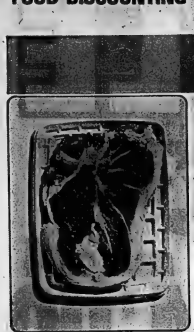
Los Angeles Lakers defeated New York Knicks 109-102, Buffalo Braves crushed Phoenix Suns 134-94, Capital Bullets stopped Philadelphia 76ers 113-101, Cleveland Cavaliers downed Atlanta Hawks 95-84, Kansas City-Omaha Kings edged Chicago Bulls 93-85 and Boston Celtics dropped Portland Trail Blazers 110-93.

In the only American Basketball Association game, Kentucky Colonels nipped Memphis Tams 86-87.

Pistons 113 Warriors 108

Dave Bing scored 28 points to lead the Pistons and Rick Barry had 25 for the Warriors.

Lakers 109 Knicks 102



Los Angeles moved to within .001 of the first-place Warriors in the Pacific Division race. Gail Goodrich scored 34 points for the Lakers.

Braves 134 Suns 94

Playing without NBA scoring leader Bob McAdoo, Buffalo got 30 points from Jim McMillian and 25 from Gar Heard.

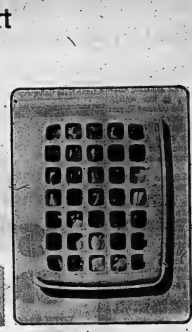
miracle Food Mart

We're so proud of our meat - we want you to see both sides!

MIRACLE FOOD MART IS PLEASED TO INTRODUCE THE NEW SUPER-VUE MEAT TRAY . . . A MEAT TRAY THAT REALLY LET'S YOU SEE THE MEAT

In these inflationary times when every ounce counts, Miracle Food Mart feels it's important that you see what you're buying.



There have been see-through meat trays before, but not with the special advantages of the new super-vue trays now at your local Miracle Food Mart.

These new meat trays let you see the top and sides of the meat, and at least 2/3 per cent of the bottom of each cut — without fogging or misting. And because they're porous, and designed to allow refrigeration to circulate freely around the meat, they keep the meat fresher longer in your home refrigerator.

There's another plus. Made of natural fibres, these new trays are biodegradable, and have been given highest ecology rating.

If you have any questions about them, ask the meat manager or store manager. Or write Helen Gagen, Consumer Advisor, Miracle Food Mart, 75 Rencide Blvd., Rexdale, Ontario M9W 1P2.

MEMO FROM HELEN GAGEN, CONSUMER ADVISOR, MIRACLE FOOD MART

YOU ASKED TO SEE MEAT ON BOTH SIDES

The new super vue trays now in all Miracle Food Mart stores are there largely thanks to comments and questions from you, the consumer.

One of the main concerns expressed by customers has been their desire to see both sides of the meat before they buy. Those of you who are ecology-minded have asked for bio-degradable trays. These two facts were in mind when Miracle Food Mart decided to introduce this new kind of see-through tray to their customers.

When the trays were test-marketed, Miracle Food Mart customers found that they had a better chance to stretch their meat dollar when they didn't have to guess what the underside of the meat looked like. And they found real satisfaction in knowing that the trays have highest ecology rating.

Because shoppers in the test area liked them so well, the new trays have now been adopted in Miracle Food Mart stores throughout Ontario.

The characteristics of these trays allow air circulation on both sides that helps keep meat fresher longer, so no re-wrapping is recommended or necessary for home refrigerator storage.

World Hockey Again?

MONTREAL (CP) — A Montreal newspaper reported Tuesday that the National Hockey League Players' Association (NHLPA), through its executive director Alan Eagleson, has been conducting talks with international hockey officials regarding a return of Canada to the world hockey championships on an open competition basis.

The Star says the talks have been taking place without the knowledge of NHL owners or individual player representatives and that Sports Canada, the sports arm of the federal government, has been involved. However, the newspaper says the Sports Canada people are under the illusion that what's being discussed is a Team Canada-Soviet series, while Eagleson is directing his efforts toward open competition against a group of European teams.

In 1972 Team Canada, a group of NHL all-stars, played an eight-game series against the Soviets in Canada and the Soviet Union. The Canadians managed four wins, against three losses and one game was tied.

"There's no need for a series exclusively with the Soviets," the newspaper quotes Eagleson as saying. "Any talking I have done with Europeans has been on the basis of entering the world championships on an open basis—and that would mean an NHL all-star team along with players from the World Hockey Association.

Canada withdrew from competition in the world championships in 1970, after the International Ice Hockey Federation (IIHF) refused the use of a limited number of professionals by the Canadian team.

BEAVER handyman tip No. 22 in a series

Preparing to paint

Interior Painting: how to start:

1. Move all furniture into the centre of the room—then cover it with plastic sheeting. Remove all picture hanging tags, nails, plus drapes and blinds.

2. Wash ceiling and wall surfaces with a mixture of warm water and mild detergent. Rinse off with clean, cold water.

3. Inspect all surfaces for cracks and holes. Don't forget the woodwork and baseboards!

4. Obtain a sturdy stepladder (BEAVER stocks several types).

5. Cover the floor area over which you're going to work with plastic sheeting (from BEAVER).

6. Using a narrow-bladed painter's knife, cut out any cracks in the ceiling; cut, so that the crack looks like a tramp's upside-down — this forms a "key". Rub hard the filler in. Now do the same operation on any wall cracks. Now, with a brush, dust-out the cracks.

7. With a wet brush, dampen the cracks and fill with Polyfilla.

BIGELOW — Joseph and Margaret are pleased to announce the birth of their daughter, Jennifer, on Monday, March 11, 1974 at the Belleville General Hospital. Weight 6 lbs., 14 ozs.

IN MEMORIAM

KNOTT — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Ivan E. Knott who passed away March 13, 1970.
Today recalls the memory
Of a loved one dear and true
A thought of him is with us today,
As there was with us then.
The flowers we lay upon his grave,
Will fade away and die,
But memories of him who lies beneath,
Will never fade away.
Sadly missed by wife Evelyn and Evelyn remembers with love
Mother, daughter Joy, John, Leanne, daughter Glen, Marion and all the grandchildren.

CARD OF THANKS

I would like to thank all my friends, relatives and neighbors who sent cards, flowers, and visited me while I was a patient in the Belleville General Hospital and since returning home. Special thanks to Dr. F. Scott, Dr. Hamilton and the nursing staff on 5th floor for their kindness.
Vera Hart, Roslin, Ont.

I would like to thank my dear family Dr. Peter Scott, Dr. Hipwell and the nursing staff on the 4th floor of Belleville General Hospital for their kindness during my recent stay. Your cards and flowers were also much appreciated.
Harry Paul.

I would like to thank my relatives, friends and neighbors for their cards and flowers while I was a patient in the Belleville General Hospital and the Extended Care Hospital.

New Anne Murray Touring U.S.

MONTREAL (CP) — Anne Murray has an American dream and it's wrapped up in dollar bills.

"I don't mind making American dollars," Canada's top female vocalist told a news conference Tuesday.

Anne is in the midst of a tour of American college campuses and is heading for more television spots on American networks. The aim is to sell more records in the U.S., she said.

The tour is Anne's first since the careful reshaping of her style and image to fit in with the "big time" demands of the major U.S. market.

She is already known in the U.S. for her appearances with Glen Campbell on television and on the nightclub circuit, but she is distinctive among Canadian popular singers for making it first north of the border.

Although she has already demonstrated that there is a "new" Anne Murray in a recent concert in Hamilton, quite a bit of the easy-going gal from Springhill, N.S., still shines through.

"All them folks down there," she says in her deep throaty voice as she talks of her prospects in the U.S.

"All them folks" will be greeted with a wider variety of songs. Her repertoire has been expanded from country and easy listening to include backstreet blues and gritty rock.

She says she is more relaxed on stage now because of acquiring a new dress designer who creates clothes "that are much more comfortable." Her pronounced toothy image has been softened by long gowns.

Anne is enjoying her college tour, which ends April 21, because she prefers small audiences and audiences that react more heartily to her songs.

She has just released a new album entitled Anne Murray Love Song. Included in that album is the song, Send A Little Love My Way, from the movie, Oklahoma Crude.

That song has been nominated for an Academy Award.

Although anxious to increase her fame in the U.S., Anne had several uncomplimentary things to say about the American entertainment world.

"Hollywood is very sterile."

She said she preferred to record in Toronto, where she now lives. In Toronto people "work for you as long as you like" and aren't always begging for coffee breaks as they do in Hollywood.

The American entertainment world is very hectic, she said. After a short time in the U.S., "I'm speeding."

But she says there are more opportunities in the U.S. than in Canada, and that she can gain greater acceptance in the U.S. than at home.

Stratford Players Praised

ADELAIDE (Reuter) — The Stratford Theatre Company of Canada received good reviews in Australian newspapers today for its performance here of Moliere's farce, The Imaginary Invalid.

William Hutt, in the role of Argan, especially caught the fancy of the critics.

The Stratford, Ont., company took nine curtain calls Saturday night after its opening performance here of the major stage piece of the Adelaide Festival of Arts.

Writing in The Advertiser, drama critic Mary Armitage says:

"The French are reported to be finding Moliere rather a strain. The South Australians look like making him a prime people-type, festival fun-shoot.

"Lively the premier's thumbing success owes less to Moliere's text than to the ability of the Stratford company to live down the success of his role in television's Forsyte Saga, delivers a beautiful performance heavily disguised as the odious Thomas Diafoirus.

"Jean Gascon's direction gives us a production that should stand as a model for our local groups to emulate."

Earnier, in The Sunday Mail, John Fahey reported:

"Jean Gascon's production is a triumph for William Hutt, who plays the hopeless but lovable hypochondriac, Argan, with the warmth and skill of a theatre's Yogi Bear.

"His rubbery features, bulbous nose and nuances of delivery endeared themselves to the audience from opening curtain to the final encore.

NEW YORK (AP) — Janis Joplin insurance-claim trial ended with a settlement Monday, but terms of the agreement on the $200,000 policy left by the rock superstar were not disclosed.

A six-man jury in New York State Supreme Court has been hearing evidence for almost a month on whether the singer's death by heroin overdose was accidental or suicide.

Walbert Grossman Management Corp., the singer's manager and beneficiary of the accidental-death policy, had sued the Associated Indemnity Co. of San Francisco for the proceeds, the death was accidental.

The insurance company resisted payment, arguing that Miss Joplin's death Oct. 4, 1970, in a Los Angeles hotel room was a suicide, nullifying the policy.

The Los Angeles medical examiner's office has ruled that the death was accidental.

Salt Means Body Retains Fluids

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I had a non-functioning kidney that had to be removed. I am making a great recovery and am told I must follow a salt-free diet, so am trying to assemble foods I can eat that will help me eliminate fluids. Do you have a list?—E.

Hunting for a list of foods you can eat isn't going to be a perfect way to understanding what you are trying to do. It would be a long list. Your doctor may have such a list, though, or you can get some help from the hospital dietitian or a visiting Nurse Association dietitian.)

Here's what you should keep in mind. Ordinary table salt is sodium chloride—and sodium has the property of holding extra water.

So if you eat a lot of salt (sodium) your body will tend to retain more fluid, meaning water.

People often loosely talk about a salt-free diet, but that actually is an impossibility. The body needs a certain amount of sodium, and you will get it in the food you eat.

What you really must try to achieve is a low-salt diet and not a salt diet.

To do so, use no salt on your food at the table. And don't use salt in cooking (There are salt substitutes available at the grocery, and you can use other seasonings, including pepper, lemon juice, herbs or spices to add flavor to your meals.) No onion or celery salt; they are merely flavored salt.

Next, avoid prepared foods which you know, or strongly suspect, are salted. Salty crackers are of course a no-no. Butter is usually salted, but you can get fresh butter—that is, unsalted butter. Also you can get salt-free bread.

You can take it for granted that prepared meat products will have a lot of salt—hot dogs, corned beef, bologna, sandwich meats, bacon, and so on. Also canned herring or salted fish. Also pickles.

So stay away from such things. And in case of doubt about other prepared food products, get in the habit of reading the labels. If they include salt, or the word sodium, stay away from them.

Prepared cheese has a high salt content; cottage cheese good, so that is handy for salt-wreckers.

One tip. When the label says "packed in brine," remember that "brine" means very salty water.

Bassett Meets Minister

Lalonde to Ask For Bar on WFL

OTTAWA (CP) Parliament probably will be asked soon to determine whether Toronto Northmen or the World Football League, or any other U.S. football team, will be allowed to play in Canada.

Health Minister Marc Lalonde said Tuesday he will recommend to cabinet that action be taken to prevent this occurance and a decision could be made in two weeks.

The minister told reporters he prefers that prohibition against the WFL or the National Football League (NFL) be done through legislative means.

He told the Commons earlier that a provision of the British North America Act could be used.

Mr. Lalonde, whose portfolio makes him minister of sport, made his remarks after an hour-long meeting with Toronto businessman John Bassett Jr., part-owner of the Northmen.

No future meetings were scheduled and no progress was reported.

Mr. Bassett declined to comment on the meeting except to say the Northmen will be playing football and that he has spent more than $300,000 on the team and has contracted commitments for another $2 million.

Informed sources said Mr. Bassett, in a brief, contradicted the minister's oft-repeated remarks that government policy concerning foreign teams has been known since 1971.

The brief is reported to to have said the Northmen would guarantee that equalization payments from Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League to poorer CFL clubs would not go under 1975 level for the next 10 years.

And the sources said the Toronto team promised to give up to either the government or the CFL that part of its franchise covering the rest of Canada.

Mr. Lalonde, who believes that a U.S. team playing in Canada would hurt the CFL, particularly the smaller western clubs, told reporters:

"Parliament will have to decide whether it wants to keep Canadian football alive or whether we are to be a bunch of colonials."

He had told John Diefenbaker (PC—Prince Albert) in the Commons that he could use Section 91 of the BNA Act which deals with powers of Parliament and its ability to make laws for the "peace, order and good government of Canada."

Mr. Diefenbaker said later "that's the funniest answer I've ever heard" and that it showed that Mr. Lalonde was bankrupt of knowledge of the act.

At present there is not much known reaction from western MP's to the minister's proposals. In Toronto area MPs are reported divided with most, if not all, Liberals supporting him and most, if not all, Progressive Conservatives and New Democrats opposing him.

At least some of the western MP's are reported leaning toward Mr. Lalonde's views.

Need Good Forecasts Of Crises

OTTAWA (CP) — Better federal forecasting in handling crises is recommended in the edited version of a report completed 15 months ago and tabled Tuesday in the Commons by Prime Minister Trudeau.

Actions taken to implement some of the recommendations include reshaping and renaming of the Emergency Measures Organization (EMO), created as a public defence agency during the cold war.

The report was prepared in the wake of the 1970 Quebec crisis under direction of Gen. M. R. Dare, now heading the security section of the RCMP.

He began May 1, 1972, and the final report was done by the following October. Gen. Dare edited the version issued Tuesday.

"The government has accepted the main thrust of the proposals, and implementation of specific recommendations is well advanced," says the accompanying news release.

"Foremost among them is that the federal departments and agencies should retain primary responsibility for handling emergencies that come within their areas of responsibility."

Major management and co-ordination roles in emergencies are seen for the departments of national defence, environment and transport.

The government says it has followed a recommendation calling for a small secretariat in the Privy Council office to advise the cabinet on crises as necessary.

But it defers creation of a group which would operate a cabinet "situation room," using the vast communications network of the Canadian Forces.

OUR WAY — by Neg Cochrane

Service Stations Are Tourist Lure

OTTAWA (CP) Quick now! What is Canada's greatest tourist attraction?

Placid Lakes? Primeval forests? Spectacular mountains? Scenic coasts? Rolling prairies?

If you said these and other things you are only half right.

This year the big attraction is expected to be the friendly national service station, seemingly capable of endless babbling streams of gasoline.

Tourist officials say Canada should have a bumper vacation season this year, partly because of those taken-for-granted stations.

"If you ask me to make a bet on it, we're going to have a very good year," Dan Wallace, director of the Canadian government tourist bureau, said in an interview this week.

While officials decline to make estimates of future tourism, they say the 36 million Americans who crossed the border last year should at least be equalled and probably surpassed.

Premier Bennett, Ontario minister of tourism and industry, is more optimistic than federal officials.

Hetold the Ontario Development Corp. conference in Niagara Falls Monday the energy crisis will result in the province's biggest tourist year.

Federal tourist officials are looking at the American fuel situation with mixed feelings. If the United States solves its fuel crisis—if the Arabs finally let them have enough oil—then they can come here without trouble.

If it doesn't, there are about 130 million Americans who can make the border on one tank of gasoline.

Tourist officials say about two-thirds of American tourists in the past came from within 300 miles of the border—for many a couple of tanks of gasoline.

Officials feel that many Americans know that Canada has no gasoline shortage and they are not planning to hit them over the head with what might be considered unduly-drastic advertising.

But they are getting the message across.

This year more than ever Canada is the place for your vacation, advertising will say. Come by train, plane, bus or car—see your travel agent or carrier.

The message about adequate fuel thus will come from the travel agent, not the Canadian government.

Alternatives For Hydro Are Requested

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Energy Board asked Ontario Hydro Tuesday to tell how it might cope with cuts to its $1.5-billion expansion plans through 1981.

Robert Macaulay, lawyer for the board, suggested at public hearings into Hydro's building plans that cuts of $1 billion or $2 billion might be possible.

He said that in 33 days of hearings so far it seemed that Hydro was presenting only one program with no alternatives.

Mr. Macaulay said the board needed more than the simple choice of saying yes or no to the entire project to do its job.

As another alternative, he asked Hydro to comment on the option of delaying construction of some proposed nuclear generating stations.

Lawyers Barred

Montrealers Flocking To Small Claims Court

MONTREAL (CP) — Lawyers are fighting it, but people have been throwing to provincial small claims courts to settle disputes ranging from back-yard squabbles with neighbors to fender-bending automobile accidents.

Maurice Levasseur, assistant director of the courts, set up in 1972, says one such court in Montreal handles a case every 15 minutes and receives between 500 and 600 telephone calls a day.

They all involve claims of less than $300. There are nine small claims courtrooms on Montreal Island and 94 across the province.

"We have all kinds of cases," Mr. Levasseur said, including accidents, damage suits, and actions to collect professional fees as typical.

Similar courts exist in most of Canada, but in Quebec lawyers are barred from the small claims courtrooms unless they never went to law before because it was too expensive.

"We're dealing with a public that doesn't know anything about law and the courts," Mr. Levasseur said. "We try to explain how it works and how easy it is but there are less they are litigants, some cases we can't accept."

He said one recent case involved a woman who wanted to sue her neighbor because her freshly-washed sheets became tangled and torn in her neighbor's new clothes line. The case was rejected because the woman was unable to prove the value of her destroyed sheets.

In another case which has still not been settled, three train passengers sued a railway company because they were in a non-smoking car and other passengers were smoking.

Alleging damaged health, they brought claims of $100 against the railway.

The judge asked CP Rail to enforce no-smoking regulations and put on special smoking cars, which was done," Mr. Levasseur said. "There is no judgment on the money yet."

Statistics confirmed the popularity of the courts.

Between Sept. 1, 1972, and Aug. 31, 1973, a total of 75,465 cases were accepted involving an average claim of $119. Of that total, 57,765 cases were settled.

The average time between filing of the action and judgment was 43 days.

"If's successful: there's no doubt about it," he said. "We're too busy.

"Many of our customers tell us they never went to law before because it was too expensive."

The Quebec Bar Association was an early opponent of the law which created the courts, and has launched a suit to have certain provisions declared unconstitutional.

A spokesman for the association said it is in "complete agreement" with the principle of the court and with the attempt to speed and simplify small claims procedures.

He said the association disagrees with the provisions which keep lawyers out of the small claims courtrooms.

"Everywhere such courts exist, people have the right to be represented by lawyers," the spokesman said. "We feel it is an encroachment on that right."

The law which created small claims courts allows persons to file a suit simply by filling out a form.

A clerk decides whether the case will be accepted, but the petitioner has the right to ask a judge to review the case if it is rejected.

A court date is set and both parties are required to appear if the defendant decides to contest the action. The judge hears and questions both parties, then renders a decision in writing. There is no appeal.

Court costs are $5 if the claim is less than $300 and $10 for claims between $100 and $200.

Mr. Levasseur said the parties are usually in court for about 20 minutes.

"Our only problem is a lack of personnel," he said. The delay in judgment is getting a little longer because there aren't enough workers to handle all the cases quickly. The average case now lasts about 60 days."

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

Ontario Motor League
Eastern Ontario Club

QUESTION: We are driving to the southern U.S. and understand that the 55 mph limit applies only in some areas. Is this true?

ANSWER: The U.S. Department of Transportation informs us that as of March 6, 1974, 38 of the states have complied with the mandatory 55 maximum speed limit regulation: Alabama, Kansas, Montana and Arizona. These states are not always clear-cut within the next few days.

QUESTION: Has there been any evidence that compulsory use of seat belts anywhere has been really effective?

ANSWER: Evidence continues to mount that wide use of seat belts in Australia is a key factor in reducing auto fatalities there. A study of the American Automobile Association in 1970, Australia became the first nation to enact the law requiring seat belt usage.

Citing a statement by the Royal Australasian College of Surgeons, A.A.A. says there has been a steady decline in brain and spinal injuries and an even greater decline in arm injuries resulting from auto crashes.

Earlier, it was reported that within one year of the law's passage, the country's highway fatalities fell 30 to 25 percent and the rate of serious injuries dropped 30 percent.

TUESDAY THE RABBI SAW RED — Harry Kemelman.

Here is the fifth in the popular mystery series, about Rabbi David Small. Tired of the bickering in his congregation, the Rabbi accepts a teaching post in Windemere College. Here he is faced with campus life as it is in the seventies. At a student demonstration, a bomb kills and he is again involved in murder.

MYSELF, CHRISTOPHER WREN — David Weiss.

David Weiss' biographical novels, including several book club selections, have been translated into many languages. His latest work is an epic tale which evokes turbulent 17th century London and re-creates Christopher Wren's life, loves and brilliant gifts as astronomer, inventor, mathematician and above all — architect. The novel reveals passion and integrity and adds the dimension of his romantic relationships and love for his daughter, to his great dream of St. Paul's and his determination to see it finished.

THE MAN WITH THE BLACK WOOLLY BEARD — George N. Ramazes.

In 1941 the Germans were marching across Europe and were in control of North Africa. The vital link between the two forces stretched through Greece across the Mediterranean. When Major Cunningham of British Intelligence in Greece first saw Petros Zervas, the young man had just pulled off an audacious theft under the German's eyes, and Cunningham knew he had found his underground leader. The story culminates in an attack on the Axis fleet anchored in Piraeus, a massive operation that involves all participants.

THE QUEEN'S HUSBAND — Jean Plaidy.

As is well known, Queen Victoria fell completely in love with Albert, son of a German Duke. On his part, Albert was ambitious and aware of what marriage with the Queen of Britain could mean. But he did not know that underneath the feminine exterior was a will of iron. The first years of marriage were stormy — with Victoria fighting any encroachment on her position, and Albert determined that she would be a wife first and queen second. Jean Plaidy has written another fascinating novel of royalty.

THE EYE OF THE STORM — Patrick White.

Blessed at birth with wealth, charm and spectacular beauty, Elizabeth Hunter for eighty years wreaked havoc with constant demands for love and her inability to give it. Now in her last days she is still in command, over her son and daughter, her housekeeper, physician and nurses. Patrick White, winner of a Nobel Prize for Literature, has written a powerful story about a clash of wills between an old lady and those she seeks to dominate.

WOMEN IN WHITE — Frank G. Slaughter.

Once again, Frank Slaughter combines his talents as a writer and a surgeon, to take the reader behind the scenes of a major metropolitan hospital, describing action in emergency rooms and operating theatres and the emotions of those involved.

Unbearable

LONDON (CP) — The price of the raw material, largely imported from Canada, and criticisms by conservationists, are causing authorities to consider replacing the black bearskin used in the Brigade of Guards headgear with some other suitable substance. One possibility is fur from the red-like South African coypu which is killed as a pest in this country.

PROCLAMATION
"COMMUNITY CONCERT WEEK"

The Belleville Community Concert Association is holding its annual membership campaign from Monday, March 11th through Saturday, March 16, 1974. The drive is a most worthy one. Its purpose is to assure a series of concerts by professional artists during the coming year.

The availability of fine music is an advantage of inestimable value to the citizens of Belleville. This advantage is made possible through the work and efforts of citizens such as the officers and workers of the Belleville Community Concert Association. It is through their work and the continued support of our citizens that we are able to hear and enjoy the riches of music.

Therefore, as Mayor of the City of Belleville, I proclaim the week of March 11th to March 16th, 1974, as "COMMUNITY CONCERT WEEK".

ROBIN JEFFREY,

It's Teachers' Move as Bill Ordering End to Strike Gets OK

TORONTO (CP) — After six hours of heated debate Wednesday, the legislature gave approval in principle to legislation aimed at ending a 10-day walkout by high school teachers in York region.

Bill 100, which imposes compulsory arbitration on the 667 teachers and the York County board of education, passed second reading by a 72-10-25 vote with both the Liberals and New Democratic Party opposing.

Meanwhile, the teachers decided at an earlier meeting to postpone any action on the bill until a meeting today at 1 p.m.

The executive of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation (OSSTF) recommended to the teachers that they return to work voluntarily as employees of the federation, not as employees of the school board.

The federation said such an action would allow students to resume their studies while teachers continue their fight with the board.

Such duties as hallway and cafeteria monitoring were not included in the federation's return-to-work proposal.

While debate in the legislature proceeded, the school board voted 16-to-3 to accept the bill and said trustees would show no discrimination toward OSSTF teachers when they returned to work.

A majority of trustees spurned a suggestion from Robert Houghton to "make one last attempt to negotiate a settlement," and decided to wait for the government to enact Bill 12.

"The concern is among trustees was that this course of action would be the quickest way to get the school functioning normally.

During the legislature debate, Education Minister Thomas Wells denied opposition charges that negotiations had been carried on in bad faith and said that up until the final impasse, both sides in the dispute were putting forward an honest effort.

Opposition critics had charged the board was "arbitrary" in its attitude and had refused to negotiate the issue of pupil-teacher ratio.

"I made my views known to them . . . but I'm not a dictator," Mr. Wells said.

He said the government was left with no alternative when the final stalemate occurred.

Earlier, the minister said the province would go all out to make sure the 14,000 students have a chance to make up for lost school time.

If said make-up courses might be arranged and that universities would be informed of the circumstances if marks and applications were late in arriving.

Opposition Leader Robert Nixon said the dispute might have been settled earlier if the government position on working conditions for teachers had been made clear.

The legislation includes pupil-teacher ratios as a point to be arbitrated.

"The teachers have suffered from a great deal of criticism based on a misunderstanding of the circumstances," Mr. Nixon said.

Stephen Lewis, NDP leader, reiterated earlier statements that the school board should bear the brunt of the blame for the drawn-out dispute.

"When a board almost sluphandedly serves to undermine the education systems for 14,000 students, and by implication, jeopardizes it for a great many others, then I think it is our responsibility to deal with the board directly."

He said the board had evoked fear, anger and rigidity from the teachers and negotiated "in bad faith from the day talks opened.

If teachers were covered by the Ontario Labor Relations Act, he said, the behavior of the board would not be tolerated.

Mr. Lewis urged the teachers to obey the bill if it is passed.

"But for everyone concerned, even if the law is so and so, it contains the legislature should observe it and therefore the schools function again."

Several teachers said following their meeting they would obey the law, while others said they would continue to fight any government amendment to get them back into the schools.

Vincent Mathews, chief negotiator for the York teachers, read a telegram from Peel County secondary school teachers, calling on the OSSTF "to organize resistance to Bill 100 by, means of "a provincial strike until true collective bargaining returns."

Embargo Said Lifted

U.S. Expecting To Get Arab Oil

TRIPOLI (CP) — Arab oil-producing countries were reported today to have agreed to lift their oil embargo against the United States at least temporarily amid further reports they will return to full production which may lower world prices.

While the oil ministers remained silent until the 12-country Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) meets Sunday in Vienna, reports from various sources gave rise to optimism that the embargo against the U.S. will soon end.

However, the Arab countries appear determined to continue punishing Denmark and the Netherlands for alleged failure to change their policies on the Middle East.

In Washington, Vice-President Gerald Ford said it is his understanding, after speaking to State Secretary Henry Kissinger, that the embargo against the U.S. has been lifted and an announcement is expected soon.

His views was in line with an earlier report here in which an unidentified high-ranking Libyan official was quoted as saying the ministers agreed Wednesday to end the embargo against the U.S. with the decision to be announced in Vienna Sunday.

In another U.S. report, the Los Angeles Times said in a Washington story that the agreement to lift the embargo against the U.S. is limited to a two-month trial period.

"To preserve some semblance of unity, the Arab nations agreed to a compromise which commits them to take another look at both the embargo and the production levels in two months," the newspaper quoted one unidentified diplomatic source as reporting.

The Times said it was the view in diplomatic circles that the two-month clause was intended to pressure the U.S. during disengagement talks between Israel and Syria.

The Arab countries also agreed to return to full petroleum production, a move expected to lower world full prices, the paper added.

Saudi Arabia, the Times said, will lower the posted price of oil to $8.50 a barrel, a drop from the current level of $11.65.

The state department had no official comment but officials there said they were encouraged by the word they had received.

On the NBC-TV Today program, Prime Minister Zaid Al-Rifai of Jordan, in an in-depth interview from Washington, said the Arab countries decided to lift the embargo individually. He said no collective decision was made and did not elaborate.

After the five-hour ministerial talks here Wednesday, Libyan Oil Minister Ezzedin Mabrouk said the ministers were moving in the direction of ending the ban rather than maintaining it.

In Cairo, the newspaper Al Akhbar today quoted Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Ahmed Zaki al Yamani as saying the U.S. embargo would be lifted but the ban on the Netherlands and the cut on Denmark would remain in force.

TV Appearance Sought

Judge Will Rule Monday On TV Show for Accused

HILLSBOROUGH, Calif. (AP) A Judge says he will rule Monday on a request to let two prisoners charged with murder go on United States television with suggestions they claim could help free kidnapped Patricia Hearst.

Superior Court Judge Sam Hall took under submission Wednesday a request by lawyers for Russell Little, 24, and Joseph Remiro, 27, for a televised statement of five to 10 minutes.

Little and Remiro are purported members of the Symbionese Liberation Army (SLA) which claims responsibility for the Feb. 4 kidnapping of the 20-year-old co-ed. They are charged with the cyanide-bullet murder last year of an Oakland schools superintendent, Marcus Foster, and the attempted murder of a policeman.

William Gagen, a lawyer for Remiro, said the statement, if permitted by Judge Hall, would be made before a single cameraman and one reporter in an Oakland courtroom. He said it would consist of what he termed "calm, thoughtful and noninflammatory" suggestions about the release of Patricia Hearst," and discussion of their confinement at San Quentin prison and the Alameda County jail where they were transferred last Friday.

Death Penalty Gets U.S. Senate Backing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States Senate has passed a bill designed to overcome the 1972 Supreme Court decision against the death penalty.

The bill, passed Wednesday by a 54-to-33 vote, would restore, under certain circumstances, the death penalty for treason, espionage or murder.

No early action on the bill is expected in the House of Representatives, partly because the judiciary committee is occupied with an inquiry into the possible impeachment of President Nixon.

Among those who voted against the bill were Senators Charles Percy (Rep.Ill.) and Edward Kennedy (Dem.-Mass.), both of whom have had immediate members of their family murdered.

Submitted to Congress by Nixon a year ago, the bill is designed to overcome the Supreme Court ruling that the death penalty, as applied under existing laws, was unconstitutional.

A score of states have since passed measures to restore the death penalty, many of them similar to the bill approved by the Senate.

The bill would restore the death penalty for espionage, treason and certain other federal crimes, like kidnaping and airplane hijacking, resulting in death.

Farm Labor Said Vital

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Institute of Agrologists said today steps must be taken to ensure an adequate supply of farm labor if Ontario farmers are to meet the growing demands for food.

In a brief presented to the policy field committee for resources development of the Ontario cabinet, the institute said it is essential that farmers are able to provide wages and working conditions comparable with those in other industries.

Institute president R. Blair Heeney of Trenton, Ont., said in a press release that the brief emphasized the need for continued efforts by provincial and federal governments towards developing agricultural policies which will ensure sufficient returns so farmers can compete in the labor market.

Record Ransom Paid by Esso

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Exxon's Argentine subsidiary says it expects Marxist guerrillas to release American refinery manager Victor Samuelson today following payment of a world record ransom of $14.2 million.

Esso Argentina announced Wednesday that the money had been delivered to the People's Revolutionary Army (ERP). It said the final ransom demand would be fulfilled today with publication in Argentine newspapers of an advertisement stating that the ransom was "part of the super-earnings obtained in Argentina through exploitation of its workers."

Samuelson, 35, of Cleveland, Ohio, was kidnapped Dec. 6.

Kurds Fight Iraqis

ANKARA (Reuter) — Fighting has erupted between Kurdish tribesmen and government troops in northern Iraq, a Turkish news agency reported today.

In a dispatch from the Turkish-Iraqi border, the Independent Haber news agency said the Kurdish militia had forced some Iraqi units to withdraw to the south.

The agency said the sound of gunfire and shelling was clearly audible in Turkish border towns early today.

A Turkish government official in the area said it appeared the forces of Kurdish leader Mullah Mustafa Barzani were in control of "much of northern Iraq."

Haber reported a Turkish military build-up along the 207-mile border but gave no details.

Eastern Turkey has a large Kurdish population.

The news service said the voice of Kurdistan radio went on the air today calling for a return to arms "to rescue Kurdish territory from Iraq."

Liberals To Oppose Labor Plan

LONDON (Reuter) — Britain's seven Liberal party MPs decided today to line up with the Conservatives in a parliamentary vote which could spell defeat—but probably not down-fall—for the new Labor government.

The 14 Liberals in the 635-seat House of Commons said they would support Prime Minister Edward Heath's Conservative party night in a vote against the Labor government's new legislative program.

But Liberal spokesmen stressed that a Labor defeat would be unlikely to force the government out of office so soon after its arrival in power.

Prime Minister Harold Wilson has said he will not automatically regard a parliamentary defeat as a signal to resign. He would be within his rights to counter a defeat by calling for a vote of confidence.

Political experts believe there is little doubt he would win such a vote.

Cassidy's Criticism Curtailed

Education of the deaf is a closed world, says Michael Cassidy, member of the provincial committee for Hastings Centre and outspoken NDP critic of education.

He was in Belleville yesterday to attend meetings with Ontario School for the Deaf teachers. Following "tough and interesting" talks, Mr. Cassidy said "the problems of the profoundly deaf child are not as simple as I thought when I began talking about it in the legislature."

Last fall Mr. Cassidy charged that three-quarters of graduates from schools for the deaf "are totally unable to string an English sentence together and can write and communicate in writing only at this most basic kind of level, grade 1 or grade 2."

Later in the Nov. 26 debate, Mr. Cassidy told education minister Thomas Wells that "it may be that you need to kick out half of the teaching staff at schools for the deaf."

Mr. Cassidy's attitude softened somewhat after his afternoon at OSD. At the request of teachers he returned for another meeting in the evening.

"I am concerned that there is so much deeply rooted concern in the deaf education," he said. "This had bred resistance to change."

Mr. Cassidy said he was glad to see that finger spelling had been introduced at OSD this year.

"What's been done is positive. I wish it had been more and had happened sooner."

Mr. Cassidy said he was told that only 40 per cent of OSD teachers are masters of finger spelling. He favored giving teachers time off for intensive training in finger spelling.

He was also critical of the province for insisting that parents of deaf children buy their hearing aids.

He called for the employment of deaf adults as teachers and hoax parents at the school to give deaf children a figure they can look up to.

But Mr. Cassidy was more critical of the school's reluctance to involve the community in its operation.

"Links with the community are formal and distant," he said. "I get the feeling the school doesn't reach into the community and the community doesn't reach out to the school."

He suggested that children from distant points should have surrogate parents in Belleville to entertain them on weekends and to provide contacts with hearing children.

Mr. Cassidy also suggested that teenagers from city high schools visit OSD to help deaf youngsters "on a one-to-one basis, like a big brother or sister."

Obituaries

Vending Machines in Schools

Dentists Join Soft Drink Protest

BLOOMFIELD — Prince Edward school trustees have received several letters this month criticizing installation of soft-drink vending machines in county schools.

A letter from Dr. Dennis A. Warrick, director of dental services, Hastings and Prince Edward Counties Health Unit, stated that statistics show the annual per capita consumption of candy is 20 pounds, 16 pounds of cake and the annual per capita consumption of soft drinks is over 100 pounds.

"From an early age, excessive use of sugar tends to become commonplace," he observed.

The result is that dental disease affects 99 per cent of the population in its lifetime, he said. He advocated encouragement of white milk consumption in the schools.

A Picton dentist Dr. Gerald Bradley wrote to trustees seeking removal of the machines now in the schools. He suggested they should be replaced by others dispensing whole white milk or other nutritious sound foods.

Dr. J. C. Davis, president of the Bay of Quinte Dental Society, suggested that trustees reconsider their stand in allowing soft-drink machines in schools.

He said: "We consider this to be a regressive step away from good oral health and hope this treather will be brought to the attention of the principals involved."

A motion from the Consecon Women's Institute also commented on the installation of the vending machines.

Trustees referred all letters to a special committee investigating the use of vending machines. The committee had originally approved them after careful study, but is now re-examining its decision in view of criticisms.

The machines are in use at Pinecrest, Wellington, North Marysburgh, Kente, Sophiasburgh and Queen Elizabeth elementary schools and Prince Edward Collegiate Institute.

White milk is offered at PECI, Athol, Kente, Happy Hours, Massassaga, Wellington, North Marysburgh, South Marysburgh, Sophiasburgh, and Pinecrest.

Discuss Park

MARMORA — Village clerk-treasurer William Shannon has been asked to write Peter Gill, Crowe Valley Authority Resources Manager, inviting him to a meeting with Marmora Village Council to discuss a possible village-authority agreement regarding Marmora's approved municipal park.

No vending machines have been installed at South Marysburgh, Athol, Mildred Corbe, Happy Hours and Rednerville schools.

Agree on Bills

TARMORA — An agreement has been reached between village council and the Marmora Hydro Commission for billing of water accounts.

Hydro will be paid $135 a month for the service, which will see water and electric billings going out simultaneously.

The agreement calls for review of the rate early in 1975 to assess its adequacy and a revision if necessary. The Corporation would provide use of a postage meter and charges would be shared equally for the common billings.

Religion Teacher Gets Support from Parents

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

BLOOMFIELD — Concerned parents supporting the quality of religious instruction at Rednerseville school have sent a stream of endorsations to Prince Edward board of education on behalf of instructor Twila Langman.

Trustees during a board session this week, reviewed 17 letters in support of the lay teacher's work. Several of these included petitions signed by teachers and parents eager to have Mrs. Langman continue her religious instruction classes.

The quality of religious education at Rednerseville school was questioned before trustees recently by a Night Lights For Village?

AMELIASBURGH — A movement now afoot calls for this village to be lighted at night.

Following a petition signed by 70 per cent of village residents, township council has instructed township clerk William Nightingale to get a firm price from Ontario Hydro for such a project.

If the price is acceptable the project will be processed with.

In other council business:

The speed limit on Old Orchard Drive — a residential district beneath the Rossmore-Carrying Place Road on the Bay of Quinte — will remain at 50 miles an hour. Only two resident owners turned in petition forms for a reduced speed limit.

An applicant for an overnight trailer camp in the Consecon area has been requested to obtain further information from local health authorities for his proposal. The proposed camp would be located north of a canning factory on Weller's Bay.

A wage increase also has been granted the township's six road employees for the coming year. The increase amounts to three cents above present wages, plus an additional 20 cents an hour.

Trenton Memorial Hospital Auxiliary was granted permission to conduct tag days in Consecon May 10-11.

Council also approved preliminary estimates totalling $72,000 for improvement of township roads. Council asks requested the Ministry of Transportation and Communications also consider supplementary expenditures for roads amounting to $75,000.

Fire Loss $25,000

PICTON — Fire losses in a blaze that Tuesday destroyed McIntosh Boats of York Street have been estimated at $25,000 by Fire Chief Leonard Tripp.

Total insurance on the frame building, owned by Raymond McIntosh, was $2,000.

Two boats, under construction, were lost in the fire in addition to prefabricated parts for others.

Mr. McIntosh says that he will make every effort to reopen soon at a new location. His plant employed six men, including two part-time workers.

Plants OK

MARMORA — Village resident Lionel Brown has been advised by village council that his proposed plans for the sale of a few plants at his residence would not contravene any zoning regulations. His greenhouse was already established prior to the passing of the Restricted Area Bylaw.

Reeve Jack Reynolds advised Mr. Brown that, while there are no restrictions at the present time, any establishment of a larger retail outlet would require a revision of zoning and assessment officials would have to review his establishment and assess it as a business.

Carrying Place couple, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Sloane. Mr. Sloane told the board that his seven-year-old daughter had returned from school and said that her religious education teacher had referred to some persons being "as rotten as a bad pear or apple, from the core out."

Mr. Sloane said that the statement, on the surface, is harmless for adults. He felt, however, that it should have been explained at school that people are not "rotten" without reason. Circumstances and environment determine character.

He expressed concern that religious education was being taught by a layman who has not been approved by local clergymen as suggested in the Public Schools Act.

Mr. Sloane called for immediate investigation of the situation and corrective action to improve religious training offered to county youngsters.

A letter from R. McQuoid, principal of Rednerseville school, supported Mrs. Langman's classes in religious instruction.

"Although she may not possess the paper qualifications by the ministry to give religion lessons, she does exhibit human traits that are very necessary in the classroom. These are warmth, compassion and love for children," he wrote.

Mr. McQuoid added: "I have personally surveyed a number of pupils in the school who have experienced Mrs. Langman's classes over the years. The overriding reaction to my query as to their feelings toward her could be summed up by saying that she was a kind, considerate teacher who taught them a great deal about the Bible."

Principal of Massassaga school, Hester Giles wrote: "I wish to inform the...board that I am wholeheartedly in favor of religious education being taught by the present instructors who are servicing the schools."

Of the three student Cameron Bedford, in his letter to trustees, said "My friends and I love Mrs. Langman. We also enjoy her stories very much. She makes them seem so real."

"Please don't take Mrs. Langman away from us just because one family doesn't understand her."

Rev. James Cullen, Prince Edward County Ministerial Association, has informed trustees that none of the local clergy to his knowledge has approved any lay persons now giving religious instruction in the county.

He said that a ministerial committee has been researching and studying the topic of religious instruction and expects to offer guidelines next month to the board.

Prime Minister's Mail Reflects Citizens' Concern

By RICHARD JACKSON
OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau receives a special section in his [illegible] office establishment exclusively assigned to handling the mail. One hundred thousand letters a year or more.

Every letter is answered.

The reply to some of the mail goes out in a form letter, personally signed by the Prime Minister's correspondence secretary, Hungry A. Lawless, who heads a staff of 41, some 15 of them doing the writing. He balances letter-file cards by the [illegible].

At other times, when one particular issue arouses more than routine public interest, the Prime Minister himself replies.

Some copies of such a letter go out under his own signature, years, with Henry V. [illegible] paraphrasing it "The Prime Minister sees the situation this way" — are signed by the secretary.

But nobody writes to the Prime Minister who does not receive some kind of a reply.

The mail is that important.

It reflects the way people are thinking, what is bothering them and how they think the Government is responding to the particular problem.

Hence a part of the function of this mood of the land can be found in the letter-to-the-editor columns of the newspapers and in letters to newspapermen who write from Ottawa about national affairs.

Often these people include copies of the letters they have written to the Prime Minister or members of his cabinet.

Among the more interesting that recently have been addressed here was one from Mr. A., (her name will not be spelled out) of Falconbridge, Northern Ontario.

It is a letter the Prime Minister could ponder, for it reveals the woman's thinking in the way she voted in the last two elections.

"In '68," she writes, "I voted for Charles Caron. (he was elected) the Liberal candidate in the North Bay riding as a vote for Mr. Trudeau. I didn't know then if Mr. Trudeau was a dog-catcher, or [illegible] philosophy, but I voted for him because I felt Mr. Trudeau was eminently qualified for the job of Prime Minister.

"I did not vote for Mr. Trudeau for his charisma and [illegible] obviously he was well qualified in those departments. I voted for him because he had a law degree, training in political science and economics, was independently wealthy (so didn't need to get sticky fingers in the till) and he appeared to be honestly and sincerely interested in the country, and in bettering the lot of his Canadians.

"In the '72 election, thoroughly disenchanted with the Liberal performance, I voted for Mr. Stanfield. God knows he was not his charisma and charm, but I felt he reflected honesty and sobriety and although these may be old-fashioned values, they are not to be despised.

"Hopefully, if elected, he will also prove economical.

Then reflecting what, is becoming, to listen to an increasing number of parliamentarians, more and more of a general public unease and political malaise all across Canada, this writer from Mr. G.P.E. Rentiew, Ontario:

"The invitations to get involved in political issues, because each of us has too much to do in just living in our hectic society and handling the commitments we already have in hand, because we fear recriminations against ourselves and our families, and because our problems seem baseless to anyone. [illegible]

"There are so many areas that need improvement, are being whittled away by those in authority, and we are helpless in dismay and frustration, hardly realizing we are doing so little to prevent the loss."

And from Mr. C.A.S. of Saint John, New Brunswick:

"Late last December on national television I saw the Navy sailing out of Halifax harbour on a safari to the Caribbean.

"All units of the fleet set sail and the only explanation was that they would cruise at reduced speed to effect a 10 percent saving in fuel.

"It strikes me as remarkable that with the energy of oil such a problem, and the government's statements of the necessity of strictest conservation, National Defence would send out the Atlantic Fleet on 10 percent cruises that could use more oil than we in Atlantic Canada could possibly use during burning down, as requested by the government, the thermostats in our homes."

Those are but three of many, many more letters, none of them from impassioned cranks or even crusaders, but mirroring a picture of quiet, questioning concern.

Need for Caution

Belleville is fortunate in its continued freedom from serious crime. That is not to say the police do not keep busy with a variety of misdeeds ranging from burglary and purse-snatching to vandalism. But by and large the city is a relatively safe place.

Crimes against the person are something else again and Belleville occasionally experiences this type of offence. Such an incident occurred last week when a 13-year-old girl escaped from a youth who tried to pick her up in his car. Police later made an arrest.

The incident is indicative however of the risks a young person might face while walking alone, as this youngster was, and on a street with few pedestrians such as Sidney Street which could lend itself to such an incident.

We read of a similar incident recently, in another city not far from here, and in which a young girl was saved from a similar threat by her dog.

Parents should be sufficiently concerned for their offspring to warn them of this sort of problem. It is an open society in which we live, and young people come and go pretty well as they please. Then there is an incident such as this, in daylight at that, reminding us that it is wise to take precautions, or at the very least to be on the alert.

Wilson Changes Tune

The new Labor government in Britain is reported anxious to reopen Britain's membership of the European Common Market, if not to withdraw altogether — a prospect however which may be stalled for a time at least because of the government's minority status.

But let us go back to 1967 when Harold Wilson was Prime Minister, as he is now after defeating the Conservative administration of Edward Heath. It was June 27, 1967 to be precise, the day The Intelligencer published its Centennial edition.

On the front page of this regular edition which met with it and which we happened to be reading the other day, was a story headed: Wilson Will Press Common Market Bid.

Prime Minister Wilson, the report said, "will keep pressing his case for admittance to the European Common Market despite increasing evidence that President de Gaulle has embarked on delaying tactics to keep Britain out.

"An informant close to Wilson said today the latest development at Brussels do not destroy the prime minister's hopes of getting into the European Common Community. . ."

Heads of course was in power when British finally gained membership of the ECM, but this is a reminder that Wilson had been working on it too and of the fact that he is now changing his tune in the indication of the pragmatic and expert'politician that he is.

Times change and politicians, like most other people, find themselves changing with them. The Common Market has been a mixed blessing for Britain; many people are against it, what with rising costs, the Europeanisation of British and all that. Understandably this, hence his changed posture.

Probing the Unknown

The recent rumor of a death threat to U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger during his Middle East travels, thwarted it was said when Dr. Kissinger's schedule was altered unavoidably, had stirred a chord earlier with American psychic Jeane Dixon.

In a recent article in The National Enquirer Mrs. Dixon, whose uncanny facility for predicting events is widely acclaimed, said Kissinger could have further successes in the diplomatic sphere but warned there might be an attempt on his life.

It may be asked if the services of such a seer could not be enlisted in the unhappy case of Patricia Hearst, still in captivity despite the food-for-[illegible]-program being carried out by the newspaper publisher father. Would it be possible for someone such as Mrs. Dixon to produce clues as to the young woman's whereabouts?

Similarly, in the case of an abducted German business executive in Northern Ireland. Missing for some weeks now — one rumor has it that he is dead — the man's wife has made a third appeal to his captors for information as to his fate.

In such situations one would suppose that any reputable person with psychic powers would be sought after, for whatever clues they could offer.

Ontario's New Post-Audit System Is Revealing

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service
TORONTO — Our auditing approach; the new approach which is revealed in the auditor's report for March 31, 1973, which has just been released, apparently will follow a course mid-way between the biting fair criticism of former federal auditor-general Maxwell Henderson and the mammoth budging which over the years has been the traditional auditing outlook here.

In the old days the Ontario audit was a pretty ludicrous affair.

There would be notes that the teachers superannuation fund needed more money and that some department or other was using sloppy accounting methods.

But there were no Bonaventures, horrors on payrolls or other old bits such as we used to get from Ottawa.

But then the system was changed from a pre-audit to a post-audit, meaning that for the first time accountants looked at just how money had been spent.

And this has meant more meat.

Among items uncovered, for example, have been some such as these:

Loans were made to Ontario Place of $3.1 million. Officials can't see any possibility of the corporation ever being able to repay them.

A new Agent General was appointed in London in April, 1971.

The sum of $7,000 was paid to relocate the former office holder in Toronto. Then he was given a further $35,000 in consideration of his "loss of office."

It was found that dictating machines had been issued to members of the committee on post-secondary education. The work of the committee is finished but the members still have the machines.

The major staff, admittedly.

But good to have it out in the open if only for the fact that civil servants will pay more attention to spending in future.

A Rural Municipality

Kitchener — Waterloo Record

Wellesley Township, occupying 104 square miles in the northwest corner of Waterloo Region, is farther from urban sprawl than any other rural municipality in the Region.

Mayor Robert Gramlow would like to keep it that way, and is persuasive in his fellow members of the township council a plan to discourage the conversion of Wellesley farmland to non-farm use.

One practical means to that end in Wellesley or in any rural municipality that wants to stay rural, is to control land severances. Until recent years there has been little of this kind of control. For a long time it was a simple transaction for a farmer to sell an acre or two off the front of his farm, on which the buyer would build a house.

Often repeated, the practice has sprinkled the Ontario Countryside with strip developments of bleating, rolling away at tillable acreage.

That's what Mayor Gramlow would like no more of. He hopes to see Wellesley prohibit the severances that make urban sprawl possible.

One of the few exceptions he would be willing to make is for the case of the farmer who wants to retire on his own land. It would indeed seem harsh to deny to an elderly couple, who have come to the time when the son should take over the farm, the right to build a retirement home for themselves on their own land. It is where they belong and will be happiest in their remaining years.

The objection, from a long-range planner's viewpoint, is that no one lives for ever. Eventually the retired farmer will be gone, and the second house on the farm will still be there. If a severance has been granted for the acre on which the second house stands, it can then be sold. An item of urban sprawl will not have been prevented, but merely delayed.

Mayor Gramlow's suggesting solution is to refuse the severance for a building lot for the farmer who wants to retire on the farm, but to grant a building permit. In the eyes of the law there will be two houses, but only one piece of real estate.

That seems fair enough, from both the planning and the human points of view. The family will not be forced off their land to try to adapt to a strange environment, late in life. If the time ever comes for the farm to be sold, any prospective purchaser can see that it comes complete with two dwellings and can adjust his decisions accordingly.

Expansion

Ulster Commentary

Grundig, the West German electronics organization, is to establish in Northern Ireland a major expansion of its existing manufacturing operations. The company will set a large new manufacturing facility at Newry and also extend its already substantial Northern Ireland plant at Portadown.

More than 1,200 new jobs, about 1,700 in Newry itself, are expected to accrue.

While will be Northern Ireland's largest new overseas industrial — project for several years and is widely regarded as an investment of several million pounds.

Cassette recorders and radio cassette recorders will be manufactured in Newry with the possibility of other electronic products being added to the production line in the future.

Glen Electric, a new company assisted by the Ministry of Commerce and the Northern Ireland Finance Corporation, is setting up, in a 30,000 sq. ft. Government advance factory on Newry's Greenbank Industrial Estate, to manufacture a range of domestic electrical appliances. The employment target is 150 people.

Letters to the Editor

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Although at times sorely tempted, I have not written "ye editor" since 29th November 1921, at which time members of Belleville's finest citizens were busily engaged in highway construction, along with several of their counterparts from Trenton, Cobourg, Port Hope and Kitchener. Up in that vast and teeming metropolis of Almonte Harbor, winter of '21 - '22 the pot we put in front, I could picture myself eating at restaurant with table cloths instead of soup stains on the table, frequenting in our Toronto office got the bright idea that head office in Los Angeles should be told what a bright young lad they had up here in Canada, how in spite of all other major oil competition he "swung" down the border. Then it happened, big box car size letters to the editor came to, in no way would Mr. Getty's pride and joy trade with the Americans, keep everything up and incinerate it, for shame, who did it, he did. Then I took the plunge. Ben Hur's worst galley days were mere chilblains compared to my low low echelon. However being a person of infinite resource and ingenuity I'm still around although many of the other "I had nothing to do with it" types are fertilizing cemeteries.

So no bitterness or any ill-will towards anyone or thing about this deal. My life right now is devoted to such trifles as writing letters to the editor cause it, in no way would Mr. Getty's pride and joy trade with the Americans, keep everything up and incinerate it, for shame, who did it, he did. Rosenberg Sons Break 20 Years of Silence

For 20 years the two sons of the executed Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, convicted guilty of passing nuclear secrets to the Russians, have remained silent. Now they have decided to speak out, hoping to clear the names of their parents.

By BUD MOODY

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Only hours before they died on June 19, 1953, Julius and Ethel Rosenberg wrote a last letter to their children from the death house at Sing Sing:

"Dearest Sweethearts . . . At first you will grieve bitterly for us but you will not grieve alone. That is our consolation and it must eventually be yours . . . Always remember that we were innocent and could not wrong our conscience. . . ."

The children, Michael and Robbie, now are grown men with families of their own. They are professors at Western New England College, living under the name Meeropol, that of their adopted parents. They have suffered much. They are close.

Now, sensing a change in the American political atmosphere because of the Watergate scandal, they have decided to speak out, hoping to clear the names of their parents whom they believe were innocent and were murdered, not executed, by the United States.

The two brothers, Michael, 30, and Robbie, 26, have appeared in a television documentary investigating the Rosenberg case. They also are suing author-lawyer Louis Nizer for $3 million for copyright infringement and invasion of privacy in his recent book on the case, The Implosion Conspiracy. The brothers hope to raise enough money to seek legal vindication of their parents.

Robbie recalls few memories of his parents, Michael remembers more. Among other things he remembers when the FBI came for his father.

"I was listening to the Lone Ranger. A couple of weeks later my mother plooped and said: 'You remember what happened to Daddy? Well, it happened to me, too.'"

He remembers visiting the death house and asking his parents if they were innocent. "I guess as a kid I wanted that kind of assurance. 'Not of course we are,' they said."

He remembers kicking and screaming as he was led away from his last meeting with his parents:

He remembers watching the Yankees playing on television and the interruptions with 15th hour bulletins on attempts for a stay of execution. "Finally I went out to play baseball with some neighborhood kids. When I came back in, it was all over."

He remembers how protective he became of Robbie, finally breaking to him that "Mommy and Daddy aren't coming back, ever."

He remembers a friend's mother telling him to stay away from her son because he was a Rosenberg.

He remembers his custody battles. They were finally settled in 1954 with the intercession of an outside expert, Kenneth Johnson, dean of the New York School of Social Work and a friend of President Eisenhower—who had refused Ethel Rosenberg's last-minute pleas for clemency.

"The story is that Johnson came off his death bed to finalize the adoption; he was a fine man," said Michael.

Michael eventually came here to teach, and Robbie followed. The school community knows who they were, and there has been no problem.

Michael: "Actually, coming out isn't quite accurate. It suggests we've been hiding, and we haven't."

Robbie: "People tend to put others in boxes, and if we came out and said our parents were innocent without our having made an investigation, they'd say: 'Well, their children say they were innocent. What do you expect?'"

Michael: "But Watergate changed that 180 degrees. We've been saying all along the government has been lying. The whole argument for the Committee for Constitutional Government secrecy at the expense of the people."

Robbie: "If we could expose that this has always been true, as with our parents, we could serve the public. In exposing the case, we could make it more difficult to put others in our parents' position. On a personal level, they were innocent and we wanted to clear our names. One of the things we are planning to do if start a national committee to reopen the case. No one who believes our parents innocent has had subpoena power since 1951."

Computer Fights Fires

GLASGOW, Scotland (CP) — A computer is being used for the first time to cut the toll of death and damage by fire in Glasgow, one of Britain's major cities. Information stored at the city fire headquarters is linked by radio to small recorders in the cabs of five appliances. Within seconds of an alarm call, details of the occupants, structure and layout of the burning building are transmitted.

Belgian Press Debates Direct Government Aid

BRUSSELS (CP) — The proposed introduction in Belgium of direct government aid to the daily press has set off a lengthy debate among politicians, publishers and journalists.

Objections to the idea include fears of possible government influence over newspapers as a result of the financial help.

One member of a parliamentary committee on the question also suggested that papers losing circulation might not deserve such help.

He asked whether it is democratic to compensate papers when some of their readers have freely disavowed them.

Belgium papers already get considerable indirect help from the government.

For instance, they benefit from subsidies that form part of general programs for promoting economic expansion and the development of needy regions.

They enjoy preferential treatment in the matter of value-added tax, the levy imposed on various stages of the production and sale of goods in many Western European countries.

Then there are the reductions in telecommunication rates charged by the state agency which operates Belgium's phone and cables systems.

This arrangement is estimated to have cost the agency some 30 million Belgian francs ($750,000) in 1973.

The papers benefit too from special postal rates, while officially-accredited journalists travel at greatly reduced fares on state-owned air, rail and ferry services.

The journalists maintain that their transportation privileges are offset by lower salary levels than those of their counterparts in countries like Britain or France.

Last year Socialists and members of two other parties making up the government of Edmond Leburton joined in a cabinet declaration of support for the principle of direct aid.

Later Leburton earmarked 100 million francs as newspaper aid money covering the second half of 1973, with 200 million francs to be provided for the whole of 1974.

But the plan was blocked when John Maes, a member of the Belgian senate's financial committee, declared that no such money can be provided for this purpose without special legislation.

The subsequent fall of Leburton's government on another issue and the calling of the March 10 election temporarily halted further action on the aid plan.

Within the newspaper industry, supporters of direct government help argue that indirect aid through channels like the economic development subsidies favors big papers instead of the financially - precarious smaller ones.

In addition owners of weekly magazines are irritated because the direct aid plan doesn't extend to them — even though it is aimed at promoting, as general variety of freely-expressed opinion as possible.

Another major issue is how direct aid should be distributed among the papers.

There are 44 dailies in Belgium—27 of them in French, 16 in Flemish and one in German — serving a southeastern region of the country.

Their circulations range from 11,000 to the 233,601 enjoyed by De Standaard of Brussels.

Het Laatste Nieuws is second in circulation with 205,825 and Le Soir of Brussels is third with 270,567.

The problem of newspaper finances takes on a governmental dimension because freedom of the press is a principle enshrined in the Belgian constitution.

McKeough Opposes Dear Oil

TORONTO (CP) — Increasing the price of domestic oil to existing world prices is not in the national interest, Ontario Energy Minister Darcy McKeough said Wednesday.

"The disruption and distortion would be frightful," Mr. McKeough said during a lengthy statement in the Ontario legislature on oil prices.

He referred to the federal freeze on the price of domestic oil at $4 a barrel until the end of this month and said Ottawa has not made any statement on what the policy will be after that.

But Alberta and Saskatchewan must not be allowed to increase oil prices to the current world price of $18.50 a barrel.

"The additional cost to Ontario oil users would be in excess of a billion dollars a year—very close to 20 cents a gallon for fuel oil or gasoline," Mr. McKeough said.

"I wish to underline our absolute conviction that escalating our domestic oil up to existing world prices flies in the face of the national interest," Mr. McKeough said.

"... If we escalate the price of petroleum to current world levels we will have a rich Alberta largely at the expense of the rest of Canada."

"We would be turning our backs on nation-building and focusing attention on the building of great economies in the oil producing provinces."

Mr. McKeough noted Ottawa has suggested a price of $6 a barrel. That price was high, but as long as it did not continue to climb, "Ontario can live with it."

At $6 a barrel, the energy bill to the Ontario consumer would increase by $200 million—about six cents a gallon for heating oil and gasoline.

Vesco Told To See Mitchell

NEW YORK (AP) — Former concurrence secretary Maurice Stans passed the buck to former attorney general John Mitchell when financier Robert Vesco sought help in a Security and Exchange Commission fund inquiry, a government witness says.

Laurence Richardson, 51, a one-time Vesco aide, has testified at the criminal conspiracy trial of Mitchell and Stans that Vesco made his first pitch for aid personally when he pledged a $200,000 contribution to President Nixon's re-election campaign.

Richardson testified he was present at Vesco's first meeting with Stans March 8, 1972, at which Vesco said the SEC investigation was without merit and a personal vendetta and harassment of him.

"Mr. Stans at one point said, 'I can't help you in this but let's see if we can get you an appointment with Mr. Mitchell,'" Richardson said.

Afterwards, Richardson said he told Vesco his six-figure campaign pledge was "a ridiculous amount of money."

"He said, 'Well, it's a lot cheaper than a legal fee,'" the witness continued. "I said, 'If you think those guys are going to do anything for you for that contribution, forget it—They'll just take your money.'"

Half Million Spent to Tell About Rebates

TORONTO (CP) The province will spend $500,000 this year to tell taxpayers how to get back $200 million on their income taxes under Ontario's Fair Share Program.

But despite the expenditure on posters, commercials and advertisements, Revenue Minister Arthur Meen said in the legislature Wednesday that more advertising is needed.

Mr. Meen said application forms are included in the federal income tax forms, but a January survey indicated that only 68 per cent of taxpayers knew of the program.

York Trustee Sent Children To Scarborough

TORONTO (CP) — A school board trustee in York County, where high school teachers have been on strike since Feb. 1, says he enrolled his two daughters in a Scarborough high school "rather than have them hanging around the house or the shopping centre."

Donald Sim said in an interview Wednesday he has not decided whether the girls will return to their York high school when a settlement is reached in the contract dispute with the teachers.

Whelan Outlines Plans For Farmers' Subsidies

REGINA (CP) Federal Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan outlined Wednesday legislation he expects Parliament to handle in the next few months including programs to stabilize farm incomes.

In a speech prepared for delivery to the Saskatchewan Association of Rural Municipalities convention, Mr. Whelan said farmers need assurances that they will not face bankruptcy because of short-term surpluses and depressed prices.

"The federal government will provide better price guarantees through the Agriculture Stabilization Act, develop income stabilization programs for individual commodities on a shared-cost basis with producers and provincial governments and negotiate long-term contracts to lock in markets, he said.

A storage program with buyers sharing the cost also is needed so the farmer does not end up paying for inventories which benefit the consumer, Mr. Whelan told the 1,500 delegates.

He said the federal government is revamping the Farm Credit Corporation Act, but is moving slowly because of problems in policing the program.

Municipal Politicians May Get Privilege

TORONTO (CP) — Premier William Davis said in the legislature Wednesday he will look into the question of whether municipal politicians should be granted the legal privilege rights now held by federal and provincial politicians.

Libel and slander actions cannot be brought against federal and provincial politicians for statements made in Parliament, legislatures or during committee meetings.

Toronto Ald. Anne Johnston said Tuesday she is considering asking the province for legislation granting privilege to municipal politicians. Two metro companies have applied for a injunction preventing Mrs Johnston and two other members of the Toronto board of health from dealing with matters involving the companies.

Ontario Liberal Leader Robert Nixon said privileges should be extended to municipal politicians "so that they can speak frankly and without fear."

Mr. Davis said he would consider "anything that's reasonable" and decide whether the government would consider granting privilege.

Ban Nickels

LONGLAC, Ont. (CP) — Shiny 1974 nickels appear to have lost their legal tender status in this northwestern Ontario area.

Local banks have posted signs indicating they will not accept the 1974 nickels because they might be part of a coin shipment that spilled from a CNR train Feb. 22.

Ontario Civil Servants Will Get Pay Boost

TORONTO (CP) — About 18,000 Ontario civil servants will receive salary increases ranging from eight to 18 per cent a year under an agreement announced Wednesday by Eric Winkler, chairman of management board of cabinet.

Mr. Winkler said in a statement to the legislature that the agreement affects employees in including typists, stenographers, investigators and inspectors.

New Zealanders Labor Through Metric Switch

Auckland, N.Z. (CP) — New Zealand is well ahead with the switch from traditional to metric measures. But people still are confused and not really convinced of the benefits.

The change is proving far more difficult than that of a few years ago to decimal currency.

New Zealand changed from pounds, shillings and pence to dollars and cents in 1967 and took the operation in its stride. Predictions of a long transitional period were not realized. In fact the country seemed to become accustomed to the decimal system almost overnight and there were remarkably few complications.

But the change to metric measures is proving much harder work and obviously will take longer.

One of the first changes was in temperatures, from fahrenheitto centigrade. That change was made nearly three years ago but the public is only now really getting the hang of it. Newspapers still publish fahrenheit figures in brackets after the centigrade readings but television does not.

Rainfall in millimetres still is meaningless to the public at large. Most people simply look at alternative readings, still usually given in inches.

Road signs are in a half-and-half situation. A large proportion of signs giving the distance in towns and suburbs are shown in kilometres. But speed limits are still shown in miles per hour.

The reason is that amending legislation is necessary to alter speed limits and the government is not yet sure that the public is sufficiently aware of kilometre-per-hour speeds to make the conversion safe.

For motorists, another major change came into effect this year with the conversion of gasoline pumps to metric readings. Many are beginning to get the hang of how many litres they normally require but the lazy have switched from ordering by volume, and instead simply ask for gasoline by price—$5 worth and the...

...e changed over to metric measure. At the Commonwealth Games held this year in Christchurch, nearly all distances and field-event measures were metric. There were still a few exceptions—the marathon, the 20-mile walk, and a few cycle events.

Horse racing has also changed over, with distances of races and handicap weights expressed in metrics.

Housewives are just starting to wrestle with the conversion. The standard pint milk bottle has been increased slightly in capacity to 600 millilitres with little disruption.

Bill meat and fish are starting to be sold by the kilogram and a brisk, spoill struggle seems likely before the new measures are accepted.

Another change still far from generally acknowledged is the use of metric measure for area. From the start of last year all new surveys were made in metric terms and official reports now give land areas in hectares instead of acres. But such versions draw uncomprehending bewilderment from most people.

Guaranty Trust Ex-officers Charged With Tax Fraud

TORONTO (CP) — A former president and a former general manager of Guaranty Trust Co. of Canada were charged Wednesday with conspiring to help the firm avoid payment of income taxes between 1965 and 1971.

Allan Burgess Ramsay of Toronto, president from 1965 to 1972, and Albert Ross Ackerth of Gravenhurst, Ont., assistant general manager until he retired in 1972, are to appear in court April 18.

Named as co-conspirators are the late James Wilson Berry, founder and former chairman and president; G. Harold Edgar, a former vice-president; Lawrence G. Crumback, an accountant; James Joseph Dunlamp, who retired last month as first vice-president; Edward Thomas Berry of Weston, Ont., Guaranty Trust and Guaranty Trust Bank Ltd.

The amount of unpaid taxes was not specified.

He spoke in an interview people if the tax were removed," he said.

Removal of the tax, however, would take a sizable chunk out of public revenue—money which might be redirected toward home improvement programs.

"I haven't had a chance to weigh the repercussions . . . but it would suggest the government could make a lot more money available for home improvement loans."

Plan Some Activities Now

Next Week Is March Break

By ISABEL HUGGAN

Come the Ides of March, tomorrow, and the Belleville schools will empty their classrooms of 11,813 students out into the daytime world for a week.

Until classes resume on March 25, kids and teachers have a holiday from school and each other; a chance to take a breather after the rigors of winter and before the stresses of end-of-term studies.

The only people in the schools next week will be the office staff, and the caretaking staff who can polish their floors to a gleam unscuffed by the patter and stamp of hundreds of feet.

Peace and quiet in the schools — but what about at home?

Parents are suddenly confronted with a houseful of children (even one child can seem like a houseful on occasion!) who have nothing to do all day long.

Another frequent call to the MP's office comes from old-age pensioners who have questions about their pensions and income tax.

Many calls are eventually passed to Mr. Ellis' Ottawa office, where Mrs. Kearns spent time in January learning the necessary routines.

"The hardest thing so far is remembering names," she says, "especially of people I haven't yet met, but have only talked to on the phone."

Luckily for Mrs. Kearns, the last secretary left her a four-page list of names to learn, and she is busily memorizing them now.

"Once I get out to events in the riding I'll have a better idea of who's who," she says.

Never politically active before, Mrs. Kearns is finding her job fascinating, and is glad by now her husband is a politician.

"I am working hard too," she says, "and I find that even after I leave the office, I'm worrying about some of the people I've talked to during the day.

"This is a totally involving job."

for something to do.

The Kinsmen Club has rented the ice at Belleville Memorial Arena next week, to provide free skating for the out-of-schoolers between 1.30 and 3.30 p.m., Monday to Friday.

The Kiwanis is providing dip'ins swimming at the Black Hawk pool from 1 to 4 p.m. Monday to Friday. The cost is minimal — 25 cents for children, 35 cents for students, and 50 cents for adults.

Besides regular roller-skating, there will be a special afternoon for roller skating children at Ben Bleecker Auditorium on Wednesday, March 20, from 1 to 4 p.m. Tickets are 50 cents each.

Bowling for an afternoon is a fun thing to do, and rates are cheaper in the afternoon (45 cents a game at the Bowledrome, for example).

If the season continues to be as spring-like as it has been this week, bicyclers in the family should use the opportunity to get their bikes in shape and take a trial spin or two around the area. Why not pack a picnic lunch and go off for a cycling trip to see what signs of spring you can find. Pussy willows are already budding, and bird watchers should be able to spot a number of returning species.

For young children of a less athletic nature, the Corby Library is providing an afternoon of entertainment on Thursday, March 21, at 2 p.m.

In the upstairs gallery. A puppet show and a film will be shown.

Older students might enjoy the opportunity to visit the library during the week for a reason other than doing research for essays. The art gallery is featuring a showing of paintings by Mary Threase of Tweed, and a display of pottery by Audrey Davies and her students.

Although Glanmore House has been visited by several groups since it opened, there are still hundreds of children (and their parents) who have yet to discover the delights of the re-created "Victorian" stately home. A happy hour or two can be spent at Glanmore any afternoon next week except Monday.

There are a limitless number of things you can do to make the holiday fun-filled and memorable.

Make a meal for the family consisting of each person's favorite food. (It's apt to be a pretty strange meal, but as long as everybody's favorite food isn't peanut butter sandwiches, it should be fairly tasty!)

Draw a family tree ...Get Easter eggs blown and painted a head of time ... Start some flower seeds indoors ready for spring planting...Share the family camera and take pictures of what you see on a walk around town...Stay up and watch a late movie in the middle of the week...Enjoy yourself! The week will pass faster than you think.

Sorority Donation

The Hastings County Historical Society received a final donation last evening from the Beta Sigma Phi sorority for restoration of the Susannah Moodie Library of Glanmore House. Gerald Boyce accept a cheque for $250 from Phyllis Allcorn, vice-president of the Quinte chapter council of Beta Sigma Phi, while Marg Berry, president of the council looks on.

Pat Kearns, Secretary

Pat Kearns, a relative newcomer to Belleville (she moved here with her family six years ago), has recently begun a new job.

Since last month she's been M.P. Jack Ellis' riding secretary, a change from her previous secretarial work at Brennan and McBride Insurance Adjustors.

"I spend most of my time on the telephone instead of the typewriter now," says Mrs. Kearns.

Her calls are mainly from people who want assistance sorting out problems they're having with unemployment insurance. Especially in the northern part of the riding, winter means that more people are out of work, so there are more difficulties than at other times.

"I get close to a dozen calls a day," says Mrs. Kearns, and I pass on the information to the UIC office in Belleville.

"The people at the UIC are very co-operative. In fact, they call me each day to check on the latest complaints and problems."

Asked if she had a great deal of studying to do to sort out the regulations regarding unemployment insurance, Mrs. Kearns says with a smile, "No, it's all there in the handbook."

Another frequent call to the MP's office comes from old-age pensioners who have questions about their pensions and income tax.

Many calls are eventually passed to Mr. Ellis' Ottawa office, where Mrs. Kearns spent time in January learning the necessary routines.

"The hardest thing so far is remembering names," she says, "especially of people I haven't yet met, but have only talked to on the phone."

Luckily for Mrs. Kearns, the last secretary left her a four-page list of names to learn, and she is busily memorizing them now.

Laws Protect Pregnant Workers

Pregnancy used to be a real handicap to the working woman.

An employer could refuse to hire her simply because she was married and at a child-bearing age.

Or she could be hired solely on the understanding that she not become pregnant, in which case she might live in constant fear of being "betrayed" by pregnancy.

If a working woman did find she was expecting, she knew her job was endangered.

The Ontario legislature has changed all that.

Now a woman cannot be refused employment because of sex or marital status, unless there is proof that it will directly interfere with her ability to handle the job.

She cannot be asked to take a leave of absence due to pregnancy unless she is incapable of fulfilling her job obligations, or if her work is materially affected.

She is allowed six weeks of unpaid maternity leave before the estimated time of birth, and six weeks after. However, if her job is not interfered with, she has the right to remain until the actual day of delivery, and if she has her doctor's permission, a woman is allowed to return to work before the sixth postnatal week.

The working mother cannot lose her job, seniority, or benefits due to a pregnancy, and she has the right to take 12 weeks unpaid leave if she chooses.

For working women all across Ontario, this simple revision to the legislature represents both justice and increased security.

People and Events

A Girl Guide Thinking Day Service was held in Demorsville church Sunday when Canada Cords were presented to Vera Allison and Mary Mowbray. An all-round cord was presented to Jan O'Brien.

St. Columba Presbyterian Women entertained Calvary Temple women recently.

Missionary work was the theme of the program. Speakers included Rev McKerracher, who spoke on church work in Ontario; Rae Ann Freeman, who spoke on her life in Ghana; Jean Murphy, who spoke on the "mission of the church" in the West Indies.

A vuarie — Barb Grieves, Jean Murphy, Vera Heimback and Marg Taylor, accompanied by Gwen Brain — gave a musical program.

Lunch was served by Vera Heimback and Barb Grieves.

Ann Landers

No Satin Coffin, Thanks

Dear Ann Landers: I am 64 and in good health, so please don't interpret this request as an urgent plea for help. I just need to know if I am thinking straight, or wrong. The time comes for me to be buried I won't embarrass my family.

I don't mind those shiny, satin-lined coffins. Embalming has always seemed pointless, if not barbaric, to me. I want a closed coffin also. I've yet to see remains so attractive that they should be on display.

The conventional music one hears at last rites depresses me. I want something cheerful at my funeral. And since Amazing Grace is a long-time favorite, I'd like someone to sing it.

In spite of my eclogy regarding my virtues, I'd prefer a message of encouragement to the mourners. In fact, I might even write a few words myself.

My mother says I am crazy. Am I? What do you think?—Edith in Nebraska.

Dear Edith: You don't sound crazy to me. But I hope you will make sure your wishes are carried out by putting them in writing and then placing them in the hands of a lawyer. You might even select the funeral director now and see that he has a copy. Then he and the lawyer could work together in the event that your relatives decide to do things their way.

Dear Ann Landers: I have a friend who is ruining her marriage and her life—because of her super-devotion to her mother.

It's mother is partially handicapped but she is quite self-sufficient. She can drive a car, do her own housework, shop, travel. She also has a nice, strong husband.

My friend believes it is her "duty" to go to her mother's home every day, cook, do the laundry, and run errands. (It's a 30-mile round trip.) In the meantime, her own home is a mess, her family eats frozen and canned food because she has no time to cook for them. The poor girl is always rushing and she's a nervous wreck.

Don't you think she could cut her martyrdom down to twice a week and still be a dutiful daughter?—Mary

Dear Friend: To begin with, this problem is not yours, and you can be sure your advice will not be appreciated. Moreover, you are looking for a rational solution to an emotional problem.

Your friend is driven by a compulsion to please her mother. This is an old hang-up from childhood which will not disappear because someone tells her to "cut down the martyrdom." What the girl needs is counselling, and her husband should insist that she get it.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a psychiatrist who would like to compliment you on your superb response to "Waiting to Hear." You stated your position on homosexuality in a way that should set the record straight for all time.

I was not aware that Illinois was the first state to pass legislation declaring homosexuality between consenting adults no longer a crime. I believe when you quoted the statute you omitted two important words: "In private."

Many homosexuals feel that because two people consent, they can do almost anything, anywhere. I believe the public has the right to protection against outrageous conduct, whether it is heterosexual or homosexual. Will you kindly set this record straight?—A Washington Psychiatrist

Dear Wash, D.C.: You are right—on all counts, and I thank you for writing.

Horse Bit Remains Gucci's Trademark

NEW YORK (AP) — Well-heeled Gucci fans turned out for a spring-summer show of the latest skirts, pants, dresses and horse-bit-trimmed shoes.

The look has been imitated in all price ranges, from the shoe with the gold horse-bit screen on the instep to the red and green striped detailing on luggage and purses.

Down the street Tuesday, Gucci-looking purses were selling for $6.50. Real Gucci purses run from $80 to $230. Women's shoes go from $30 to $59.

However, the firm's business has increased 35-fold over in the last five years. Gucci has 15 stores in various countries and 43 franchises in the United States and Europe.

Although other companies are constantly changing styles in a frantic search for something new, Gucci has continued to carry the horse-bit shoe for 30 years, along with other up-dated styles.

Other firms look for something new because they don't have a consistent clientele who appreciates one product," said Dr. Aldo Gucci, a senior member of the Italian family firm.

If there is a place for horse-bit, it will appear on a print on a shirt, or down the side of leather pants.

"The best looks in clothing were the simplest, neat lines with link tops and leather belts. The worst were the ones with a few too many stripes.

Successful Living

Work As Teacher's Aide Makes Satisfying Career

Dear Doris: You asked me to write and let you know how I made out as a teacher's aide, after completing the course.

I like the work. I have become so attached to the kids! I don't work with one teacher. We work with slow learners in a small trailer by the school. I give them their work on the listening tapes and take notes for the teacher on their behavior. I guess it seems like we just get started and it is two o'clock and time to go home.

"The only typing I have done so far is when she asked me to write a paragraph on how I saw each child. My impression at the beginning and now. I don't know how the kids rated academically but I do know they had a lot more self-confidence at the end of our two months with them.

I'll have typing to do when she gets her reports made out but she says I can do that at home and just keep track of my time.

Bright Future

Dear Bright: Obviously, you have found your niche. Keep on with it and you'll be getting professional experience; might even help you move forward to the point where you can increase your studies and get a teaching certificate for kindergarten - which I know is one of your ambitions.

Glad to have the second report.

Dear Doris: I have a joke book and found the poem you were asking for. I am learning it to recite at a social evening. I am going to put in all the actions I can, according to the words.

I always enjoy your column and that of your sister, (Mary Moore), following many of her recipes.

Often think of the article you wrote about the turtle who doesn't get anywhere if his head is in his shell, and that encourages me to do things in public which I might never have done otherwise.

Am very active at home and in the community. The days and weeks are never long enough for me.

Feeling I Know You,

Dear Doris: The poem, "The Maiden's Prayer" never fails to get a good many laughs. I hope it will be the same for our senior citizen - the one who is asking for it. I hope I'll still be around and able to recite it myself when I'm 94.

Good luck, dear lady of 91, and stop feeling guilty about asking. I'm glad you did.

Ruth.

Dear Ruth and Feeling I Know You: Let's hope when we all get to our very senior years, we are able to find humor - of a kindly sort - in verses like The Old Maid's Prayer.

If any reader is wondering what this is all about, it describes a single lady praying for a man. An owl in the tree above says, "Whit!" And in her desperation our maiden lady replies that anyone will do!

We now have many copies. Thank you, all of you! If older readers want the poem, write in enclosing 25 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for it.

(Leaflets mentioned by Doris are available to readers for 25 cents and a large stamped, self-addressed envelope. Send your letter in care of this newspaper.)

Native Families Sought For Foster Children

EDMONTON (CP) — Alberta's child welfare branch is trying to find more native families to act as foster parents for the estimated 1,800 Indian and Metis children now under care by the branch.

Art Boettcher, supervisor of the foster home and unwed mothers program, said the branch wants to place native children in native homes to preserve their natural culture and languages.

Mr. Boettcher said half the 5,600 children under the care of the branch are either Indian or Metis.

"We just haven't a sufficient number of native homes to place the large number of native children into an Indian environment that is familiar to them."

He said the branch will explain the foster home program to native families during a series of workshops organized by the branch and the Voice of Alberta Native Women's Society.

Mr. Boettcher said before the series of similar workshops in 1973, many native families thought standards for foster parents would be too high for them to qualify.

After the 1973 programs, a number of new foster homes were established on the Hobbema reserve, 45 miles south of Edmonton.

Early Tests Slow Cancer

TORONTO (CP) — The death rate among British Columbia women from cancer of the cervix has been almost halved in the last 18 years by that province's program of mass screening of women, Dr. David Boyes of the B.C. Cancer institute said Tuesday.

He told a Canadian science writers symposium that mortality rates dropped to six per 100,000 women in 1972 from 11.4 in 1956.

He said the incidence of invasive cancer of the cervix also dropped to 9.2 per 100,000 women from 28.4 between 1955 and 1972.

Dr. Boyes said these improvements were achieved despite a rise in the number of women found to have early malignant changes—before the disease becomes invasive.

He said these changes also are being detected among women in their early 30s instead of their late 30s and 40s as was the case 12 years ago.

He said figures support beliefs that the disease is associated with sexual activity and a woman who begins an active sexual life early or has many partners is more likely to develop cancer.

Anatolians Prepare To Grow Opium Again

AFYON, Turkey (Reuter) — In the next few years Afyon, Turkey banned the cultivation of opium poppies, the farmers of southwest Anatolia are preparing to sow a new poppy crop.

Stocks have been brought out of storage ready for planting, the government the new government keeps its election promise to lift the ban imposed by the United States-sponsored ban. Hopes are high in the villages of this impoverished region that between one and two thousand will be cutting open the pod that produces the world's finest opium.

The capital of Ankara, United States diplomats are watching hard to save the ban but already there are predictions that the opium issue is likely to upset Turkish-American relations.

The road ahead could get a bit bumpy," one U.S. diplomat said this week.

Before 1972, an estimated 80 per cent of the heroin bought by American addicts originated in Turkey. To get the ban enforced, the U.S. agreed to pay some $35.7 million compensation—more than half of which has already been handed over to Turkish authorities for regional development.

In the villages around Afyon the city's name means opium—there is still little open admission of the ravages of heroin addiction. Turkey has no drug problem.

Instead, there are bitter complaints that despite American compensation, farmers' incomes have slumped disastrously since they were stopped from growing poppies.

The ban was the main issue in this area during last October's election campaign. The Republican People's Party (RPP) and National Salvation Party—partners in the new government—both pledged to end the measure and it won them the election.

Now the pressure is on the government to keep its promise.

Foreign Minister Turan Gunes has already had one meeting with U.S. Ambassador William Macomber on the issue and a joint committee of experts may be set up to look at the problem.

Gunes told the envoy that Turkey wanted to assist the United States, but could not jeopardize the livelihood of about 100,000 farming families in the Afyon region.

If the ban is to remain, the economic question must be resolved, the minister said—a clear hint that more U.S. aid must be offered.

Meanwhile, an RPP committee has recommended that cultivation be resumed in four provinces under strict security controls to stop opium going reaching smugglers.

Before 1972, cultivation was permitted in only four of Turkey's 67 provinces and an estimated one-third of the crop was illegally sold to smugglers. The rest was bought by the state to be refined into morphine and codeine.

Turkish and American narcotic experts are extremely sceptical whether it is possible to devise controls that will stop farmers selling to smuggling rings.

Farmers are calling for a speedy decision on the ban, because if Turkey is to have a poppy crop in 1974 seeds must be down by mid-April.

The Turkish union of pharmacists is also exerting pressure. It has pointed out that as a result of the ban Turkey, once an exporter of medicinal opium, soon will have to import the drug.

On the American side, hints have already been dropped that the Ankara ban would anger the U.S. Congress and lead to demands for pruning of aided aid to Turkey.

U.S. experts also say that it would ruin American endeavors to persuade other countries to stop opium cultivation.

If both sides start talking about increased compensation, the bargaining is likely to be tough. Gunes has already stated the ban has cost Turkey $1 billion in the Turkish economy of at least $21 million.

While Ankara awaits reaction from Washington, the farmers grow more militant. The Turkish press is daily more critical of the ban and Nihat Erim, the former premier who implemented it.

"We are worse off before. After the ban we were even poorer and cannot remain silent any longer," said Mehmet Cavlan, mukhtar (chief) of the 3,700-population village of Ilicapinar near Afyon.

"We shall protest and protest again until this ban is ended."

Psychologist Suggests Fantasy Death Service

TORONTO (CP) — Death isn't the way most people imagine it, says a Guelph psychologist who has spent the last two years researching the subject.

Prof. Richard Loucito of University of Guelph says most people picture death "the way they see it in the movies."

"The truth is you are taken to hospital, stuck with tubes, drugged and helpless."

It might not be a bad idea, he says, for society to supply a fantasy service for the dying: "If you always wanted to die in a gun fight, why not?"

In the meantime, he will offer for first credit course at a Canadian university, beginning this fall, to help people understand death and dying.

The material he will take into the Guelph university classroom was gathered during two years of working with bereaved. Toronto families and studying relationships of terminal patients with their doctors and families.

"What we want to do is replace the guilt, anger and fear that accompany the death process with understanding, if not calm."

People want to talk out their fears and feelings on the subject but don't feel there is anyone to turn to."

Society is not sensitive to this need yet, he says but predicts that one day there will be tax-supported death orientation centres in every community.

People who have suffered a loss or are wrestling with their own attitude toward death will be able to consult trained personnel, read materials and talk with others in the same predicament.

Before someone can be comfortable with the idea of death, he must first lose the notion of his own self-importance—not to be confused with self-esteem, says Prof. Loucito.

"Many people have difficulty imagining a world without their presence. They can't think of not existing."

How can a person put death in perspective if he can only think of it as a calamity, rather than a natural aspect of life?

He says another enemy to rational acceptance of death is tied up with North American materialism and the achievement orientation.

It can be described as the "I can't die now, look at all the things I haven't done" syndrome, which can cause unnecessary guilt and depression.

Prof. Loucito says he wants particularly to interest doctors and nurses in the course which, in addition to classroom work, might also involve visits to homes for the aged, terminal wards, morturaries and embalming rooms.

Tests were conducted in a terminal ward, which showed that as a patient's condition deteriorated the doctor spent progressively less time with him.

"The doctor could, of course, rationalize this on grounds of practicality. But what this meant to the patient was 'I have become valueless to everyone.'"

He said he would like to see a bill of rights for patients, including the terminally ill, to give them a say in their treatment.

Mishap Turned Roger Lemelin From Athlete Into Intellectual

MONTREAL (CP) — Roger Lemelin goes through life with big strides, and why?

"I have to make up for 35 million lost steps," says this o n e-c e-phal French-Canadian phenomenon with the big imagination and the ready laughter.

Self-drawing emotion entwines with hard-headed realism in the personality of Roger Lemelin, who in his 54 years has enjoyed many roles, finding creativity in everything.

"It's like writing a book," said Mr. Lemelin of his present role as publisher since June, 1972, of La Presse, biggest French-language newspaper in North America, owned since 1967 by financier Paul Desmarais, his long-time friend.

A fresh outlook has swept that long-troubled newspaper and much of the credit is attributed to the new publisher's montage of characters from The Plouffe Family, Mr. Lemelin's immensely successful television series which ran on French-and English-language television for six years in the 1950s.

Observing the vigorous six-footer today, it is difficult to believe he spent eight years tied to wheelchair, crutches and cane after a skiing accident smashed his left ankle at 18.

It was a blessing in disguise for this unusual intellectual who was limited by circumstances to Grade 8 in school and feels that Quebec has been ill-served by its intellectual elite of the past and present.

Without it, there might have been no Plouffe family, no Lemelin novels starting at age 22, no membership in the Royal Society of Canada at age 30, no honors by the Academie Francaise, no Guggenheim and Rockefeller Fellowships, no Prix David in 1946, no membership in the French Academie Goncourt in 1974.

"I probably would have been too busy for all that," said Mr. Lemelin with a grin. "On the other hand, I might have been an Olympic skier. . . ."

With sudden change of mood, he told an interviewer of being deeply touched at receiving letters of congratulation from the staff of La Presse on the Goncourt appointment—he is the first Canadian so honored.

"The staff reaction apparently reflects a happy contrast with former days at La Presse when management-staff relations resembled the "marriage of a man and a woman who hate each other."

Mr. Lemelin told an interviewer many persons deserve credit for an improved atmosphere in which the circulation of La Presse has climbed to 210,000 or 212,000 from 140,000 in two years. Walls of protocol and tradition have come tumbling down and an era of "democracy and respect for the journalist" has been installed at the 89-year-old newspaper, which suffered 15 years of turmoil culminating in a 3½-month suspension of publication ending in February, 1972.

A fresh statement of principles published by Mr. Lemelin in December and approved by Mr. Desmarais imparted an aura of new beginnings.

Mr. Lemelin makes a business of communicating to people his faith in life, sometimes in a way upsetting to what he terms the bourgeois elements of society. He never before worked for a newspaper although he once sponsored the Time-Life and wrote many articles for domestic and foreign publications. As a young author he wrote four novels—another 19 he published soon—starting with Au Pied de La Pente Douce or The Town Below and also a French-language film.

In The Plouffe Family, he wrote the equivalent of 120 three-act plays, haunted by deadlines, "to the point where I could no longer bear the sight of a written word." He then stepped up his business activities and made it big in lumber, food and advertising. As a chess player, he lost—to Bobby Fischer, the American master.

"I have always valued my activities," he said, "I am first of all a person who loves life. Creativity is not limited to writing or painting. Creatively is the way you live in any field."

Mr. Lemelin recalled his origins as the eldest in a family of 19 in a working-class parish of Quebec City. The church-run educational system of the day offered only two prospects—the local shoe factory for ordinary students; the church for the gifted.

"Two things were important in my life," said Roger Lemelin, "Because of the accident, I wanted to recapture all those steps I could not take for so many years. It forced me—I was a strong guy, you know—to go inside myself, to express myself.

"The other thing is that I then stepped up his business activities and made it big in lumber, food and advertising. As a chess player, he lost—to Bobby Fischer, the American master.

When a Roman Catholic churchman offered to arrange for Roger, a brilliant student, 18 go to the seminary and become a priest, his father, Joseph Lemelin, reared up with this one:

"I will leave Roger no money, but will leave him his freedom."

Today, Joseph Lemelin, 84, sits at the head of the table at the affluent new home of his son at Cap Rouge, near Quebec City, Mr. Lemelin commutes to Quebec on weekends.

His office in La Presse stands on St. Lawrence Blvd., the traditional dividing line between French-and English-speaking Montreal. For Mr. Lemelin, there is no dividing line.

"I grew up in a city where the English speak French and we have almost established them," he said with a burst of laughter.

"For me, all Montrealers are French. If they live in Montreal, they are all a little bit French. I see them in the best restaurants. They must be French."

Unlike many French-Canadians, Mr. Lemelin has never worked for an English-language boss.

"My enemies—I mean my bosses—were French-Canadians, not English. For me they were the priests of the time and the bourgeois class. I have always felt that the elite in Quebec betrayed the people . . . more today than ever."

Mr. Lemelin is mystified that many young Quebec intellectuals today are "missionaries of defeat" and regard the French-Canadian who succeeds in life as some kind of "upstate."

"I really don't know why they feel like that, because they have everything," he said. "I think the French-Canadian culture has never been stronger and never so full of life."

Roger Lemelin, publisher of La Presse, puffs on a cigarette during an interview in his Montreal office. Mr. Lemelin, who became publisher in June, 1972, says "it's like writing a book." The comparison comes easily to Mr. Lemelin, who has written four novels and wrote the successful television series The Plouffe Family. (CP Photo)

Worth Fighting For?

British troops and equipment are based at Suffield, Alta., army experimental range, where they conduct military exercises under a 19-year agreement with the Canadian government.

However, area farmers and conservationists want the range returned to agricultural use, and Medicine Hat wants the natural gas reserves under the range tapped for its developing petrochemical industry. (CP Photo).

Natural Gas Exists Beneath Army Range

SUFFIELD, Alta. (CP) — The Suffield army experimental range is a desolate area of southeastern Alberta semi-desert that on the surface hardly seems worth fighting about.

But below the surface of the 2,000-square-mile range is estimated four trillion cubic feet in natural gas reserves.

The presence of the gas has been known since the first well in Alberta was drilled at Alderson, 35 miles northwest of Medicine Hat, in 1883. But the Suffield block was left largely untouched because of questionable ownership and because prices made large-scale development of the densely-packed, slow-flowing gas formations unattractive.

But the energy crisis has changed the gas equation and the Alberta government, which owns the mineral rights, and the federal government, which owns the surface rights, are attempting to settle the ownership question.

Medicine Hat wants the Suffield gas for its developing petrochemical industry. Alderman Ted Grimm, chairman of city council's utilities committee, said the city is negotiating with the provincial government about purchasing Suffield gas.

Drilling on the Suffield range is already in progress but a full-scale search for gas will have to wait until Alberta and Ottawa settle the ownership issue.

There is also the problem of what to do about British North Atlantic Treaty Organization troops that have been conducting exercises on the military range since 1972.

Farmers and conservationists say heavy military vehicles are tearing up the terrain and that artillery is starting grass fires that drive wildlife away. Another concern is for archeological treasures left behind by generations of plains Indians.

Alphy Johnson, a farmer at Schular near the eastern boundary of the range, led a 13-man delegation to the Alberta legislature last June which asked that Suffield be returned to agricultural use before military activity did "irreparable damage."

Mr. Johnson said since the meeting the situation at Suffield has improved and "the military people seem to be making more effort to extinguish fires."

The Canadian Defence Research Establishment has been conducting experiments in chemical and biological warfare at Suffield since the Second World War and has 700 tons of deadly mustard gas in storage. Clay Iverson, director of the research establishment, said a test for the safe destruction of the mustard gas has been completed and destruction will begin shortly.

The Medicine Hat Chamber of Commerce and elected officials say the federal government should honor its 10-year agreement with Britain to allow British troops to use Suffield for military exercises.

Bill Wyse, MLA for Medicine Hat-Redcliffe, says the British government is spending $6 million a year to bring troops to Suffield and most of the money is going into the Medicine Hat area economy.

"I think we should let the British troops continue their presence in the Suffield area."

But Fred Mandeville, MLA for the Bow Valley constituency, which encompasses the Suffield block, says the military activity "does not need all that space."

"Suffield could also be used for research, agriculture, ranching and parks, and we should not be in a hurry to develop the Suffield gas field. We have enough energy and we should conserve the Suffield gas for future generations."

Helping Retarded

TORONTO (CP) — Impressed by the programs operated by five workshops in Toronto where 450 mentally-retarded persons are employed under the auspices of Arc Industries, the Canadian Association for the Mentally Retarded plans to launch an appeal campaign here in May and collect $3 million to establish more facilities such as Arc throughout the country. There are 650,000 persons in Canada classified as mentally retarded.

Parrot Smugglers Down Under

SYDNEY (AP) — Smuggling Australian parrots, noted for their bright plumage, out of the country is said to be big business.

A pair of parrots trapped in Australia, or bred in the backyard, can bring $2,000 in Europe.

The law prevents the export of birds native to Australia except with a licence, which is rarely given when they are not consigned to a zoo.

Once every month or so someone is in court, charged with trying to smuggle birds out of Australia, and fined or jailed. Of course, nobody knows how many get away with it, but prices in Europe indicate that parrots remain a valuable commodity.

Among the latest in court were a man and woman charged with trying to smuggle 24 parrots out of Australia. He was sentenced to six months and she was fined $75.

They were arrested when about to leave Sydney airport and the manner of their attempted smuggling, as revealed in court, showed to what lengths people in the business go to get their valuable birds to the aviaries of Europe.

The couple had two handbags each, with a false bottom about 2½ inches deep with several air holes in the bottom. Each contained eight drugged birds. The woman had a white raincoat under which, in two stockings, were eight birds, also drugged and separated from each other by rubber bands around the stockings.

The 24 birds, some extremely rare, were four golden shoulder parrots, four hooded parrots, seven northern rosellas, five blue bonnets and four Cockatoo parrots. Two were found dead in the search and two more died later.

Kayak Used To Get to Work

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Doug Bushnell, a truck mechanic, has a unique way of getting to and from work. He paddles a kayak.

Bushnell is a kayak competitor and tries to stay in shape all year for the kayak season, which runs from March to October.

Each morning, weather permitting, Bushnell slips his kayak into the Black Rock Canal near his home on Buffalo's west side.

He paddles down the canal, into Buffalo Harbor, up the Buffalo River to the Michigan Avenue Bridge, a total distance of 3½ miles. There, he pulls the 32-pound kayak out of the river and carries it a few blocks to work.

After work, he paddles the kayak home by a longer route that takes him out into Lake Erie, and down the Niagara River into the canal, a seven-mile journey.

In the dead of winter, when the lake and harbor are frozen over, Bushnell gets in his kayak practice on an open stretch of the Buffalo River.

On days when the weather prevents him from using his kayak to get to work, Bushnell has to use other means.

"I run to work when I don't paddle in," he said. "It's about three miles each way."

Booming Sarnia Development Skyrockets Property Prices

SARNIA, Ont. (CP) — Sarnia, designated as the centre of one of Canada's fastest-growing areas in the next few years, is feeling the pressures that accompany large-scale development.

Real estate prices are skyrocketing in the city, now extended almost to its boundaries and unable to grow in any direction but up. Land developers and speculators are streaming into city and area-planning offices.

Motel owners say they are being inundated with requests to rent blocks of units for months at a time.

One real estate firm recorded more than $1 million in transactions in the first half of February, normally a slow month, and equalled the entire January output.

The centre of the fever pitch grabbing the area is a proposed petrochemical development in nearby Moore Township.

The Sarnia Olefins and Aromatics Project (S.O.A.P.) plans a $250-million plant that initially will produce one billion pounds of ethylene, a prime feedstock for the petrochemical industry.

The four partner companies which make up S.O.A.P.— Polysar Ltd., Du Pont of Canada Ltd., Union Carbide Canada Ltd. and Koch Industries Inc., will use the ethylene and other petroleum derivatives to manufacture their own special products.

In addition, Union Carbide recently announced plans to build anew polyethylene and petrochemical coke plant worth $100 million.

S.O.A.P. and Union Carbide plan to build in Moore Township on about 1,000 acres of land with completion in early 1977.

A peak labor force of 3,200 will be required for construction and about 650 permanent jobs will be created.

Polysar, in a letter to Sarnia city council, said it has plans for a multi-million-dollar styrene plant.

It is the spinoff from these large-scale developments that has some planners worried.

Already a major plastics company and a fertilizer firm have expressed interest in locating in the area.

Ray Jenkins, Sarnia planning director, said there will be a "tremendous impact" not only in Sarnia and the whole of Lambton County but in neighboring Kent County.

"In Sarnia, we are going to have to be very careful not to fall in the pressure and allow rampant development of high-rise apartments. We want to preserve many neighborhood areas.

Before the S.O.A.P. announcement, population studies projected a population in Sarnia of about 83,000 by the year 2000. "But this already has been outdated," Mr. Jenkins said.

The need for new housing to keep up with demand will be the biggest problem along with agreeing on ways to finance new sanitary sewers, treatment plants and a transportation system in the area.

Mr. Jenkins said there is a real need for an independent, third party, possibly the province, to enter the picture to co-ordinate over-all planning policies.

At present there is no over-all planning study and each municipality largely depends on its own plan.

The real pressure will begin this summer and accelerate during the next five years, Mr. Jenkins said.

"The plans that have surfaced are only a portion of what will occur and we need a co-ordinated effort to handle it. People are just not aware of the magnitude of the implications.

"It's almost impossible to get a home now in Sarnia. By next year prices will be out of sight. No one has the faggiest idea of what will happen.

"We don't know who is speculating and who is serious about locating. Developers are streaming through our offices looking for land."

He said for every new job created, three or four more can be expected in service-related occupations.

At a recent public meeting, Moore Township planning board chairman James Douglas said: "The community must continue to grow or die. If we don't grow, it is only comes worse that we will wither and die."

Mel Winch, Lambton County planning director, said a trade-off has developed between following good planning principles and the risk of losing industrial development.

"If we take too much time assessing development proposals, we take the risk of losing the industry," he said. "We don't have the mechanism for over-all planning in the county."

Mr. Winch said while the large companies have said they will provide their own services, problems might arise with smaller spinoff companies who must rely on municipal services.

He said he can foresee more pressure on rural land in the county. "We have an urban way of life developing in the rural areas and the psychological effect alone can mean a further depletion of agriculture land."

Dr. D. F. Brown, S.O.A.P. project manager, said the idea was conceived three years ago because Canadian petrochemical industries had to pay higher prices for raw materials than United States competitors.

At that time, oil was cheaper there, but unavailable for Sarnia industries. At the same time, the U.S. government provided its industries with access to the oil and "we could not compete."

E. Pe... Masters, general manager of Union Carbide's plastics and chemicals group, said in a recent news release 25 per cent of Canadian petrochemical demand has been met by U.S. imports.

"The situation is changing quite rapidly, largely due to the worldwide energy shortage," he said. "Canada has good supplies of raw materials for petrochemicals and, along with growing worldwide demand, is providing a real opportunity for the Canadian petrochemical industry to become competitive."

Dr. Brown said the S.O.A.P. plant and partner—company expansion plans involves a total investment of $550 million and creation of 1,000 new jobs.

The only large-scale housing development on the horizon so far is a $270-million proposal by Sifton Properties Ltd. of London, Ont.

The company plans to build about 10,000 units, capable of housing 30,000 people over the next 25 years in an area about 1½ miles from the industrial site.

To meet immediate needs, Sifton is preparing 300 units in an established subdivision in the town of Corunna.

Donald MacDonald, Moore Township clerk, said Corunna can expect a population of 34,000 in about 30 years. The entire township now has 7,200 residents.

He said the township's sanitary sewer system and treatment plant, a lagoon, will have to be expanded.

Even though part of the S.O.A.P. location requires rezoning amendment in the township's official plan, from rural to industrial, Mr. MacDonald said the council is not going to permit further encroachments on agricultural land.

He said the township is in an enviable position, having a total assessment of $80 million on an equalized basis, split evenly between industrial and commercial and residential.

Taxes on an average house in a serviced area are $300.

Job Seekers in Quinte Decline by 36 Per Cent

The number of job seekers in the Belleville area dropped sharply during February — traditionally a peak month for unemployment.

The decline — about 36 per cent down from the beginning of the year — is shown by Canada Manpower job registrations in Hastings County. The fall-off maintains a statistical trend which shows far fewer people looking for work than last winter.

Simultaneously, the increase in unemployment insurance claims in Hastings and Prince Edward counties has been tapering off in recent weeks, the UIC Belleville district office reports.

Canada Manpower statistics showed 876 applicants registered for work in February. This compares with 1,386 in January and 1,355 for February 1973.

The Belleville Manpower administrative area includes the city, Ameliasburgh township and Hastings County.

A Manpower official did not offer any specific reason for the decline. Since December, there have been less people registered than during the same three peak months of unemployment than last winter.

"More than 900 job applicants is still not anything to laugh at. But, by and large we're running better than in previous years," he said.

Vaughan Storrie, manager of the UIC's Belleville district office, said computerized claims totals were not immediately available, for the two Quinte counties, which includes Manpower centres at Belleville, Picton and Trenton.

But the intake of claims had been averaging 305-400 a week in January and early February. Since then the average had dropped to about 200.

Zone Meeting On Weekend

The Kiwanis Club of Belleville will be host for a zone conference meeting this weekend at the Four Seasons Hotel.

City Kinsmen will be welcoming delegates from within the zone, from such places as Kingston, Gananoque, Brighton and Trenton.

Kinsmen president, Doug Jackson, said he expects about 125 to attend the two-day conference that starts this Saturday with registration in the afternoon.

Sunday will be given over to various meetings relating to the zone.

Ghosts Walk at Glanmore

By PETER GOODSPEED
Staff Reporter

Glanmore House, the Victorian mansion on Bridge Street East, casts an eerie spell upon visitors any dark, cold night.

Its silhouette, soarred by the tossing arms of the huge pine and maple trees that are scattered about the grounds, seems to whisper tales of mystery and suspense.

If your imagination is vivid enough, the dumbness that occupy the downstairs drawing rooms can come to life and creep through the wood-panelled halls wringing hands stained with blood as scarlet as the lush carpeting and crying bitter tears of remorse.

The sweeping staircase that leads to the library is a perfect spot from which to watch a mysterious lady, clad in a long flowing gown and carrying a candlestick, slip into the woodwork at the end of the upstairs hall.

The library itself, houses a small window seat that when sat in the shadows thrown from a chandelier in the centre of the room, would be the perfect hiding place for the spirit of a three-year-old boy, that night, people did hauntGlanmore House!

They did not come to frighten people, however, instead, they tried to entertain members of the Hastings County Historical Society.

The society, holding its monthly general meeting, spent nearly an hour last night discussing the supernatural in local history.

Gerald Boyce the society's president and the meeting's featured speaker, drew the audience's attention to a number of mysterious episodes in the history of Hastings County and the Quinte area.

Mr. Boyce started his talk by stating that, until recently, the supernatural has not been a subject held close to the hearts of scholars and local historians.

Tradition may preserve a legend but it is rarely swept it. As a result, historians have seriously questioned the authenticity of reports of ghosts and other supernatural occurrences.

However, despite the lack of accurate documentation, the amateur historian in the Quinte area has a plethora of supernatural legends to entertain him, Mr. Boyce said.

Just last year, Jan Perkowski, a researcher with the National Museum of Man, in Ottawa, published a report on the customs of a vampire-fearing group, known as the Kashuba, who live in the area near the northern boundaries of Hastings County around Barry's Bay and Wilno.

Mr. Perkowski's research unveiled an area of Ontario supposedly populated by vampires, dwarfs and witches.

In fact, Mr. Boyce said, Perkowski reported one instance in which some of the Kashuba dug up a grave and cut the head off a corpse in an attempt to destroy a vampire.

Another mysterious legend, that has its roots in the Tyendinaga-Deseronto area, tells of the remarkable feats of a 15th century Indian, Deganawedah, who along with Hiawatha, is said to be one of the founders of the Iroquois Confederacy.

Deganawedah, reportedly born of a virgin mother near Eagle Hill in the Deseronto area, is said to have pedalled a stone canoe across Lake Ontario. On arriving at the south shore he met a band of Mohawk Indians and with their help formed the confederacy of the Five Nations.

As a child, Deganawedah is said to have escaped the wrath of his grandmother and survived three attempts to kill him.

According to Mr. Boyce, the Indian legend claims that Deganawedah's grandmother, ashamed of her virgin daughter's child, tried to kill the baby on three separate occasions by throwing him into Lake Ontario through the ice; by burying him in a snow drift; and by casting him into a fire. On each occasion, the child miraculously survived and returned to be nursed by his mother.

Other episodes in the Quinte area's mysterious past retold by Mr. Boyce, included accounts of 19th century seances, tales of ghosts who tapped on attic doors as they took a midnight stroll and stories of deserted houses that mysteriously glowed in the dark.

One tale, retold by Mr. Boyce, told of a number of ghost sightings recorded by John J.B. Flint, a police magistrate in Belleville in 1822, who was visited by two ghosts in his Charles Street home while he sat in his drawing room playing an organ.

Flint wrote that on one occasion while he was sitting in the drawing room" some inexplicable caught me and caused me to turn my head quickly to the left. There was a large chair between me and the door leading to the hall and by the side of this chair stood a figure of a man, facing the door leading to the hall. He wore a black frock coat, turned down collar, black hair, strongly marked features and black side whiskers. I took in every detail. It remained only sufficiently long so as to indelibly stamp it on my mind."

Two weeks later, Flint told of another similar experience in the same room in which he saw "a black substance"... which seemed to him like a lady's dress just disappear through the door into the hall."

Charles Street is not the only area of Belleville frequented by ghosts. Glanmore House reportedly has two ghosts of its own.

Percy Philips, one three-year-old son of he home's

Six Named To Commission

Six Thurlow township residents were appointed to the municipality's recreation committee during council's regular monthly meeting Wednesday.

They are Diane Generaux, Lou Williams, Harold, Preet, Jerry Masterson, Jack Morrison and Kay Summers.

originals owners died of scarlatina in the late 19th century and is said to have been seen visiting the library at the top of the stairs, long after his death.

On another occasion, a female apparition was said to have been seen crossing the upstairs landing carrying a candelabrum.

Neither young Percy nor the mysterious candle-bearing woman made an appearance at last night's meeting, but that doesn't mean they weren't there.

They may have been quietly laughing at the strange mixture of credulity and scepticism shown by the people of the 20th century, for, as I left the darkened building after the meeting, I glanced back at the house and I'm certain a light in an upstairs window winked at me as the wind moaned in the trees.

Schoolgirl First Traffic Victim

Belleville police have charged a 43-year-old man, Charles Oscar Wood, of RR5, Belleville, with failing to remain at the scene of an accident, following the hit-and-run death early yesterday evening of a 9-year-old girl as she walked home from school.

Arlene Burke, 10, of 114 Jackson Ave., was killed instantly around 5 p.m. Yesterday, when she was struck by a light blue Mazda pickup truck driven by a white aluminum camper on its back, as she walked east along the north side of Treacy Street, near George Hanley Public School.

Witnesses are reported as saying that the truck driver stopped to look at the dead girl before fleeing from the accident scene.

Police were called to the scene of the city's first motor vehicle fatality of the year at 4:57 p.m.

The intersection where the young girl was killed, Treacy and Lemoine Streets, does not have sidewalks for pedestrians.

Wood was arrested by police three hours after the accident and was charged late last night.

Police have yet to interview a young girl who was walking along Treacy Street with the Burke youngster when the accident occurred.

Mystery Chute Dangerous Toy

By AL ZABAS
Staff Reporter

What was that flying object that you accidentally picked up after it drifted down from the sky Tuesday?

Authorities could not identify it as a miniature parachute with shrouds about two feet in length.

Doug Thom and Silvano Falasco both said they saw a fiery orange object about a foot in diameter hit the ground near where they were walking along Station St.

Having picked it up and checked the sky for planes, they examined it. To the shrouds, wires propped up a knitted asbestos sleeve were attached to a small charred object.

No one but Harry van Linteren, it seems, knows what it is.

As a boy, says Mr. van Linteren, he played with a toy parachute picked up after it drifted down from the sky.

"It's not the mysterious," he said, "but it can be dangerous."

He explained that a sponge is soaked in a metal salt and then is placed in the sleeve. The intense heat caused by the burning of the liquid heats the air and forces the chute to open.

Mr. van Linteren claimed the chute could rise to a height of 2,000 feet before the wood alcohol begins to burn off, the assembly sinks to the ground.

He said methyl hydrate tablets can also be used as fuel. The asbestos sleeve protects the shrouds from the flame.

Mr. van Linteren, who emigrated to Canada after World War II, cautioned that though a toy, it can be dangerous.

"If it lands in a forest and it's still burning, just a little spark can start a fire," he said.

"In the city, it can be dangerous too."

Alarm Box

Belleville firefighters responded to the following call's for assistance during the 24-hour period ending at 8 a.m. Thursday:

Wednesday, March 13, grass fire in Jackson Woods, near North College Street, 10:50 a.m. no damage.

Wednesday, March 13, grass fire behind Edghill Rd., 11:09 a.m., no damage.

Car Parts Stolen

Belleville police are looking for a thief who stole a transmission and gear shift assembly from the trunk of a car parked in front of an auto repair shop some time Tuesday.

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie said just this morning that his department was called on to investigate the theft after the proprietor of Belleville High Performance Auto Shop, 63 South Front Street, reported the theft from a car parked in front of his garage.

The automotive equipment, owned by Alvin Harry, of 51 Charlotte Street, was valued at $250.

The Personal Touch

Bancroft's Hinterland Handcrafts has found secret of success in highly competitive gift market. It's a cottage industry, now employing 60 women in their homes. Pearl Gorgerat (left) instructs Mary Venus in techniques that produce artistic items with personal touch to designs of co-founder Helen Pitts, standing.

Hinterland Handcrafts Bancroft Success Story

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

BANCROFT — Mass production machinery isn't the only mechanism for making your niche in the modern marketplace.

Carl and Helen Pitts have been proving the point here for 11 years — and their enterprise is still expanding.

Hinterland Handcrafts is one of the few Canadian undertakings manufacturing artistically-designed leather goods for a market that has mushroomed in recent times.

But its production principles is as old-fashioned as it products. As a result, this village is also a prime example of cottage industry in the Quinte district.

Hinterland's output, in an era of electronic sophistication, is based on an age-old production technique — Cottage industry.

Today, about 60 women work in their homes here-abouts, skilfully embellishing the leather gift items flowing from the Pitts' plant.

It's a cottage workforce that's more than doubled in four years.

Meantime, the Pitts right now are just finishing an addition to their main workshop-warehouse centre at the north end of Bancroft's main street on Highway 62. It's the second expansion in two years.

Such growth symbolizes success in a market for gift items that's seen a spectacular upsurge in recent years.

It's a bustling business marked by the phenomenal growth of boutiques and gift shops, where one finds not only more conventional tourist articles. But this in turn has increased competition.

Yet demand for Hinterland products — its leather jewelry, bookmarks, purses and other items — continues to grow, says Mr. Pitts.

The explanation: Despite the volume, each article is a piece of individual craftsmanship, artistically-designed and wrought in local homes described as individual homecrafters in the cottage force change from time to time.

The appeal of Hinterland's originality was shown recently when the firm displayed its wares at one of the biggest craft trade shows — and got photograph in a Toronto newspaper.

Such market points are a long way from Hinterland's humble start — a hobby that began for the couple when they operated a tourist resort at Barry's Bay, in those days, enterprising Japanese businessmen were starting to export Canadian souvenirs than Canadian producers. The Pitts started yanking leather maple leaves as a gesture toward filling the bottom breach.

When they moved here in 1963, they had a market to test with them.

While her husband runs the business, Mrs. Pitts devotes herself to designing and handicraft — an ongoing process if production is to be maintained as individual homecrafters in the cottage force change from time to time.

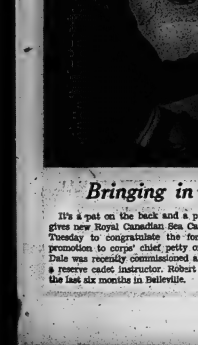
The school winter break begins Friday, but students in the Quinte district have already begun their annual excursions to Europe.



While in London, the group will attend a rehearsal of the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra, spend a day at the Royal College of Music, the choir schools at Westminster Abbey and St. Paul's Cathedral, and visit Christ's Cathedral, Hampton Court and Windsor.

Accompanying the Moira students is a group from Quinte Secondary School and home economics teacher Mrs. Diane Hall. The home economics students will tour places of particular interest to them, including hotel kitchens, cooking schools and town planning offices.

The music and home economics class's were arranged through Heritage of Canada, a government scheme to promote student travel abroad. For the 12 day trip, students pay $310 apiece, a price that includes air fare and meals.

The 73 members of Centennial Secondary School's band left in two buses Thursday for Myrtle Beach in South Carolina, where they will provide entertainment during Can-Am days at the resort. The students raised the money to finance the trip themselves. Band director Monty Emmerson was instrumental in arranging the trip.

Bringing in the New Man

Robert has spent four years with the Sea Cadets, the last six months in Belleville.

Streaker Top Attraction

Habs Tie Hawks 3-3, North Stars Make Bid

By THE CANADIAN PRESS.

Montreal Canadiens protected their runner-up position in the Eastern Division of the National Hockey League Wednesday night and Minnesota North Stars made a final run for a playoff berth in the West.

But the best run of the night was made by a well-endowed young lady prior to the start of the Pittsburgh-Los Angeles game.

While Canadiens battled to a 3-3 tie with Chicago Black Hawks and the North Stars defeated Atlanta Flames 5-1, a woman streaked in honor of Los Angeles right-winger Mike Murphy.

She told a Los Angeles radio station Tuesday she would streak before the contest "so that Mike Murphy will see me."

About 10 minutes before the game, clad only in a Kings cap and carrying a team banner, she tiptoed onto the ice with a security policeman in pursuit.

She scampered the length of the ice and made it through an exit untouched, much to the consternation of the guard who slipped and skidded on the ice while the crowd cheered.

The Kings defeated Pittsburgh Penguins 5-1 and retained a share of third place while Detroit Red Wings skinned California Golden Seals 5-1 in the only other match.

In tonight's games, New York Islanders are at Toronto, Chicago goes to New York to play the Rangers, Boston Bruins are at Buffalo Sabres and St. Louis Blues visit Philadelphia Flyers.

"Her name was Cindy, that's really about all we know," said Mike Hope, the Kings' publicity director.

"I appreciate her consideration, but I'm getting married in the near future," Murphy said. "I'd like to thank her for thinking of me, anyway. I wish I could have been on the ice to see it. I haven't seen a streaker yet."

Murphy reciprocated by scoring a goal, while veteran Bob Nevin had a goal and two assists for Los Angeles.

Montreal 3 at Chicago 3

The Hawks had their 30th game of the season when Henri Richard beat Hawks' rookie goaltender Mike Veisor with 38 seconds remaining.

Montreal coach Scotty Bowman said Chicago's first two goals were tainted.

"(Bill) Russell was so far off the line, the linesman didn't even see him," Bowman said. "On (Pit) Martin's goal, he was so offside even the Chicago guys were laughing on the bench."

Atlanta 1 at North Stars 5

Dennis Hextall scored two goals in 15 seconds in the third period to highlight the North Stars' triumph. Team-mate Bill Goldsworthy's 45th goal of the season, at 7:34 of the second period, had broken a 1-1 tie.

Detroit 3 at California 2

The Red Wings trailed 2-1 entering the third period in which the Seals' goaltending collapsed. Marcel Dionne scored twice and Red Berenson and Pierre Jarry each connected once without a reply from the Seals' team. Mickey Redmond's 45th goal of the season for Detroit opened the scoring in the second period.

Crusaders Shade Winnipeg 4-3

By THE CANADIAN PRESS.

Cleveland Crusaders' determination to make the playoffs in the East Division of the World Hockey Association resulted in a 4-3 victory over Winnipeg Jets Wednesday—but their coach Bill Needham, says they were lucky.

The Crusaders built a 3-0 lead in the first two periods, but in fewer than five minutes of the third period the Jets had tied the score.

Jim Wiste's goal saved the night at the 12:38 mark and it went Winnipeg down to its fourth consecutive defeat.

The Crusaders moved back into a tie with Quebec Nordiques for third place, while the Jets remained in fourth place in the West, two points behind Edmonton Oilers.

"In the only other game, Vancouver Blazers defeated Los Angeles Sharks 5-2 before 6,421 fans in Vancouver. The Blazers are 15 points off the playoff pace in the West, while the Sharks are four more points behind.

"We jet down for a fraction, and they took advantage," said Needham.

Cleveland right-winger Gerry Pinder said the Crusaders were "pretty dejected" after the Jets tied the score, "but we all thought if we could bear down again, we could win it."

Pinder opened the scoring in the first period on a rebound of shots by Tom Edur, Ron Ward and Gary Jarrett. Russ Walker made it 2-0 with a rebound of shots by Ralph Hoplavouci and Doug Brindley.

In the second period, Paul Andrea hit with a backhander from about six feet out to increase the Crusaders' margin to 3-0.

Winnipeg tied it up with third-period goals by Christian Bordeleau, Fran Huck and Chris Sutherland.

Los Angeles 2 at Vancouver 5

A goal by Bryan Campbell with less than six minutes remaining broke a 2-2 deadlock. Campbell outwitted Los Angeles defenceman Hal Willis on a two-on-one break. Then Claude St. Sauveur rapped in two more goals for the winners, one into an empty net.

In tonight's games, New England Whalers visit the Blazers, Houston Aeros are guests of the Sharks, the Nordiques play Toronto Toros at Ottawa and Minnesota Fighting Saints visit Chicago Cougars.

Chatham, Windsor In Final

CHATHAM (CP) — Chatham Maroons eliminated Welland Sabres from their Southern Ontario Junior Hockey League eight-point semi-final series Wednesday with a 5-2 victory.

Chatham, which took the series 8-4, will open the eight-point final against Windsor Spitfires Saturday in Windsor.

Scott McKenzie, Rick Stickney, Ian Campbell, Bert Forrester and Dave DeGlas scored for Chatham.

Norm Elsner and Jim Tunney replied for the Sabres who were knifout 59-28.

Welland goaltender Jim Hopgood left the game at the 6:25 mark of the first period after suffering a pinched nerve in his shoulder. Gerry Hoffman replaced Hopgood and allowed all five goals.

Welland took five of nine minor penalties called.

TEAM BERMUDA-BOUND

TORONTO (CP) — Canada's national youth soccer team will leave Toronto Saturday for a 12-day training program in Bermuda. The 18 players on the trip will undergo training and participate in three exhibition games under national team coach Eckhard Krautzun of Ottawa. Of the 25 players, 22 will be selected for additional training for the Confederation of North and Central American and Caribbean Soccer Associations youth tournament to be held in Ontario in August.

WINS GOLD MEDAL

LE GRAND BORNAND, France (Reuter) – Lorna Marber of Calgary won the gold medal Wednesday in the 2.5-kilometre women's cross country event at the world ski championships in the physically handicapped with a time of 21 minutes 56.86 seconds.

Hay to the Rescue

At the other end of the ice, Gas House goalie Warren Hay stops close-in try by South Hasting League's forward Neil Wannamaker. Hay split goaltending duties with Vern Whalen and the two came through with some solid puck stopping as their all-star squad posted a convincing 10-3 win.

Go-go Gas House Piles Up Goals

TRENTON — An all-star aggregation from Belleville's Gas House Hockey League didn't know what to expect before taking to the ice at the Community Gardens here Wednesday night.

Matched against an all-star squad representing the South Hastings Hockey League which is based in Trenton, the Belleville skaters felt they were facing an unknown quantity.

The same was true of the Bus Tickets Are On Sale

The Belleville Bobcats Booster Club has laid on a bus for Sunday's Metro Junior B Hockey League playoff game in Bramalea. A spokesman for the club said this morning bus tickets would be available from noon today, at McKnight's Variety.

Fans will no longer be able to reserve tickets for these trips for out of town games. Tickets must be paid for when they are picked up.

The bus will leave Sunday at 5 p.m. Tickets are selling for $5 each. Bus tickets for next Wednesday's game in Bramalea will go on sale at McKnights Monday morning. Deadline for picking up tickets is closing time Tuesday night, at McKnight's.

South Hastings League selects. They too approached the exhibition match without the benefit of scouting reports.

But the Gas House stars, led by a front line unit from the Mead Johnson team, first place finisher and undefeated during regular season play, didn't waste much time asserting their authority.

Final score in the contest was 10-3. The losers counted just once in each period. They were expected to do much better, but were obviously the victims of an off night and a go-go-go performance by the visitors.

Belleville outscored the home side 3-1, 2-1 and 5-1 by periods.

The Ray Summers - Ron Fuller-Bob Mulvihill forward line accounted for 11 points for an excellent night's work. Ray had two goals and two assists while Ron had one and three, and Bob, two and one.

Fraser and O'Neil's Wayne McCreedy was another two-goal shooter for the winners. Carl Boomhower (Golden Mile Restaurant), Hyalie Bryant (Belleville Generals) and Mike Goegan (Meads) had the other Gas House goals.

Moore Business Form's winger Wayne DeMille was a two-goal man for the losers.

Bryant Gets Rude Welcome

Hyalie Bryant has more than his hands full here. A member of the Belleville Gas House League all-stars, Hyalie watches South Hastings League goaltender Dennis Orr make stick save. Applying the hook to Bryant, is Orr's teammate, defenceman Carey Webb.

Junior B Playoff Dates

The remaining dates for the Blues Metro Junior B playoff series have been announced by general manager of the Cats, Jim Snipe' Matthews.

The series will open here Friday night at the Memorial Arena, with the second game back in Bramalea Sunday evening.

The third game in the set will also be played in Bramalea, next Wednesday night, with game time for both set for 8.15.

The series will return to Belleville for the fourth game next Friday night, with game time 8 p.m.

If further games are necessary, they will be played in Bramalea Sunday, the 24th, in Belleville Tuesday the 26th, and in Bramalea Wednesday the 27th.

It was reported in The Intelligencer yesterday that the Cats had received the extra home game, due to their higher standing in the Metro group, but due to a foul up at OHA offices between the OHA and the Metro league, Bramalea has received the extra game.

The foul up occurred at the beginning of the season, when a move was made to divide the league into two groups, east and west. The move was defeated, but the decision was not registered with the OHA. The OHA says there were two groups, and that the Cats won the first group, and the Blues the second. By this reasoning, a flip of a coin was needed to decide the situation with the extra home game, with Bramalea winning the toss.

In other news from the Cats' camp, Norm Jones has left the team and gone home to Sudbury. He apparently was disenchanted with the ice time he got in Sunday's game with Pickering. The team's third highest scorer, with 70 points on 23 goals and 47 assists he left after the game.

Bruce Clark, who was injured in the third game of the semi-final series with Pickering, is scheduled for an eye examination today, with the results telling the story of further play this season.

Brian Marsh of the Quaker Oats squad had the other tally.

The winners got great work from the defence pairings to go with solid efforts turned in by goaltenders Vern Whalen (Meads) and Warren Hay (The Intelligencer).

Splitting the goaltending chores for the SHHL team were Bata's Dennis Orr and Continental Can's Brian Branscombe. Both found themselves unprotected much of the time.

First Rate Teams for Tourney

By MIKE BRADSHAW
Sports Staff

Beginning Friday March 29, one of the more highly rated peewee hockey tournaments in Ontario will commence in Belleville.

For 3 days top notch "AA" and "AAA" teams from across the province will participate in the 12th Annual Belleville Peewee Shrine Tournament. From the way the event is shaping up, the number 13 will be far from unlucky.

"Everything is running smoothly," says tournament director, Don Gowsy, "and I feel it's going to be the best tournament we've ever had."

Most of the 16 teams involved have already won at least one tournament this season and have finished on top or near the top of their respective divisions.

Along with seeing a high calibre of hockey over the three days the teams will play, and some excellently disciplined hockey clubs, spectators will have an opportunity to get a look at some future stars of professional hockey.

Bramalea Consols is just one of the clubs entered in the competition and the Consols are by no means going to be an easy team to reckon with.

"During the regular season they finished first in their 10-team division with 32 wins, one less and one tie.

"We don't really have any super-stars on the team," comments Bramalea coach, Ed Sienkiewski, "we just have a well balanced offense with a big, strong defence."

Out of 44 games this season — including exhibition and tournaments — the Consols have lost just six. The team's top scorer, Mike Denton, has totalled 50 goals and 25 assists during that time and the team has scored 253 goals and only allowed 82 against.

Prior to entering the Belleville tournament, Bramalea won their Regional Silver Stick and went all the way to the semi-final round of the Fort Huron National Silver Stick Tournament.

Another hockey club which will be a tough competitor in the tournament is Brantford.

The team is led by young Wayne Gretzky who is rated as the best peewee hockey player in Ontario.

Gretzky has been described by some hockey authorities as the future Bobby Orr, while others have said he has the combined talents of "Gordie Howe, Bobby Hull and Orr."

In 48 games this season, Wayne has scored 174 goals. Brantford's total offensive output in that time is 367 goals.

A second player the opposition will have to watch out for in Brantford's lineup is Len Hachbourn. Len scored 71 times in 48 games.

The team finished second in their division and out of all their games to date (48) they have just 10 losses.

A surprise in the tournament could very well be the Kingston entry.

They finished third in their division and "we've been improving steadily of late," observes team manager Peter Kruys.

"We only had one line that was really clicking at the first of the season," added Kruys, "but a while ago we picked up another centre for our second line and now it's starting to move. Our third line has just started getting into the swing of things so that, comparatively speaking, we've got a club with a fair amount of depth."

The Kingston team is led offensively by Kerd Pierson, a big 5'10" right winger.

In the Oshawa peewee tournament the Kingston Club lost in the semi-final round and at the Quebec International they were beaten out in the quarter-finals.

Returning to defend their title, is last year's Grand Champion, Don Mills Flyers.

The Flyers finished first in their division in Toronto with 31 wins and nine losses.

"Nobody thought we were going to get anywhere this season," said Flyers manager, Fred Banner, "we only have four players from last year's club. What we added up doing was taking a lot of the rejects from other teams and from that we've built a very strong unit."

Right now they are participating in the city finals of the Metro Toronto Hockey League.

At the Quebec International the Flyers were beaten out in the semi-final round.

"There are no stars on our team," added Banner, "as a matter of fact our highest scorer, Kevin Conner, only has 40 points. What it amounts to is a solid team effort."

Raiders Stalled

TRENTON — The Peewee Raiders of Trenton's representative in the Ontario Minor Hockey Association major AA quarter-finals, were stalled in their bid for a berth in the semi-finals here, Wednesday night.

Needing only one more win to take the best of five set with Cobourg, Raiders couldn't pull it off.

Richard Tryon's goal with less than three minutes remaining in a 10-minute overtime period, broke up a 2-2 struggle and kept Cobourg's hopes alive.

Tryon's blast from the blueline was the only score of the game. Ralph Lewis got the puck to Tryon for the important goal.

The teams resume the series in Cobourg Friday night at 8:15. If a fifth game is necessary, it will be played at the Community Gardens here, Sunday, at 4:45 p.m.

Trenton Solid In Defeat

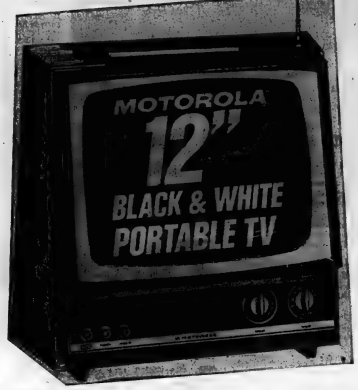
BAY RIDGES (Special) — Trenton Loyalist Coach Lines minor peewees bowed out of Ontario Minor Hockey Association quarter-final playoffs here Wednesday night. But the team drew raves from observers, even in defeat.

Bay Ridges scored a 5-2 home ice win to sweep the series in two straight games. The winners came through with four consecutive goals to wrap it up after Trenton had opened up a 2-1 lead in the first period.

Said Ken Stafford, manager of the Trenton squad, "There's no way I can be anything but proud of our kids. They were great."

Stafford singled out goaltenders Alan Marchand and Phil Dunkley for special praise.

"Even the Bay Ridges fans were applauding our goalies for the saves they were coming up with," said Stafford.



While the Trenton team's spokesman was lauding the efforts of his skaters, he also took time out to put in a word for the game officials. In his opinion, the officials in charge of the game were "just great".

Dave Freetz, Kyle Shore, Mike Costello, Derek Erickson and Joe Vernoy took care of the Bay Ridges scoring.

Replying for Trenton were Marko Turcotte and Doug Baird.

The season is not over for the Loyalist Coach Lines team, however. The club has two tournament dates coming up.

Aaron Finding Range, Slugs First Homer

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Spring training appears to be progressing normally for Henry Aaron. He hit a home run in his second at bat of the exhibition baseball season.

Aaron struck out in his only appearance against New York Yankees Tuesday, but appeared to James Henry Richard Hitch over the left field wall for two runs in the first inning of Atlanta's 9-3 victory Wednesday over Houston Astros.

Aaron also had a single in two other trips to the plate before leaving in the fifth inning officially, he still trails Babe Ruth's regular-season record of 714 home runs by one.

The Braves won the game in the ninth when Mike Lum walked with the bases loaded.

In other exhibition games, Cincinnati Reds topped Chicago White Sox 3-1, St. Louis Cardinals trounced Los Angeles Dodgers 6-4, Montreal Expos defeated New York Mets 6-3, Detroit Tigers downed Pittsburgh Pirates 8-2, Chicago Cubs edged San Francisco Giants 5-4, San Diego Padres stopped Milwaukee Brewers 7-6, New York Yankees defeated Baltimore Orioles 10-3 in eight innings, Boston Red Sox dropped Minnesota Twins 7-3, Kansas City Royals pounded Texas Rangers 13-3, and California Angels defeated Oakland As 7-2.

Ted Simmons and Ken Reitz hit home runs for the Cardinals over Los Angeles.

Thurman Munson had four hits—including a home run—while Bill Sudakis drove in five runs for the Yankees against Baltimore.

John Mayberry contributed four RBI, on a home run and three singles, to the Kansas City triumph over the Rangers.

Orlando Cepeda and Carl Yastrzemski hit two-run homers to spark Boston's sixth win in seven exhibition games. Joe Lis hit a two-run homer for the Twins.

The Reds beat the White Sox on Merv Rettenmund's sacrifice fly, which scored Dan Driessen in the fourth inning.

Cubs third baseman Bill Madlock raised his batting average for the spring to .412 with two singles, while Jerry Morales and Billy Williams had three hits each against the Giants.

A three-run, eighth-inning homer by San Diego catcher Bob Davis led the Padres past Milwaukee.

Sandy Alomar broke a 2-2 tie with a double and Rudy Meoli socked a two-run single in the Angels' victory over Oakland.

Rookie catcher Barry Foote doubled in two runs for Montreal, with Ron Hunt and Bob Bailey driving in the others. Ted Martinez and John Milner drove in the New York runs.

The Tigers had 17 hits, with Gary Sutherland clashing three doubles and a single against the Pirates.

In a B squad game, Cincinnati Reds defeated Philadelphia Phillies 6-1.

Canadians Sidelined

CALGARY (CP) — Tony Bardsley of Vancouver had difficulty with Ole Brunborg Wednesday, the second full day of the $25,000 Canadian indoor tennis championships, and was sidelined in both singles and doubles.

In a first-round doubles match, Bardsley and Lars Myntsson of Denmark beat 7-6, 7-6 to Charlie Owens of Bridlington, Ont., and Vitas Gerulaitis of New York.

Later, Bardsley bowed 6-2, 7-6 in singles to eighth-seeded Ian Crookenden of New Zealand.

The New Zealander faded late in the contest but had enough left to overcome a 6-4 deadlock.

In doubles, Owens and Gerulaitis had little difficulty winning consecutive tie-breakers.

The only other Canadian entered here, Chris Burr of Toronto, was sidelined.

Defeated by Nick Kalo of Greens Tuesday in a first-round singles match, Burr and Christos Kokotos of West Germany beat 3-6, 6-1, 6-3 in first-round doubles to Syd Ball and Bob O'Brian of Australia.

The day was marked by one major upset each in singles and doubles.

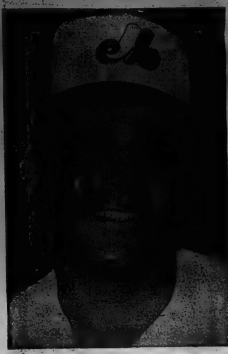
Ivan Molina and Hairo Velasco of Colombia surprised Kalo and Jaime Pinto-Bravo of Chile 3-6, 6-3, 6-3, in doubles. But Molina was less fortunate in individual play.

Seeded sixth, the Davis Cup veteran was eliminated 6-3, 6-3 by John Feaver of Britain in first-round singles.

In other first-round singles matches, Frantisek Pala of Czechoslovakia downed Kjell Johansson of Sweden 6-3, 6-4, Jose Higueras of Spain defeated Kohske 3-6, 6-4, 7-5, Kim Warwick of Australia flattened Teresa Ortal of Romania 6-3, 6-1, and Gerulaitis topped Robert Machan of Hungary 6-3, 6-2.

In doubles, Warwick and Kane Kary of Austria downed Crookenden and Jeff Simpson of New Zealand 7-6, 6-1, Higueras and Jose Morena of Spain beat Johansson and Tenny Svensson of Sweden 6-7, 7-6, 6-1, and topseeded Karl Meiler and Jurgen Fassbender of West Germany squaled in a 6-4, 6-4 triumph over Pala and countryman Jan Kuecky.

And Then Along Came The Braves



BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Just when Hershey Bears appeared to be pulling away from the pack in the American Hockey League South Division, they stumbled on Boston Braves Wednesday night.

The Braves also ran in the North Division, upset the Bears 5-4. That cut Hershey's lead to four points over Baltimore Clippers, who moved into second place with a 5-4 win against Virginia Red Wings.

Second-period goals by Ron Anderson, Doug Gibson and Norm Stirling put the Braves in charge, giving them a 3-3 lead.

Stoneman Confident

Bill Stoneman – Feels Great

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (CP) — Remember Bill Stoneman? Remember the lanky 6'5" right-hander who was once considered the top starter for Montreal Expos in their early years in baseball's National league?

Remember Stoneman's two no-hit efforts—in 1969 against Philadelphia Phillies and 1972 against New York Mets?

Well, Bill Stoneman would like you to remember him as the good pitcher and hopes that he can put behind him what the 1973 season—his worst with the Expos.

Stoneman, who was a holdout last spring, had a horrible year in 1973, finishing the season with a 4-8 won-lost record and the sizeable earned-run average of 6.77.

But Stoneman is back this season trying to earn his way in the starting rotation. And he feels confident about his chances.

"I feel that I'm good enough to make the starting rotation," said Stoneman, who has a 53-77 lifetime mark with the Expos. "Right now, I feel great. I think I can win a job and I won't be a case of someone losing that's. I think I can win the job on my own merit."

Stoneman reported to training camp March 1 last year, nine days later than the other pitchers and the catchers. He found himself trying to catch up during the camp and then, one day, he threw a pitch that damaged his arm for the season.

"I felt like a muscle tear and then it developed a case of tendonitis," he said.

He was placed on the disabled list March 26 and spent the month of April trying to get his arm back into shape.

Gail Goodrich Good Enough

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"Gail Goodrich is just a great offensive player," said Los Angeles coach Bill Sharman after the Lakers beat Philadelphia 76ers 121-109 in the National Basketball Association Wednesday night. "And he's the only starter who has been in every game this year."

Goodrich scored 36 points to guide Los Angeles to its 11th victory in its last 13 games.

Elsewhere, Boston Celtics downed Phoenix Suns 104-97 and Houston Rockets dumped Capital Bullets 117-93.

In the American Basketball Association, New York Nets beat Utah Stars 97-79, Kentucky Colonels lost 103-93 loss to Indiana Pacers, San Antonio Spurs nipped Denver Rockets 131-126 in overtime, and San Diego Conquistadors beat Virginia Squires 123-103.

BIRTHS

KIMBERLEY — Ronald and Darlene (nee Holden) are proud to announce the birth of their daughter, baby boy, born Joel, weighing 7 lbs. 10 ozs., on Tuesday, March 12, 1974 in the Belleville General Hospital.

SCAIFE — Hayrod and Carolyn (nee Foxcall) are pleased to announce the birth of their daughter, Tammy Dianne, born on Saturday, March 2, 1974 at the Belleville General Hospital. Many thanks to Dr. Parkin, Dr. Ahern and nurses on 3-B, Peel.

IN MEMORIAM

GREGG — In fond and loving memory of our dear mother, Mrs. Lorraine (Gertie) Gregg, who passed away March 14, 1971.

Gone is the face we loved so dear,
Silent is the voice we loved to hear,
We sit and weep for eight or seven,
But not, by far the thought be seven.
Sadly missed and never forgotten
Dear mother of us all.
Always loved and remembered
Wayne, Valerie, Dale and Cheryl.

WOODCOCK — In loving memory of a dear wife and mother, Bessie Woodcock who passed away March 14, 1971.

Sweetly sleeping, calm and still,
The world's weary troubles and cares.
Peaceful rest,
Her sufferings suffered, in patience on earth below,
Till God called her home to suffer no more.
Sadly remembered by husband Harry and son Jim and Vanessa and Frank and Emily.

KINSEY — In loving memory of our dear son and brother, Ronald Gordon Kinsey who passed away so silently, March 14, 1971.

Sleep on dear Ronald, sleep in peace,
Your work is done, your rest has come,
God has him in His keeping,
We have him in our memory.
Lovingly remembered by Mother, Dad, Dorothy, Gordon, Richard and Debbie.

GREGG — In loving memory of a dear brother and uncle Gerald Norman (Gerry) who passed away March 14th, 1971.

We often think of Gerry today,
When we were all together,
And how he loved to be with us,
But now he's gone and we must carry on,
To us, he has not gone away,
For he is in our memory.
Just sleeping God's eternal keep.
Sadly missed by Mom, Dad, Mabel, Shen and Todd.

GREGG — In loving memory of a dear brother and uncle Gerald Norman (Gerry) who passed away March 14th, 1971.

Time has not dimmed, his sadness kills,
A generous hand and an active mind.
Always to please, both in action and mind,
Always a friend indeed.
Always loved and remembered
Wayne, Valerie, Dale and Cheryl.

CARD OF THANKS

I would like to thank all the people who sent me cards, flowers, presents and visits during my recent mother and grandmother visits to the hospital. Also a special thanks to Rev. Ray Parker for his counselling, Dr. Ahern for his attention to my mother, and the nurses on the 3rd floor for the special service they gave to the people in their care. Also to the Belleville Secondary School Staff and the Hospital Wing of Hastings Manor for their gifts and cards. Thanks to all of kindness while in hospital and since my return home. Ed Hicks and family.

We wish to express our sincere thanks to everyone in the recent death of our dear husband, father Roy Morgan and kindness shown to us during his illness and at the time of his death. Also for the lovely floral tributes and for the staff in Belleville General Hospital, Dr. Ahern and Dr. Parkin and Dr. Macintosh. Thanks to minister Rev. Ray Parker for his services and to the pallbearers and to all those who sent cards or kindness while in hospital and since his return home. Mrs. Roy Morgan and family, Mr. John Morgan and family, Mr. Jack Morgan and family, Mrs. Ethel Morgan and family, Mrs. Thomas and all the Morgan family, Mrs. Louise Morgan, John Morgan and family.

Words cannot express our deepest thanks for the many kindnesses shown to us during the illness of Mrs. Allen and Doctor Berry, also all the nurses and staff on the 3rd floor who were so wonderful. Also Rev. Ray Parker for his visits and prayers while he was in the hospital and for his song. We thank you all sincerely.

The Cassidy family, Maud Cochrane, Wm. Allen.

I wish to thank friends, neighbours and relatives for cards, flowers and gifts sent while a patient in Belleville General Hospital. Also special thanks to Dr. Ahern, Harry and Mackenzie, and the nurses on 3-B, Peel. Mrs. Mark Hagerman.

Jean Sagerson.

CARDS OF THANKS

We would like to express our heartfelt thanks to all who sent cards, telephone calls and gifts on the occasion of our Golden Wedding anniversary. Special thanks to Rev. Ray Parker for his visits and prayers. We will always remember all of our kindness and helped to say "Yes" to our 50 years of marriage. Fred and Mary Hagerman.

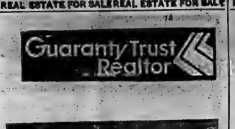
SHAWANO'S TOPS FOR INVESTMENT

In today's skyrocketing prices, Shawano is an outstanding investment.

Many lot owners have seen the value of their land increase by 100% or more.

Buying a lot at Shawano is an investment better investment than ever before for three reasons.

1. Lots are in summer resort area of recreational land. Two, sale of every kind of cottages is unbelievable. Three provincial planning regulations have restricted strictly development. You can still buy a big ¼ acre lakefront lot at Shawano for $6,500 with 10% down and excellent financing.



Shawano is the beautiful 1,900 acre wilderness recreational area in the historic Highlands of Hastings, 32 scenic miles north of Madoc via Highway 62. Marvelous swimming, boating and fishing.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED WANT AD

Be clear. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, or detailed information.
Make it easy for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always insert your telephone number or complete address. Readers like to call or write for more information to have prospects call you.
Tell your best selling points and ask yourself what you would like to know if you were a reader-prospect. Then put it all into a good Classified ad.
Don't Ask Yes/No! In brief solicitation do so, not through any lack of confidence, but because they do not contain enough information to be readerable.
The Greatest Reader Interest is secured for your advertisement by running consecutive insertions. You can vary your ad in the event of a change but use the same copy day after day if it pulls. There are also very special rates for those who are desirous of keeping their name or offer before the public every day.

HOW TO PLACE YOUR CLASSIFIED AD

BY TELEPHONE
DIAL 962-9171

DEADLINES

Copy for all regular Classified ads is P.M. the day before, cancellations and corrections are accepted until 9:30 the same day excepting Saturday when 11 A.M. is the deadline for all ads.
Deadline for Sold Display Real Estate Classified Ads is 4 P.M. 3 days before scheduled publication.

Your Horoscope

By BERENICE BEDE OSOL

Friday, March 15

Aries (March 21-April 19) You are apt to be less open and less set than normal today. Because you are hiding something, a problem will result.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Old obligations will present themselves now if they have been neglected or overlooked. Be current on bills and taxes.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) Though it is frustrating and you feel it inconvenient you at this time, keep faith with one whom you've pledged your word.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) Your day won't be your own to do with as you'd please, so be prepared. Outside demands will bring extra responsibilities.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) Be careful today you are not caught in the middle of an awkward situation involving two friends. You will solve nothing by butting in.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Unless you bend over backward to try to please it is not likely you will find peace and harmony at home today.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You will respond poorly to others' directives given today by the lunar type. Co-workers can be the problem.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) This is one of those days when you will manage your resources wisely and at the same time show signs of selfishness.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Due to domestic demands, today offers its frustrations. Your freedom and independence will be curtailed considerably.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You will resent being left on your own to take care of a problem today that another should have handled.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) It's not wise at this time to buy products you are not familiar with. Wait till one who knows can advise you.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) Lend by example if you plan to direct others today, but be very sure the example you set is one they find admirable.

POPULATION UP

Australia's population stood at 13,195,000 last September, up 168,800 during the previous 12 months.

Auctioneer Finds Phlegm Handicap

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am an auctioneer with a voice problem. I have trouble with phlegm coming into my throat all the time. It does not seem to matter what I eat, but from the time I get up in the morning it continues all day.

When I auction before the microphone it is very annoying to my customers. My career is on the line. I hope you can help me.

I talked to several doctors about this but they have no suggestions.—A.T.

Several possibilities, but the first is smoking. If you smoke, stop. There probably is no other answer for that.

Next comes physical changes from long and harsh use of the voice, and singers and loud orators are known to have such problems.

You say you have "talked to several doctors" but you make no mention of having a throat examination. (You'd be wise to see a specialist.)

The vocal cords should be checked specifically for such things as thickening of the cords, leukoplakia (white, film-like spots), or formation of nodules.

Whichever the basic cause may be, the excess of phlegm means irritation from some source. I doubt that what you eat has any effect; milk, ice cream and very sweet foods can cause mucus, but only for a very short time after eating.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My doctor has diagnosed the pain and swelling in my two fingers' joints as pre-menopausal osteoarthritis. I am 37.

Can I expect this in all my good.)

MacDuff, the best golfer in Scotland, looked over dummy carefully and remarked to MacBeth, the dummy. "Your friends the witches must have told you this is the time to overtid. Fortunately, I have a lot of extra tallies and we may score out all right."

At first glance it looks as if the s'am depends on a successful heart finesse. MacDuff had not on this, but he suspected the finesse would be wrong. His plan was to make the hard way. Look over the hand carefully and see if you can figure out how he handled it.

CLUE: Synge. MacDuff used a dummy reversal. At trick two he ruffed one of dummy's s ... when he played two rounds of trumps stopping in dumm... ... for this was to guard against the possibility of a 4-1 trump break.

Trumps broke 3-2 so he proceeded to ruff another spade with his next to last trump, over to dummy with a diamond to ruff the last spade with his last trump. Back to dummy with the second diamond to ruff dummy's last trump.

This drew the last trump and gave him a chance to duck his nine of hearts. The ace of hearts and three diamonds took the rest of the tricks.

Millhaven Guards Are Backed

KINGSTON (CP) — A meeting by 250 Kingston-area prison guards was held Wednesday to discuss recent trouble at Millhaven penitentiary.

A spokesman for the guards said the meeting lasted about two hours and that guards from other institutions decided to support the Millhaven guards in their refusal to work overtime.

The meeting followed sessions this week with the Public Service Alliance of Canada and prison authorities.

The Millhaven guards apparently are upset over a recent scuffle between an official of a newly-formed prisoners' committee and a Millhaven guard.

Sugar Cheaper But Beware Of Substitutes

TORONTO (CP) — Although Canadian consumers are paying more for sugar than their counterparts in the United States, they should be careful about hunting for bargains in the U.S., M. W. Davidson, vice-president of Redpath Sugars Ltd., said in an interview Wednesday.

Mr. Davidson said a Buffalo, N.Y., store this week offered a four-pound bag for 79 cents of a product that looks like sugar but is a blend of pure sugar cane and dextrose, a corn derivative. He said the product is not allowed in Canada.

"I think it's deceiving the myopic housewife who can't read the small type on the packages," he said. "To me it's like mixing butter and margarine."

In Buffalo Wednesday the price of a 10-pound bag of granulated pure cane sugar was $1.89 while the same amount sold in Toronto for $2.99.

Not Guilty

TORONTO (CP) — A Supreme Court jury that deliberated for 7½ hours Wednesday found John McBeth Finlayson, 36, not guilty by reason of insanity of the non-capital murder of Kirk Dreyer, 9, whose body was found July 27 in a hotel room.

Mr. Justice Lloyd Houlden remanded Finlayson in custody pending his removal to the Mental Health Centre at Penetanguishene, Ont.

Gets Apology

TORONTO (CP) — Edward C. Banfield, a University of Pennsylvania political science professor whose lectures here were disrupted by students, received a written apology Wednesday from President John Evans of the University of Toronto.

Rights Denied

OTTAWA (CP) The Soviet Union and other Communist states preach democracy in the United Nations but deny it to their own citizens, T. E. Evenbergs, president of the Baltic Federation of Canada, said Wednesday night.

"The Communists give lip service to freedom . . . but have denied basic human rights to millions of their people," he told a group of MPs, senators and other guests of the federation at a dinner in the Parliament Buildings.

No Amnesty

WASHINGTON (AP) The chairman of a Congressional inquiry on the subject says he doubts amnesty for Vietnam war deserters and draft evaders will be enacted in the United States this year.

"Three days of hearings have shown grave differences over the issue," Rep. Robert Kastenmeier (Dem. Wis.) said in an interview. "I just don't think we're close to resolving it, that's all."

36 Killed

BISHOP, Calif. (AP) — A twin-engine chartered airplane carrying a television film crew smashed into a mountainside in the rugged eastern Sierra, killing all 36 persons aboard, officials said today.

'Violent Movements' Made as Gas Used

SUDBURY (CP) Gervais Albert made occasional "violent movements" in reaction to a respirator in the emergency department in a new wing at Sudbury General Hospital, a coroner's jury was told Wednesday.

Dr. John Shortridge, who noticed the movements, said he thought they may have been the result of a lightened state of consciousness.

Mr. Albert, 75, was treated in the emergency unit July 27 after he was found lying unconscious on the floor of his Sudbury apartment. He died three days later.

He was given medical gas from an oxygen wall outlet in the emergency treatment centre shortly after his arrival at the hospital.

The outlet was found to be emitting the anesthetic nitrous oxide when a cigars-over of medical gas pipes was discovered less than two months later.

Mr. Albert's death is one of 23 at the hospital being investigated at the inquest, now in its ninth week.

An ambulance attendant testified Mr. Albert was not breathing when he arrived at his apartment. Oxygen was applied in the ambulance and his skin color improved slightly, the attendant said.

Dr. Shortridge said Mr. Albert was ventilated by the respirator for about 25 minutes and although his color improved slightly, "I felt he was gravely ill and probably would not survive."

No autopsy was performed on Mr. Albert although Dr. Sturridge said the procedure might have been of assistance.

Nixon Fund Trustees Will Assist Acquitted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Trustees of President Nixon's leftover campaign funds have decided to pay legal fees and expenses for former officials acquitted of criminal charges and possibly for those found guilty of misdemeanors.

One of the largest beneficiaries of the decision could be one of the trustees—former secretary of commerce Maurice Stans, who is on trial in New York on federal charges of criminal conspiracy, perjury and obstruction of justice.

Stans, reported to have spent more than $500,000 for legal fees, participated in the trustees' decision, according to one of the other trustees.

Stans was finance director of the Nixon campaign. He is on trial along with former attorney general John Mitchell in a case arising from a secret $200,000 campaign contribution.

Mitchell, political chief of the Nixon campaign for several months in 1972, also could be a major beneficiary of the trustees' decision if he is acquitted in the New York trial and of criminal charges filed in the Watergate cover-up in Washington.

Needs of Aged Not Satisfied Claims Liberal

TORONTO (CP) — Opposition Leader Robert Nixon said Wednesday "it is appalling that Ontario has not implemented programs to satisfy the needs of people over 65 years of age.

Speaking at a centre for elderly people, Mr. Nixon said the government should change its priorities.

The provincial government, he said, could only find a single payment of $200 for pensioners but could pay $17 million for an untried, experimental transit system.

The Liberal leader said studies have indicated that many problems facing the elderly could be solved with a sufficient income.

His party, he said, would supply a minimum income of $218 a month for pensioners.

Some Exempt

HAMILTON (CP) Future government policy on the mandatory use of seatbelts will have to exempt some drivers, an official of the ministry of transportation and communications said Wednesday.

Doug Farren, director of the systems research branch said: "It would be ridiculous to enforce something of this nature for milk men."

No Fraud

TORONTO (CP) Police said Wednesday they had not found any evidence of fraud in connection with a reported cancellation of a student trip to Spain.

Stanley Monday, president of Cardinal Travel Ltd., said a flight scheduled for Friday had been cancelled by Iberia Airlines of Spain but that no reason had been given.

He said he has returned certified cheques for $220 of the $370-package deal to each student with a letter promising the remaining $140 in about 10 days.

Five-year Federal Program Will Test Urban Projects

OTTAWA (CP) A $100-million fund for a five-year urban demonstration program was announced by Urban Affairs Minister Ron Basford Wednesday.

He told the Commons the fund will operate between the 1975-76 and the 1980-81 fiscal years and will back demonstration programs in such areas as housing, sewage treatment recycling, public transportation and financing new communities.

The program was immediately attacked by opposition spokesmen as a joke and an insult.

Conservative, New Democratic and Social Credit housing critics said the money should be spent on providing more housing.

"We have been researched to death," said Ed Broadbent (NDP-Oshawa-Whitby).

Mr. Basford also said Dr. Kenneth Hare, professor of geography and physics at the University of Toronto, will head a nine-man advisory committee for the program.

The money will support federal, provincial and municipal pilot projects on urban problems as well as proposals suggested by private industry, the minister said.

"I would hope that over the five years we can translate this initial $100 million into innovative projects valued at many times that figure," Mr. Basford said.

The minister said that all regions will get a fair share of the benefits from the fund and demonstration program.

Project proposals will be screened by Dr. Hare's advisory committee which will advise the minister on the potential of individual projects to help in solving urban problems, Mr. Basford said.

An urban affairs background paper says that projects may include new technologies for such things as waste disposal and energy conservation or outline new policies such as changes in municipal government structure.

The project's must meet certain guides:

—They must solve specific problems rather than describing them;

—They must illustrate a new approach to problems;

—They must fit into the physical, economic, social and cultural needs of the area;

Conservative housing critic Elden Woolliams (Calgary North) said the program "is a lot of fluff." The minister must have been "sniffing glue."

Mr. Broadbent said the program "involves the wrong spending at the wrong time and in the completely wrong area." The $100 million was money down the drain. ..

Pollution Controls Coming

OTTAWA (CP) — Environmental committee has had a chance to study the impact of various industries upon the environment.

Part of the committee's job will be to look at the latest working technology," Mr. David said. "There are plants working and making money cleanly."

This was his answer to industries that say they cannot meet tougher pollution laws and at least 1976 when a federal-pro- reveals in business.

Budget Will Attack Inflation

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau refused Wednesday to announce the date of the next federal budget but said it will attack inflation, and deal with a series of other problems.

Pleading a flood of Commons questions on the latest rise in the consumer price index, announced earlier Wednesday, he said 69 per cent of the rise is caused by increased food prices and half of that portion by higher beef prices.

He told Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield that a new report is due next week from the food prices review board and it will cover increased beef costs. He hoped it would clarify matters.

"I don't think it is very gallant of the prime minister to try and hide behind Mrs. Plumptre," Mr. Stanfield replied, a reference to board chairman Beryl Plumptre.

Mr. Stanfield said inflation is running through all sectors of the economy. He asked whether the government will announce new measures to fight it.

Statistics Canada reported Wednesday that the cost of living jumped one per cent in February, a faster rate of increase than the 0.1 per cent recorded for all last year.

David Lewis, New Democratic Party leader, urged legislation to give the food prices review board power to rollback unjustified price increases. The agency now operates in an advisory capacity to the government.

George Hees (PC—Prince Edward—Hastings) asked if the government will take measures to help workers regain losses from the declining purchasing power of the dollar. Mr. Trudeau replied that disposable income has risen by more than six per cent in the last year.

Complaints Received Of Hard-sell Tactics

TORONTO (CP) — John Clement, minister of consumer and commercial relations, said Wednesday the province is receiving an increasing number of complaints about hard-sell distribution companies.

In a statement, the minister said the complaints are from persons "who have been bilked by high-pressure sales and promises of substantial returns for investment."

All complaints so far, he said, are regarding United States companies that "come in, have an evangelical meeting, get everybody enthused and signing contracts, then leave."

He said one such firm sold television sets worth about $20 for $40 to $500.

Another complaint came from a man who spent $4,500 to buy and distribute electric wall games, but because of poor quality and unsatisfactory location, has made only $40 in six months.

Donald Gourly, registrar of the ministry's consumer protection service, said he has received 77 complaints about firms in three years.

The minister said it is up to the potential buyer to beware because the contracts are legally binding and do not allow cancellation or guarantees.

Morris Dancing Village Pastime

THAXTED, England (CP) — Although its origins go back to pagan times, Morris dancing still thrives in many English villages.

Originally, the dance was connected with fertility rites but through the centuries it became a form of communal entertainment.

Some authorities say it first appeared in England during the Crusades and others that the soldiers returning home from France during the Hundred Years' War (1338-1453) took it to England and that it originated in France, Flanders or Spain.

Because Morris dancers sometimes blackened their faces, and some still do, it was thought that the name Morris might be a corruption of the word Moorish, although the dance was known before the Moors came to Spain.

The blackening of faces probably followed an ancient tradition which kept the identities of the dancers secret for superstitious reasons. But wherever the Morris dance came from, it is a popular entertainment in England and there are numerous annual festivals, favorite dates being Whitsun and May Day.

There are usually eight dancers, all men, in a "side" or team and they dance to traditional music supplied by an accordion and fiddle or a pipe and tabor. Traditional Morris characters, who do not take part in the dancing but amuse the crowd, are the Fool and the Hobby Horse. During the 19th century such characters as Robin Hood and Maid Marian found their way into the tradition. A Bagman collects coins and these donations are supposed to bring luck.

The dancers wear white trousers and shirts with colorful waistcoats or braces and straw hats bearing flowers. Small bells stitched onto pieces of colored leather are bound around the dancers' lower trouser legs and jingle as they dance.

The Cotswold Hills, southwest of the English Midlands, are an important source of Morris dancing traditions. The tunes and steps vary from place to place.

It was at the village of Headington, near Oxford, that the Cotswold Morris dancing tradition was revived after a decline due to poor social conditions in the last century.

Cecil Sharp, founder of the English Folk Dance Society in 1910, had seen the Headington Morris dancers in 1899 and travelled from village to village recording the steps and music.

As a result of Sharp's work new Morris teams were formed and six of them joined to form the Morris Ring in 1934. Membership of the ring now totals almost 100 teams or clubs and many more all over the country are recognized.

Italian Mail System Only Barely Works

ROME (AP) — Italians are learning the hard way that they can survive without a mail system or with one that barely works. The situation also applies to other European countries.

Under the weight of strikes, absenteeism and over-centralization, the mail system in Italy has virtually broken down.

"Don't mail your post cards in Italy," an airline clerk advised a Swiss tourist. "Wait until you get home so you can be sure they will be delivered."

Private delivery services have sprung up in Rome, Milan and other larger cities to shuttle mail between offices, plants and banks. But this costs the sender a fee plus the 35-lire-six-cents-stamp required by the postal authority.

Some other European countries have experienced a breakdown in postal service despite rising rates and installation of costly computer sorting systems.

In Belgium, special delivery letters often move more slowly than regular mail and letters get lost. Recently thousands of meatless letters turned up at a major Brussels sorting centre. They had mysteriously found their way into an empty space between a floorboard and a double ceiling.

Although mail service in Denmark is on the whole quick and reliable, rising labor costs have forced a curtailment of some services such as afternoon delivery.

Britons grumble about slow delivery and rising postal rates with the cost of a stamp for a domestic letter rising 73 per cent in two years to 7½ cents for first class. The post office went over to computer sorting last year but there is no evidence it is speeding delivery.

In Italy the problem can be traced directly to the men who are supposed to sort or deliver the mail. As often as not they are off the job.

Absenteeism has run as high as 30 per cent this year, said Sergio Zilmi, spokesman for the ministry of posts and telecommunications. "When you walk into a mailroom and 70 men are working when there should be 20, how can you expect top mail service?"

There is little the postal ministry can do. A law adopted by the socialist-oriented government in 1970 forbids checking on alleged illnesses, which the law says, would "violate the workers' rights."

The ministry has proposed a special medical service to check health care to the 150,000 postal workers and control the absenteeism. But the unions have rejected it as an invasion of workers' privacy.

Instead they are demanding 17,000 more workers as a solution to the nation's mail problems.

The breakdown in mail service does incalculable harm to an economy already battered by endless strikes and inflation.

Business inquiries, orders and payments are delayed or never received.

Companies have to borrow money from banks to meet their monthly payrolls because bills are caught up or lost in the mails.

The private delivery services have expanded because of the crisis and some now vote the mail across the border to Switzerland for posting to addresses outside of Italy.

Tax Tips

Property Tax Credit Explained

For further information, call the District Taxation Office. If you live in a hamlet, ask your long-distance operator for ENTITE 6-4000 — your call will be placed without charge.

Q. My year of marriage was 1973 and both my spouse and myself paid rents up to the date of marriage. How should we claim the Ontario Property Tax Credit?

A. When two people marry in the year, the spouse with the higher taxable income for the year must claim the Ontario Property Tax Credit. In calculating occupancy cost the claimant may include all the following:

— rent or property taxes paid for the period of the marriage,

— his rent or property taxes for the part of the year prior to marriage and his or her spouse's rent or property taxes for the part of the year prior to marriage.

Q. My mother is receiving full-time care in a nursing home. Can she claim the costs as medical expenses?

A. Unless your mother is blind, or is confined to a bed or wheelchair, the costs for her care in the nursing home do not qualify for deduction as medical expenses.

Q. My employer states that the portion of the medicare premiums that he pays on my behalf must be included in my income. Is this correct?

A. Yes. The benefit derived from an employer's contribution to a public medicare plan is a taxable benefit, and must be reported with your other income from employment. The employer's contributions to private health services plans, such as the Blue Cross are still exempt.

Q. Do I still have to get receipts for medical expenses?

A. Yes. You still have to secure receipts for all claims for medical expenses. You may list your claim on the schedule provided with your income tax return and you must submit your receipts.

Q. Can I now claim all the premiums which I pay for medical insurance?

A. No. You may only claim as a medical expense the premiums which you pay to a non-government medical or hospital insurance plan.

Q. I have an income maintenance insurance plan and am at present receiving a disability pension from it and the benefits received are exempt from tax. Will this continue in the future?

A. Yes. If the plan was established before June 19, 1971, benefits received because of injury or sickness occuring before 1974 will be exempt from tax.

Q. I gave $20 to the United Appeal. Can I claim this as a tax deduction in addition to the standard deduction of $100?

A. No. You are entitled to claim either the standard deduction of $100 or your charitable donations and medical expenses, but not both in the same year.

Q. Can I claim dental expenses incurred at a denturist's establishment as medical expenses?

A. Yes. The only stipulation is that the denturist must be licensed.

Teachers in York Vote to Obey Bill

TORONTO (CP) — The 867 York County high school teachers who resigned Feb. 1 voted Thursday to return to classes March 25, the first day after the spring break.

The teachers, meeting in nearby Newmarket, said they will return "under duress" in anticipation of the passage of Bill 22 which imposes compulsory arbitration on them and the local board of education.

Shortly after the teachers voted, the legislature gave the bill third reading after the government beat back two opposition amendments by a vote of 53 to 30.

Education Minister Thomas Wells said in an interview later that the bill might not become law if the board and teachers could agree to voluntary arbitration, "however, I don't think that is very likely."

J. F. Wilkinson, president of the Ontario Teachers' Federation (OTF) said the decision to return to classes is "a legally responsible action" which serves the best interests of the 14,500 students in 15 schools.

But he reiterated the OTF policy of opposing compulsory arbitration.

"The problems of York County or of any other educational system cannot be satisfactorily resolved by superimposing legislative settlements," he said in a statement.

The York County teachers also said in a statement they "do not accept arbitration or the bill of legislative settlement as a satisfactory solution."

"We affirm our faith in the process of free negotiated collective bargaining and assert our right to withdraw services as a matter of principle."

They added they reserve the right "to use further sanctions to protest unfair legislation."

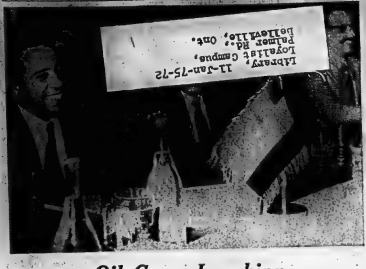
The school board voted 18 to 3 Wednesday to accept the bill.

The trustees said they felt this action would be the quickest way to get the schools open again.

The executive of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation (OSSTF) recommended Wednesday that the teachers return to work voluntarily as employees of the federation, not as employees of the school board.

The federation said such an action would allow students to resume their studies while teachers continue their fight with the board.

Both opposition parties in the legislature said the legislation wasn't necessary and that compulsory arbitration for teachers was wrong.



The house sat overtime Wednesday night to give the bill approval in principle and went through clause by clause debate Thursday.

After the bill was given final approval, Mr. Wells told reporters that both teachers and the school board would have to start building a relationship with each other again.

He said three or four years ago York County was one of the top school systems in the province but since then relationships have broken down.

"But, I think it can be rebuilt now," he said.

The teachers voted 433 to 132 to return to work and a show of hands later made the decision unanimous.

Ignorance May Become Defence in Law Courts

OTTAWA (CP) — Ignorance of the law or an honest mistake would be a defence in court for most of tens of thousands of offences now in Canadian statute books under a recommendation released Thursday.

The recommendation in a Law Reform Commission of Canada working paper adds, however, that the defendant should prove such ignorance or mistake—a reversal of the principle that the onus of proof is on the prosecution.

The paper also says that those guilty of these offences should not, generally, face prison sentences.

The recommendation would cover a vast array of offences not dealt with under the criminal Code—from traffic violations, through hunting and fishing regulations to directives of the Food and Drugs Act.

All of these so-called regulatory offences are designed to protect the people or their interests from harm but not bring an individual to justice.

The paper says all real crimes—murder, rape, burglary for example—must remain under the Criminal Code and that the necessity of proving intent to commit a crime must continue to rest on the prosecution.

But in the case of the relatively minor offences covered under other statutes, the principle of "strict liability" should be replaced by one of "due diligence."

That means that no longer would it be necessary simply to prove that an offence had been committed to get a conviction. The charged person could seek to prove he was not aware of the law or that, although an offence may have been committed, it was the result of no fault of his own.

The radical new approach to law was made by a commission charged with considering the whole structure of federal criminal law with a view to reform. Eventually the commission will make a recommendation to the federal government based both on its work and on feedback from the public.

The working paper says federal laws contain about 20,000 regulatory offences and the laws of the average provincial government cannot be satisfactorily resolved by superimposing legislative settlements," he said in a statement. The paper often mentions the possibility of punishing a man who doesn't deserve it.

"Punishment is never due to those who make mere reasonable and unavoidable mistakes. To err is human and no one can be expected to be free from error."

Portuguese 'Hawk' Now Heads Forces

LISBON (AP) — Premier Marcel Caetano has apparently ruled out major concessions to rebels in Portugal's African territories by replacing the chief-of-staff of the armed forces with a hard-line hawk.

The government announced early today that Gen. Francisco da Costa Gomes, the chief-of-staff, and his controversial deputy, Gen. Antonio de Spinola, have been relieved after failing to appear at a meeting with Caetano to swear loyalty to give a public pledge of loyalty to the government.

The government put the armed forces on the alert and confined them to barracks for the second time in a week, apparently in fear of adverse reaction from younger officers.

Gomes was replaced by Gen. Joaquim de Luz Cunha, the military commander in Angola, regarded as a firm supporter of the war against the native rebels i Angola, Mozambique and Portuguese Guinea.

Spinola's office, which was created for him when he returned a hero from duty in Portuguese Guinea, was abolished.

The situation apparently resulted from Spinola's publication of a book in which he said military victory against the African rebels cannot be won. He insisted on political solution, and Gomes apparently agreed with him.

29 Killed

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — A Danish airliner carrying 36 persons burst into flames while preparing to take off from Tehran airport today, and airport officials said 29 persons were killed.

Civil Aviation Director Hushang Arbabi said the remaining 36 persons were rescued.

Oil-consumers Approve Talks

BRUSSELS (Reuter) — Twelve major oil-consuming countries have agreed to open the way for a conference with oil producers within three months.

Senior officials and energy experts from the United States, Canada, Japan, Norway and all the European Common Market states except France ended a two-day session of the energy co-ordinating group Thursday.

The time scale of the proposed conference with the producers remains uncertain, however, because experts with the Arab oil states have yet to begin.

The meeting of the group, set up in the face of French opposition to the Washington energy conference last month, was described officially as low-key and highly technical.

The group's main aim is to clear a path for meetings between oil consumers, producers and developing countries, whose

Travel Agent Bonding Urged

TORONTO (CP) — Opposition members of the Ontario legislature demanded Thursday that travel agents be bonded.

Travel agencies after published reports that 700 students lost a holiday when a charter flight was cancelled,

John Clement, minister of consumer and commercial relations, said it would be difficult to bond travel agents but said he understood that all the students would get their money back.

Trucking On Sunday Authorized

OTTAWA (CP) — Two Winnipeg trucking firms have won permission to operate long-haul services on Sunday to points in Ontario and Quebec—a decision which might have a broad impact on the trucking industry.

The Canadian transport commission ruled in a split decision Thursday that Reimer Express Lines and Imperial Roadways should be allowed to operate on Sunday between Winnipeg, Toronto, London, Ont. and Montreal.

Commissioner Ray March, who wrote the majority decision, said denial of the application could have condemned the long-distance on-the-road trucking industry to "at best an uncertain future and at worst an early demise." He was supported by commissioner A. P. Campbell.

Lockout Advocated

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government, as an employer, should be given the right to lock out employees when it is involved in contract disputes after extensive report on public service bargaining recommends.

The report, which could be the basis for reforms of laws applying to the public federal employees, was tabled in the Commons Thursday by Allen MacEachen, privy council president.

Although cautious with their comments, officials of some public service unions contended the report prepared by Jacob Finkelman, chairman of the public service staff relations board.

The only comment about the lockout proposal came from the 143,000-member Public Service Alliance of Canada, which said it emphatically opposed the suggestion.

Quebec Plans to Make French Province's Official Language

QUEBEC (CP)—The Quebec government plans to make French the official language of the province, but how that is to be done still is not clear.

Opposition parties in the Quebec national assembly said proposals outlined in the throne speech Thursday were "too vague" to know what the government has in mind.

The big question is: What will be the "clearly defined place" for the English language among measures to establish French as the language of the law, of governments at both the provincial and municipal level and of labor negotiations?

Premier Robert Bourassa told a news conference he would not address that in the education field, the most important to the province's minority groups, no final policy had yet been taken by the caucus or cabinet.

He said the public would have to wait until legislation is presented to see if it entails repeal of the 1969 law allowing parents the right to choose the language in which their children will be instructed.

Language legislation for other areas has been presented by bill at the latest, is complete but again Mr. Bourassa refused to give details.

The Throne speech, read by Lt.-Gov. Hugues Lapointe, said that in keeping with the government's aim of cultural sovereignty, French would be made the official language thus "unequivocally affirming the determination of all Quebecers to conserve and develop the French language and culture, while consecrating moreover the French personality of Quebec within Confederation.

A French language board is to be set up to oversee the implementation of the new bill policy and to assure a permanent base for the promotion of the French language.

English Quebecers Preparing to Resist

MONTREAL (CP) — Representatives of English-language education groups said Thursday they will resist any legislation denying English-speaking Quebecers the right to use their language.

Bob Doble, secretary general of the Provincial Association of Catholic Teachers, said omission of the status of English in the speech from the throne is "just another little teaser."

Jack Johnson, president of the Provincial Association of Protestant Teachers, said he is "concerned that this destroys the concept of two official languages which we have in Canada."

Bill Miller, a lawyer who is also president of the Quebec Federation of Home and School Associations said "a very interesting legal situation" could arise later if failure to protect English could be a question of denying fundamental right.

Prisoner Committee and Old Hates Behind Millhaven Unrest

OTTAWA (CP) — A misunderstanding during a visit by Jean Vanier, son of the late Governor-General, to Millhaven penitentiary near Kingston, Ont., has developed into a situation under which guards are not reporting to work, government officials say.

Solicitor-General Warren Allmand said Thursday that disagreement between some guards and a newly-formed prisoner committee is the centre of the dispute. But he added that some of the guards' grievances go back to the Kingston penitentiary riot of 1971, he said in the dispute.

Some guards had been booking off sick since last week. The penitentiary—particularly recreational facilities—is being run on a restricted basis.

The minister told reporters that the situation at the prison is quiet but added that could change. He did not say what would happen if the guards should go on strike.

Mr. Vanier, son of George Vanier, has been interesting himself in prison matters for the last year. Recently he visited Millhaven and prisoners were given permission to meet him.

Those who did not want to participate in the meeting were penalized in such ways as loss of the institution. But Mr. Allmand and penitentiary service officials said that order did not get to all the guards.

When some prisoners turned up in one area, guards told them to get out.

Words were exchanged between some guards and J. M. Desveaux, chairman of the new committee which is designed to alleviate prison conditions with authorities.

Mr. Desveaux is reported to be an outspoken man. After the incident he was charged by some guards with prison rule infractions, such as using abusive language, but was cleared at a trial within the prison.

Mr. Allmand said some guards want to remove Mr. Desveaux as head of the committee and some dislike the whole committee.

But the minister said the chairman has agreed to obey all penitentiary guides on the operation of the committee and that he should be removed if refusals in this.

He said he has no intention of removing him from the committee if he continues to follow these guides and as long as he behaves himself.

Penitentiary officials have speculated there is more behind the dispute than the prison committee, and Mr. Allmand mentioned that many of the prisoners and some of the guards were in Kingston penitentiary during the riot of April, 1971.

Thus ill-feeling has been carried over.

In that three-day riot two prisoners were killed, 13 others injured and there was considerable destruction of property. A commission report on the riot said 86 prisoners also suffered injuries inflicted by Millhaven guards when they were transferred from Kingston.

The commission made 33 wide-ranging recommendations as a result of its investigation. Most have been implemented.

Violence Flares At Union Carbide

As the strike by Union Carbide production workers enters its fifth day, overnight and early morning incidents marred the up-to-now peacefulness of the strike.

Shortly after 8 p.m. last night, a company official from Toronto wheeled his vehicle across the picket lines set up, narrowly missing pickets on the line.

And, about 7:30 this morning, a picket missed serious injury after being thrown onto the hood and hitting the windshield of a vehicle driven by a security guard entering the lot. The windshield was cracked in the incident.

The only evidence of the situation this morning is a skid mark on the road leading into the plant and a broken car aerial lying on the ground.

But despite this setback, spirits of those on the line are good. "In fact," said United Rubber Workers, local 880 president Earl Taylor, "spirits are more than good ... more than excellent."

"There was a missed shift last night and within half an hour, we had a full crew move in. That's the way the spirits have been," said the union president.

"We're not going to harass anyone," he said. "All we're asking for is that any cars entering the grounds, slop or slow down at least.

"We don't desire violence. We want to operate a legal strike. We are curbing violence in every way we can," said Mr. Taylor.

The strike started Monday

Car Rolls Into Ditch

Two Welland, Ontario, residents escaped serious injury last night when the car in which they were travelling westbound on Highway 401 went out of control rolled over and ended in a ditch 10 miles east of Belleville.

Ivan Mercer, 37, of Welland was treated for abrasions to his left arm and released from Belleville General Hospital. His passenger, Catherine Sorensen, 36, also of Welland, was treated for injuries to her right leg and released.

A Belleville provincial police spokesman said the car went out of control after the wheels went off the paved section of the roadway onto the shoulder.

Damage to the vehicle was estimated at $500.

Hassock Stays

The leather bassock raffled off Saturday at the Cheshire Home for handicapped adults will return to the John St. home for permanent installation.

Miss Pauline Lindsay won the bassock, made by Mrs. George Weymark to raise money for furnishings for the home. However, Miss Lindsay is moving to the west coast and had already sold the furniture. So she decided to donate the bassock to the Cheshire Home for the residents' use.

DO YOU HAVE HBP?

Have you had your blood pressure checked recently? It is normal — about 120/80 reading? Is it low? High? Or do you know? It is estimated that over 22 million North Americans suffer from high blood pressure (HBP) and that half are not aware they have it — they do not see a doctor for periodic physical exams.

Since HBP develops without warning, it is considered "the silent killer" and over 250,000 people will die this year because of it. But, once diagnosed HBP can be controlled by diet or medication or both. HBP control can reduce the number and severity of premature heart attacks, strokes and kidney disease.

'Highest Settlement'

Cement Workers Get Big Contract

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — Lake Ontario Cement Company Ltd. has reached a significant contract settlement with Local 387 of the United Cement, Lime and Gypsum Workers.

The contract is a total package of $1.46 including all benefits — represents the highest settlement in the industry's history, says Stewart Norval, president of the union local.

Mr. Norval also said he thinks the contract contains the only cost-of-living clause in the cement industry in North America.

He said the settlement followed "one of the hardest bargaining sessions I've ever been part of."

He referred to a "long, hard-fought battle" and said negotiations had involved conciliations and mediation before settlement was formally signified at 9 p.m. last night — when the new contract was signed.

Mr. Norval said a big majority of workers favored the contract, but had no precise percentages on the vote that ratified the agreement.

The new contract offers an immediate wage increase of 45 cents an hour and a further 45 cents in the final year of the contract.

A cost-of-living clause with a ceiling of 30 cents an hour was included.

Mr. Norval predicts that, with rising costs, the ceiling will be hit in the first year of the two year contract.

Other benefits: Increased life insurance to $10,000; accident protection up to $10,000.

Vacations now run from the calendar year. Hitherto, employees had to take holidays on the anniversary of their hiring. The qualification for three weeks' vacation has been lowered from six years to five.

Retroactivity will date back to Dec. 1 — when the last contract expired.

Student Bus Safety Program Will Involve all Prince Edward

BLOOMFIELD — A student bus safety patrol program already in operation at three Prince Edward schools now will be introduced throughout the county.

Students selected primarily from grades seven and eight will be given a complete training program including them to work in conjunction with bus drivers in safety procedures.

The safety patrollers will be chosen on recommendation of bus operators, teachers and program co-ordinator OPP Constable Ingrid Watt.

Students will be trained to assist pupils boarding and leaving buses and how to handle emergency evacuations. They also will be shown what to do should the bus driver become ill while the bus is in motion.

The patrollers will learn how to deal with minor disciplinary problems in co-operation with the bus driver and will be instructed in first aid training.

The bus safety patrol program now is in use at Wellington, Leslie and Pinecrest schools where it was introduced about four years ago.

Tot is Recovering After Fire

MARMORA — David McInroy showed improvement when his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Paul McInroy visited the two-year-old at Kingston General Hospital Thursday.

The boy, his two brothers and a babysitter were rescued from their smoke-filled Madoc St. home Monday. The fire was believed to have started in electrical wiring.

The child was transferred to Kingston from Belleville General Hospital Tuesday when doctors feared the smoke had injured his vocal cords.

The Red Cross has provided a complete set of clothing for the three children. A supply of bedding is enroute from Toronto Red Cross headquarters.

An appeal for clothing for the parents has been launched by Rev. James Stevenson, Marmora Pentecostal Church.

Women Invading Canada's Military

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Trenton — Women are taking over the last great stronghold of te male sex — the military.

If a current Department of National Defence scheme proves successful, G. I. Joe may be replaced on the comic shelves by G.I. Jill as women take on greater prominence in the Canadian Armed Forces.

Women officers from across Canada met at Canadian Forces Base Trenton over the past two days to discuss the woman's role that has been the subject of research and thinking since the Royal Commission on the Status of Women.

Since that time — when women were officially recognized as first class citizens — women officers have been allowed admission into a number of forbidden career areas and have gained the right to perform with CFB bands.

Since the commission — completed some years ago — women have been installed as "engineering, air traffic control, air weapons control, logistics and security.

Col. Mary Vallance, Director of Women Personnel, Ottawa, says: "We just aren't making use of women."

But the trend is changing as the doors begin swinging open.

"It's going to be a hard pill to swallow but there will eventually be more women than men in the armed forces as women begin accepting traditionally male careers," she said.

According to the colonel, the number of trades available to women applicants has doubled.

Would women ever sit in a Boeing 707 pilot seat? "If world wide society accepts it, you'll see women flying," she said. She believes there will be in the vanguard to promote the use of women.

At present the DND is actively recruiting more women personnel and an 8.00 quota has been set, increasing the present contingent of women which numbers about 2,400.

"I really can see how far the program will go but women must take a full role," she said.

Pay scales and all areas of posting for any armed forces posting are identical regardless of sex.

Col. Vallance, following the two-day session, said it was a most successful conference. The conference is the forum to discuss the long range women's plans and to monitor the scheme.

For a Petawawa captain the conference was all in the line of duty. She is employed in the women personnel at his home base. Officials Eric Anderson was the only male in the 46-member group.

Asked why a man was in charge of the women, Colonel Vallance explained: "Right now, there aren't enough women officers to go around."

Fur-Trapping

Canada's Oldest Trade -- and It's Still Booming

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

TWEED — The commerce that opened Canada is now entering its final phases for another year in this area.

For the fur trade it's been another prime price season.

Another "record year," in fact, says Joe Desmond, as he directs his dealings with the defness of long experience.

Mr. Desmond has been 16 years a fur buyer for the Hudson's Bay Company. His winter rendervous with trappers here twice a month carries on a centuries-old Bay tradition reaching back to the days when Canada was just a business in the wilderness.

It's business bustling more briskly than ever as world demand — and prices — hold strong for Canadian furs.

In the dealers' parlance, that means mostly beaver.

In fact, as the man from the Bay assesses the pelts from the traplines for size and texture, he retains a fast, little appreciated outside wildlife circles:

Increase in 20 Years Is 900 Per Cent

Federal Government Spending Has Doubled In Five Years

By RICHARD JACKSON.

OTTAWA — So where, as taxpayers, do you expect restraint in federal spending?

The government?

Well, scarcely — not when the "tax and tax, spend and spend" philosophy of that old supermistaker, the late C. D. Howe, in his day "The Man For All Departments," has been built so solidly, for so long, into the thinking and operations of the Ottawa Establishment.

Then perhaps Parliament, where the elected representatives of the taxpayers, sensitive to voters' increasing alarm over inflation, talk to much of curbing costs?

Forces, on the basis that the parliamentarians are not insulated from the wrath and ballot revenge of the taxpayers like the bureaucrats, seek in their all-but-indestructible payroll privileges.

But that is only the way it figures.

For it does not figure in the figures — the cost of parliamentary expansion — and spending of the Senate and the House of Commons — as set out in Treasury Board's new 1974-75 Estimates.

For despite all the well-meaning talk in Parliament of the virtue of self-denying restraint, of the necessity of curbing federal spending to slow down, if not impossible — stop inflation, costs have doubled in only five years.

It may come as a shocker that Parliament, all the while preaching economy, for years has been handling the government spending parade.

It is all there in the Estimates — if you are in a mind to dig them out — Parliament's own spending of $18 million in a year is a new $53 million peak.

Which, for the Estimates, is a switch, since the bureaucrats are routinely at great pains to obscure the enormity of their own spending by consolidating or even omitting some of the dollar details.

Perhaps it is that the Honorable Members are forever hot on their big-spending trails; that the super-mandarins of the public service, these Treasury Board boffins let it all hang out — clear for every taxpayer to see — about Parliament's own spending on itself.

So what now $53 million last year to keep the Commons and Senate talking is costing $53 million this year.

How come?

Well, for some things, the cost of doing constituency offices — a new fringe benefit — and other extras added up to an additional $6 million. And here was the $2 million to recycle the old Confederation Building into offices, with all the amenities of a gentlemen's club, for MP's.

But for the full inflationary caper of Parliament plunge look deep into the Estimates to 1969 and discover that the cost was only a now simply incredible $3.8 million.

Parliamentary pay then was $6,000 with nothing tax-free.

But by 1955 when parliamentarians were getting $10,000 costs had climbed to only $5.9 million.

They were still but $8.9 million in '63.

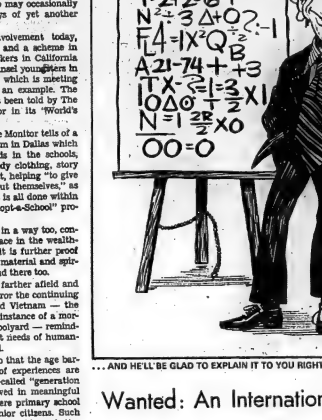
That was the year former Prime Minister Pearson raised the parliamentary pay scale to $18,000 plus expenses and everspreading fringe benefits.

And so, one year later, in '64, costs had soared to $12.5 million.

It was still only a modest $17.1 million when Mr. Pearson retired in '68.

Then Pierre Trudeau took over and off flew the lid, with the bill topping $20 million in '69, and reaching $36 million a year later.

And whoosh — two years later, in '72 — it had rocketed to $55 million, and ever onward and upward, crested over $43 million last year.



Now flip over the pages of the Main Estimates to Section 18 and find it all listed — another $19 million — for a total $53 million.

That is double your parliamentary money — and yours, as taxpayers, it surely is — in just five years.

Inflation?

Never in Parliament!

Only a 900 per cent increase in 20 years.

. . . AND HE'LL BE GLAD TO EXPLAIN IT TO YOU RIGHT AFTER THE NEXT ELECTION!

Helping Hands

Probably the best compliment parents can pay their children is to treat them as young people growing to maturity with each passing day, en route to adulthood.

This is not to say the young don't go on to make mistakes, but they can do so while still knowing they have the love and moral support of their parents then life cannot be all that bad.

The lowering of the age of consent for medical treatment by the provincial government from 18 to 16, meaning that a 16-year-old will be able to obtain medical or surgical treatment, including abortion, without necessarily having to seek parental permission, is further confirmation of the swiftly maturing youth scene of the seventies.

There are many aspects of youthful behavior which will continue to raise the eyebrows of the older generation, but these have to be seen in perspective as the young move forward to greater maturity and to the time where ultimately they too may occasionally look askance at the ways of yet another generation.

There is greater involvement today, greater social awareness, and a scheme in which student social workers in California are being employed to counsel youngsters in trouble with the law and which is meeting with marked success, is an example. The story of this program has been told by The Christian Science Monitor in its "World's Good Samaritans" series.

The same issue of The Monitor tells of a volunteer women's program in Dallas which helps underprivileged kids in the schools, providing them with needy clothing, story hours and most important, helping "to give them a better feeling about themselves as one mother put it. And it is all done within the framework of an "adopt-a-School" program in the city.

All rather surprising in a way too, considering what is taking place in the wealthiest of all countries, yet it is further proof of the inequities and the material and spiritual pressures that abound there too.

Or we may look still further afield and regard with grief and horror the continuing carnage in Cambodia and Vietnam — the terrible consequences for instance of a murder attack this hit a schoolgirl — reminding us further of the vast needs of humankind at home and abroad.

We are reminded also that the age barriers to a whole range of experiences are long since down. The so-called "generation gap" too is being narrowed in meaningful ways, as in Belleville where primary school youngsters visit with senior citizens. Such initiatives are all by way of seeking a better society and a better world.

Spring Fever

A Rochester TV weatherman was saying the other night what a "dud" winter it had been for skiers . . . and man when there is no winter to speak of even around Georgian Bay that's about something.

This time a year ago we recall visiting Presqu'ile when the woodland there was a fairytale setting of snow and the waters of Lake Ontario were a deep blue under the late winter sun.

Fifty years ago, according to our Looking Backward column the temperature dipped to as much as 14 below zero.

But all around us are signs of Spring and although it was cold the other day a game of, tennis was in progress at Zwick's Island.

The young people are on the move too, with high school students from Belleville and Trenton off to the Mediterranean on an educational cruise, and we know of one other Belleville group now in England on a tour that has special significance for music students.

St. John's, Newfoundland, may be socked in and while winter could strike, and hard, again in these parts, the calendar tells us Spring is just around the corner.

Wolf Bounty

Restoration of the wolf bounty up Marmora way understandably has had a mixed reaction, if the critics are on the increase and livestock is menaced as a result then there is justification for it.

Wolf hunting for its own sake, on the other hand is anti-ecological when it is conducted by professional "sportsmen" in planes and helicopters, or from snowmobiles, is something else, commending itself only to the empty-minded and the bloodthirsty.

Wanted: An International Legal Code To Govern Business Activity

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Canadians are righteously—and rightly—indignant when a U.S. parent company forbids its Canadian subsidiary to export its products to a third country.

In the current controversy, the directors of the American company that controls MLW-Worthington Ltd. of Montreal will apparently be in legal jeopardy in the United States if the Canadian subsidiary fills a $18-million order to export 25 locomotives to the Communist regime in Cuba. An American issue, the trading with the enemy act, requires them to block the sale.

To all Canadians, it is a clearcut case of an unwarranted foreign action.

But a substantial number of Americans are just as rightly-enough indignant about what they consider to be Canadian altercation of their legitimate rights.

When a Canadian corporation offers to issue more of its shares in exchange for the shares of a company it hopes to acquire—or when it issues more stock to existing shareholders, as a means of raising more equity capital—it nearly always excludes non-Canadian shareholders from its offer.

The reason? If it made a direct offer of its shares to American investors, it would have to register the offering with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission.

Registration with the SEC requires much fuller disclosure of corporate information—and is therefore more costly and time-consuming—than registration with the more easy-going provincial securities commissions in Canada.

That's reason enough not to extend the share offer to American investors, in the view of Canadian corporations. If an American doesn't like it, they say, let him sell his stock in their company.

But it isn't a good enough reason for many non-U.S. investors. They resent their second-class status, which denies them the right to acquire stock on the frequently advantageous terms enjoyed by their fellow-shareholders who are fortunate enough to be resident in Canada.

One St. Louis, Mo., shareholder has brought legal action in the U.S. against the Canadian company of which he is a shareholder. A Canadian company that has taken it over, and the Toronto-based investment dealers who handled the shares-exchange offer.

A U.S. court of appeals ruled that it had jurisdiction over what it termed a "slowly evolving scheme to defraud the plaintiffs involving the use of the mails and instrumentalities of interstate commerce."

That's strong language to describe a course that most Canadian companies in similar circumstances have chosen to follow, rather than to comply with the onerous requirements of the SEC.

In fact, it's almost as strong as the language that Canadians use in denouncing the U.S. in the MLW-Worthington case.

But from the U.S. point of view, the complaint against Canadian practices is legitimate.

"We believe such suits . . . call attention to the need . . . for a uniform code of foreign-investor protection in countries wishing to attract investors from around their borders," write Lewis and John Gilbert in the 1973 annual report of their Corporate Democracy Inc. (New York).

Such irritants are likely to remain on each side, as long as countries stick to the time-honored policy of promoting their national self-interest.

But sooner or later, the Western world will have to agree upon a international legal code that would govern multinational business—and thereby resolve these and scores of similar inequities.

Election Activity Already Apparent

By DON O'HEARN

TORONTO — There are those who say that next year's Ontario general election campaign is already underway.

No date has been called, of course, or is even remotely in sight.

Actually Premier Davis could wait for the next year before he gave the order to issue the election writs.

The period which should only be midway between voter lists is the legal period of political action and talk.

It is responsible for this is the political style of Mr. Davis.

The premier is a man who believes in what might be called "constant politics."

He believes a party should keep up almost as much pressure between elections as during actual campaigns. . . .

The result is that he gets out of the country on an average of at least once every 10 days during the year, spending a third of each day on political contracts. And he probably has made more political speeches than any leader in recent times.

With this both opposition parties have been forced to pick up his tempo.

Along with the fact that both would be tempted to copy his style, they would be further reasons for this.

One is that both the Liberals and the NDP appear to have more money than they normally do in election years.

Both opposition parties have been adding to their staffs and don't seem to be lacking in spare cash to send their leaders travelling around the province.

Then both now have housekeepers, James Breithaupt for the Liberals and Ian Deans for the NDP. And the Liberals have retained Dalton Camp as their leader as well.

This takes a lot of pressure off the main leaders, meaning particularly they don't have to be away so much time in the main house, leading the debates there, but can get out into the hustings wooing the people.

For some inexplicable reason has been the fact that, due to a reconstruction of the Camp committee, both opposition leaders are provided with government cars and travelling staffs to use them.

Whether this work will show at the polls can't be answered. But judging from crowds at meetings it has attracted it does seem to be adding to political interest.

Letters to the Editor

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

A few details written by Mr. Colin Bruce on the dentarist issue in Tuesday's (Mar. 5, '74) paper should not remain uncorrected.

The Dentistry Act like all the other Acts governing the health disciplines in the Province is being reviewed by the Health Disciplines Act will bring into one Act legislation pertaining to all Health Disciplines. The Health Disciplines Board composed of seven lay persons will represent the public interest to ensure the competence of practitioners and to maintain the high standard of practice. This act should not be confused with Bill 220 (The Paramedical Professions Act) which was revived by Bill 266 (The act to provide for the licensing and Practice of Denture Therapists under supervision by the Dentists.)

The Denturist Society is comprised of dental mechanics who have been employed therein legally directly to the public and who obtain membership merely upon payment of a fee. NO qualifications or evidence of training is required for membership — merely payment of the fee and a background of doing bootleg dentistry.

Mr. Guys, the denturist, was quite wrong in his statement that the denturists are legal in five provinces of Canada. (only B.C. and Alberta.)

Independent studies carried out, not for the benefit of the dental mechanic or the Dentist but for the public have all concluded that denturists should not be legalized to work directly to the public. i.e.,

1) World Health Organization.
2. Health Committee — Board of Health, New Zealand Dec. 1965.
3) Special Committee of legislative Assembly Manitoba — Jan. 1968.
4) Ad Hoc Committee on Dental auxiliaries (Wells Report) 1970.
5) Committee on the Healing Arts, Ontario, 1970.
6) Nova Scotia Task Force, 1972.
7) Ontario Council of Health Task Force on Dental Technicians. March 1972.

Elsewhere in the world, the concept of the dental mechanic dealing directly with the public without a Dentists supervision has been rejected by almost every government in the U.S.A.; Great Britain (since 1950), Germany (act in 1952.), Sweden (act in 1957.) Holland (fines and imprisonment are the penalties for breaking the law in Japan, New Zealand, and other Countries. In Canada, the Nova Scotia legislature in April 1972 rejected a bill to permit dental mechanics to work directly for the public. In Saskatchewan in 1966, the Dental Act was amended to prohibit dental mechanics from working directly with the public.

Armed with all this information and now with a law (Bill 266) to protect the public and the ethical dental laboratory operators who work on a prescription by a Dentist, it is beyond my comprehension why the law has not been enforced and these illegal denturists put out of business. They openly flaunt our judicial system with full page articles "informing" the public that they will continue to break the law and with their advertisements.

The whole campaign of the denturist to deal with the public directly has been in the grounds of economics. Already the local denturist is making full upper and lower dentures at a cost of $195.00 as compared to the low cost dentures offered by the dental profession at $125.00. Denture repairs are higher than the ordinary fee charged by dental offices.

Some 8,000 people in Ontario have taken advantage of the Low Cost dentures provided by the Dental Profession in 1973. This program of providing low cost dentures has been going on in many dental offices across the province, (i.e.) West for the welfare departments, and the profession has offered a "Low Cost Denture" and implemented this program as a practical solution to those who are economically distressed without government subsidization.

The long term solution advocated by the Ontario Dental Association for years now has been a prepaid dental program. Increased medical care costs have been taken care of by medical care insurance, financed only partially by premiums. The government has never, because of economics, subsidized medicine in its quality and therefore cost of service by calling in technicians to replace the educated and trained professional, — Nor do we in Dentistry.

The program to supplement fluoridation in rural areas of Hastings and Prince Edward counties is a step in the right direction to the treatment of the public water supplies by bring it up to the required fluoride content. This method means not only that the fluoride would be used than is necessary, but also that it is not controlled upon the people beyond the age at which it would be any use and give rise to the controversial state of having compulsory medication. There are alternatives which could be used.

The best of these is to treat milk given to children. This would certainly cut tooth decay and there would be considerably less outlays that parents must receive in dental bills. I would do this without the enormous waste involved when using fluoridated water. Less than one per cent of the water is used for drinking and even of that, most will be by people over the age at which they can do active any benefit. After 12 years of age the teeth having formed normally fully hardened and is not affected by acids which form in the mouth. This method has been developed which can be operated by the municipality under careful supervision. Milk treated with fluoride is supplied in specially labelled cartons (or bottles) like any other milk product on the market. No one is forced to have it whether they, wish to or not and children receive the double benefit of a health building food and dental decay prevention agent at the same time.

The present position was discussed in depth at a Symposium held in London last November and further research is proceeding.

A simple plant for the mixing of the fluoride with the milk of a reasonable sale level of 1 p.p.m. has been developed and demonstrated in many countries by the Borrow Dental Milk Foundation which is a non profit body set up for making profits. I suggest anyone interested in this problem of increasing dental caries should write to the Borrow Dental Foundation at Padnell, Grange, Cowplain, Hants.

Why is it that this vexatious question is always viewed by Councils solely from the water supply angle which is so controversial and unnecessarily costly and wasteful.

Rampant Rabies

ORILLIA, Ont. (CP) — Officials in the Georgian Bay area and Orillia Township on Thursday they are concerned about the high incidence of rabies in the locality.

Dr. C. H. Hyatt of the federal department of agriculture in Barrie, Ont., said one farm has been quarantined because a rabid fox attacked three cattle.

Alexandra Parry, supervisor of the Georgian Bay region's animal shelter operated by the Ontario Humane Society, said a steady flow of rabies reports has been received from the northern portion of the county.

"There is little we can do in Orillia Township because we have no contact, no authority to go in there," she said.

"This is, in my opinion, one of the more serious outbreaks of recent years."

Budget April 4

TORONTO (CP) — The provincial budget will be brought down in the legislature on Thursday, April 4, it was announced Thursday.

Treasurer John White will start reading the budget statement at 4 p.m. EST, a treasury spokesman said.

Get Shotguns

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Police Chief Gordon Peters said three city police cars will have shotguns installed "in the next few days."

Man Wounded

THUNDER BAY (CP) — The criminal investigation branch of the Thunder Bay police department is investigating what it believes was the accidental wounding of a city resident by a police officer early Thursday.

Police said Const. Stanley Carriere had been in pursuit of a vehicle. The driver of the car stopped and continued to flee on foot. Two warning shots were fired and the officer apparently slipped on a patch of ice, discharging the weapon and grazing the man's shoulder.

Aid Costly

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says the Ontario Legal Aid Plan, which provides free or subsidized legal help to those unable to afford their own lawyer, cost the government $13.1 million for the period April 1, 1973 to March 31, 1973.

Shun Garbage

MAPLE, Ont. (CP) — Ratepayers of the community just north of Toronto told members of the Ontario Environmental Hearing Board Thursday that they did not want Metropolitan Toronto's garbage inundated through, or dumped on the outskirts of their village.

"We just don't want their garbage dumped here," said Fred Young, a Maple resident for 15 years and one of about 160 people who attended the public meeting.

Budget Cut

OTTAWA (CP) — Budget cuts for this summer's Opportunities for Youth (OFY) program discriminate against Northern Ontario, Cyril Symes (NDP—Sault Ste. Marie) told the Commons Thursday.

The OFY budget for Ontario had been cut by 13 per cent, but the north-central Ontario budget had been reduced 33 per cent, he said.

No Help

CHATHAM, Ont. (CP) — Laura Sabia, chairman of the Ontario Council on the Status of Women, criticized Thursday changes in property law proposed earlier this week by the Ontario Law Reform Commission.

She said that under the terms of the proposed matrimonial property regime both husband and wives would be entitled to an equal share of combined assets only if both partners signed the appropriate legal documents.

Mrs. Sabia said no husband will sign the required documents, "especially if he's now getting sloppy with his wife."

"For the women who are currently married, it really means nothing to them."

Fares High

TORONTO (CP) — The Barrie-Toronto commuter rail service will be "a rich man's train" if Canadian National Railways is allowed to charge its proposed inter-city fares, a consumer spokesman told a Canadian transport commission hearing Thursday.

Robert Silicox of nearby Aurora, chairman of the Go North Commuter Committee, said the proposed fares are "exorbitant" and might kill the service before it begins.

Flights Normal

TORONTO (CP) — Air Canada said its flight schedules were normal Thursday despite rotating strikes by ticket and reservations employees in five Canadian centres.

Evidence Heard In Two Deaths

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — Gertrude Albert, 76, never regained consciousness between the time she was admitted to Sudbury General Hospital July 27 and the time he was pronounced dead three days later, a coroner's jury was told Thursday.

Mr. Albert, who had been found unconscious on the floor of his apartment, was given medical gas in the hospital's emergency treatment centre from an oxygen wall outlet later found to be emitting nitrous oxide.

His and 22 other deaths are being investigated at the inquest, now in its ninth week.

Dr. David Pelton, chief anesthetist at Toronto's Hospital for Sick Children, told the jury Thursday evidence showed Mr. Albert was "seriously ill" when admitted to hospital. Mr. Albert's irregular breathing after a mechanical respirator was applied was consistent with the patient's "not getting very much oxygen," he said.

Dr. Pelton said if nitrous oxide had been mistakenly administered from the wall outlet through the respirator, the patient might have survived because a sufficient amount of room air might have been inhaled.

The jury also heard evidence Thursday into the Aug. 24 death of Amanda Bellaie, 61, of Sudbury who died 10 days after she was admitted to hospital after collapsing at her home.

Dr. John Stanton, a specialist in internal medicine said he saw the woman in hospital about a half hour after her collapse. She had congestive heart trouble for several years and was diabetic, evidence showed.

He said a mask was on the patient's face, but he had it removed so he could talk to her and she improved during the hour he was with her.

He saw the patient Aug. 21 before leaving town for a few days, and found her "relatively well . . . quite stable and anticipated for discharge in the morning."

Mrs. Bellaie died in hospital the next day.

Sharp Price Boosts Seen for Vegetables

TORONTO (CP) — Consumers can expect a sharp increase in the price of processed vegetables this year, says Brian Parker, president of Libby, McNeill and Libby of Canada Ltd., Toronto.

The Ontario processing industry is negotiating vegetable prices for the 1974 crop with the Ontario Vegetable Growers' Marketing Board, and Mr. Parker said in an interview the processors probably will have to face some substantial price increases.

Producers need improved vegetable prices if they are to keep their land in vegetable production in the face of $3-a-bushel corn and $8 a bushel for soybeans, Mr. Parker said.

He said increased costs for packaging, labelling, sugar and imported tomato paste will add to the price jump.

The marketing board reports negotiations have been completed for some of the 11 processing vegetable crops. Peas have increased in price by about 85 per cent, corn about 70 per cent, and cucumbers between 80 and 140 per cent, depending on the grade.

Whelan Says Beef Price Has to Rise

OTTAWA (CP) — Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan said Thursday that prices to beef producers will have to rise roughly 10 cents a pound if cattlemen are to break even on their operations.

But he took issue with reports from Winnipeg earlier this week that prices will have to increase between 30 and 40 cents a pound.

"I never said they'd have to go up that much," he told the Commons agriculture committee. "They don't need a 40 cent increase to make the industry healthy."

He added that cattlemen are still being about 10 cents a pound on the beef they sell. Prices to cattlemen would have to rise to between 55 and 60 cents a pound from current levels of between 45 and 50 cents if the industry was to survive.

The Canadian Cattlemen's Association has called not only for stiffer tariffs, but a quota system to restrict imports to a portion of exports.

Mr. Whelan told the committee that a number of cattlemen disagree with such a move. Domestic producers should simply wait out the depressed market period.

Erie and Huron High

BURLINGTON, Ont. (CP) — Spring water levels in lakes Erie, Huron and St. Clair are expected to be almost as high as last year, and any severe storms may result in serious shoreline damage, says the Canada Centre for Inland Waters.

Unlike Lake Ontario, water flow into the three lakes cannot be regulated.

The Centre said the level of Lake Ontario at the end of February was 245.8 feet, about 2.5 feet higher than in the previous month but six inches lower than the level in February, 1973.

Additional water releases from Lakes Ontario were approved by the International St. Lawrence River board of control and the level was expected to be "substantially below that of last year" in the next six months, said the centre.

Land for Housing To Be Subsidized

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — The Ontario government wants seven major urban centres to open up more land for housing development immediately to cope with a "crisis" situation, Housing Minister Larry Handleman said Thursday.

He asked Peel regional council for its support and said he also is appealing to municipal and regional officials in Halton, Durham, Ottawa-Carleton, Sault Ste. Marie, Thunder Bay and Hamilton-Wentworth.

Mr. Handleman said the province has selected the seven major urban areas for immediate action to provide more housing at prices people can afford.

The housing minister said the province is willing to pay substantial unconditional grants to municipalities co-operating with the Ontario housing action program.

"There is an under-supply of serviced land which has allowed housing prices to go high. It's a logical aspiration for the people of Ontario to own their homes," he said.

Community Ties Needed by Police

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario police forces should become more deeply involved in the communities they serve, a committee investigating policing in the province recommended Thursday.

"Police officers must be encouraged to develop closer working relationships with other community service organizations at all levels," said the report tabled in the Ontario legislature.

The report makes 170 recommendations and emphasizes the need for police to lead in community involvement.

"Easy and open channels of communication between police officers and the public should be recognized by all police forces in Ontario as a critical requirement of the police role," the report says.

The 17-member committee under the chairmanship of Edgar Benson, a Liberal businessman, conducted public hearings in many Ontario centres beginning in May, 1972.

In tabling the report, Solicitor-General George Kerr said the "relationship between the police and the public . . . becomes the theme of the entire report."

The shift in role for the individual constable in the cities "implied by technological changes has a direct impact on his belief and character.

"Gradually, this unbalanced exposure to his community leads him to a general cynicism about human nature," said the report.

"His lack of exposure to people leads him to deal with them from behind the mask of his uniform and prevents him from developing the skills which would enhance relationships with citizens."

This emphasis on incidents, the $353,000 report said, and particularly crime statistics, tends to shift the policeman's concept of his job to one that defines mainly crime and criminals as real police work.

"This is the human aspect of the vicious circle which threatens, without design or intervention, the needed identity of police and community in Ontario's urban centres."

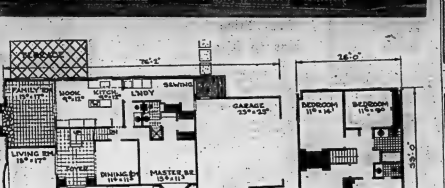
Police forces around the province are urged to bring the ethnic makeup of the force roughly in line with that of the community.

Algonquin Youth Camp Is Planned

TORONTO (CP) — A youth camp to accommodate boys and girls 12 to 16 years of age from cities in southern Ontario will be established in Algonquin Provincial Park this year, Natural Resources Minister Leo Bernier said Thursday.

Mr. Bernier told the legislature campers will be recruited from the metropolitan areas, reaching youngsters "who might not otherwise have the opportunity to share a wilderness camping experience."

The province will pay for development and operation of the camp, expected to accommodate 56 campers.



The camp, to be run in two-week periods, will be operated for the government by the YMCA of Metropolitan Toronto.

Legislature Will Recess

TORONTO (CP) — The legislature will not sit next week in order to give members an opportunity to be with their families during the spring school break.

Eric Winkler, house leader, said in an interview Thursday the house will adjourn today and not resume until Monday, March 25, at 2 p.m. EST.

The desire to preserve our heritage is strong in many of us and there is no better way than with a traditional house.

This two storey Dutch Colonial, with its detailed garage wing combines a delightful exterior with an efficient floor plan, made to order for the family needing five bedrooms.

Circulation is handled by a room and dining room are easily room.

Luxurious master suite on ground floor has walk-in closet, dressing area, shower bathroom and bay window seat. The other four bedrooms quite separate with an informal lunch room in the kitchen area.

Plans for Design T5-1624 cost $25 for the first set, $11 each additional set and are supplied by return mail. Two new books "Home Designs for Canadians" are available at this newspaper office for $1.25 each or by mail (see coupon below). Book 1 presents designs for homes up to 1600 sq. ft. for 1 storey and split level, 1650 sq. ft. for one and one half and 2 storey. Book 2 includes larger homes and vacation homes. (Ontario residents add 7 per cent Sales Tax on all purchases).

$4-million Aside To Aid Housing

TORONTO (CP) — An Ontario government program to aid in the construction of non-profit housing to help moderate- and low-income groups was announced in the legislature Thursday.

Housing Minister Sidney Handleman said the province has set aside $4 million for fiscal 1974 to provide grants of up to 10 per cent of the value of houses built by co-operative organizations.

The grants, to be paid over a 15-year period, are aimed at reducing the mortgage payments of those who purchase the houses.

Mr. Handleman said under the scheme, which will start in May, his ministry also is prepared to lease provincial lands to groups which may have difficulty finding building sites at reasonable costs.

Community groups which would be eligible include service clubs, charitable bodies and organizations dedicated to helping the elderly and disabled.

Mr. Handleman said the program, Ontario's first venture into non-profit housing, will supplement changes in the federal program made last year in amendments to the National Housing Act (NHA).

The NHA amendments provide up to $10,000 in start-up funds, mortgage loans of up to 100 per cent, plus a 10 per cent capital contribution, and grants of up to $2,500 a unit for the rehabilitation of existing housing for use by non-profit groups.

He declined to estimate how many new housing units the program will produce in a year.

Housing companies set up and operated by municipalities also qualify under the plan.

At least $50 million has been committed to the program, he said, because at least $4 million will be given each year for the 15 years.

Mr. Handleman told the legislature that groups receiving the aid will have to set aside 25 per cent of their units for those receiving provincial rent supplements, or rent-geared-to-income subsidies.

Abundant Cheap Energy Possible in 50 Years

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Canadian Press asked Dr. W. Bennett Lewis, retired senior vice-president for sciences at the Crown corporation Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. in 1967, to write the following article on energy.

By W. Bennett Lewis

In meeting any crisis it is helpful to know the eventual outcome. Although it seems too late now to avoid paying higher prices for energy over the next 20 years or so, it remains true that in 50 to 100 years the then much larger adult and working population of the world can enjoy abundant energy in a clean environment at lower real-hour costs than have ever been enjoyed by more than a few.

Dr. W. Bennett Lewis retired last year as senior vice-president for sciences of the Crown corporation Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. in 1967, he showed the International Atoms for Peace Award with two other internationally known scientists and donated his $30,000 share to a McGill University research project. (CP Photo)

Although a number of people appear to have been taken by surprise by the present sharp increase in the price of the conventional fuels, coal, oil, and natural gas, the situation has been quite adequately understood and known to many since 1953. Moreover, the current excitement about harnessing wind-power, solar energy, geothermal energy and other sources is going over well-trodden old ground, quite thoroughly explored in 1949-53 and at other times too.

Moreover, it is characteristic of human nature to enjoy being scared, so it should not be surprising that the quite simple solution foreseen in 1953 is either ignored or turned into another scare, while wishful thinking enlivens fantasies such as abundant clean nuclear energy from the effectively inexhaustible heavy hydrogen (deuterium) in the ocean.

In fact, many like to recall the poetic prophecy by the late Dr. Homi Bhabha of India speaking as president when opening the first United Nations conference on the peaceful uses of atomic energy at Geneva in 1955.

He said: "I venture to predict that a cheap source will be found for liberating fusion energy in a controlled manner within the next two decades. When that happens the energy problems of the world will truly have been solved forever for the fuel will be as plentiful as the heavy hydrogen in the oceans."

Now Homi Bhabha was not only a theoretical nuclear physicist but also a qualified engineer and a high administrator. He did not say that this abundant energy would be available without human effort which in this context is usually described as capital, operating, maintenance and waste-management costs.

The effect of his statement was that within a year the celebrated Professor Igor V. Kurchatov, the father of nuclear engineering in the U.S.S.R., gave a lecture in the United Kingdom and progressively the walls of mystery surrounding controlled thermonuclear fusion research in several countries began to be opened up and at the 1958 Geneva conference these curtains were drawn back to reveal the astonishing fact that a very long path of research lay ahead.

Even today, 35 years later, it has to be said that any practical nuclear fusion power still lies beyond the horizon. Its complex unsolved problems still attract many.

Meanwhile, the real and known hope for the future remains a peaceful Cinderella.

No technical breakthrough is needed; on the contrary, nature seems to have endowed her with graces that await only the attention of a modest prince. She has a technical name Candu-DC-Thorium. Her graces were expounded by Canada at the fourth of the United Nations conferences in September, 1971.

Besides her expensive ugly sisters already mentioned and another sister, the attractive but deceitful and costly fast breeder, she has unlike the fairy story a first cousin who has just made her successful debut at Pickering, Ont., called Candu-PHW-NAU.

This cousin has found a prince but that marriage has left Cinderella starving, giving her fairy godmother a real problem to find a second handsome prince to bring her out.

(The CANDU-OC-Thorium reactor is under study at Pickering, Ont. It is of Canadian design, using thorium as fuel with a pressure vessel and heat transfer agent in an organic liquid. Candu-PHW-NAU uses natural uranium as fuel with heavy water under pressure acting as coolant and moderator to keep the nuclear reaction going.)

There still is confusion between Cinderella and her Candu-PHW cousin. It is Cinderella and not her cousin that promises that lowest cost energy for the future.

Orderly development requires 12 to 15 years before Cinderella can join her cousin to meet the growing demand for new generating capacity. When a potential superior is recognized, the necessary training period should not be foiled. It is the essence of the work of strengthening her cousin is not in any way wasted. Candu-PHW is economically competitive today, the highest power known to have been achieved.

Cinderella has acquired graces over a long period. Her recognition of her potential is lost in the mist of early wartime secret work. In 1946 there existed at Chalk River, Ont., a short document that reviewed the known nuclear energy properties of the significant uranium, thorium and plutonium isotopes and concluded that there existed two main routes to nuclear power generation.

One depended on uranium-233 and thorium in "thermal breeder" reactors employing a "moderator" such as graphite, heavy water or beryllium to slow down the fission neutrons to "thermal energies" without losing too many by absorption.

The other depended on plutonium and uranium-238 in "fast neutron" reactors, as free as possible from neutron moderators.

Possible cross combinations were also foreseen but these two extremes have survived the test of time: the first as the somewhat neglected Cinderella and the other as the lavishly supported plutonium fast breeder, or LMFBR, mentioned above as a decided sister.

By 1951 it was established that they both were technically feasible, but could not then be designed to compete economically with the straightforward natural or slightly enriched uranium-fuelled reactors. Long development periods would be required before these reactors could compete with coal and oil for generating electricity.

That period from 1951 to 1954 is recalled in nuclear power circles as the time of the moving target, because the cost of electricity generated from coal and oil was being reduced by increasing the scale of generating stations and by improved methods of delivering and handling coal.

In 1953 the cost of electricity generated from coal at the R. L. Hearn plant in Toronto was 7.3 mills a kilowatt-hour. In 1965 the electricity generated at the large Lakeview station just west of Toronto was only about 4.5 mills. The Pickering nuclear station was built to compete with that, but although it competes successfully, the drop in the value of the dollar brought the cost up to over six mills a kilowatt-hour from both stations by the end of 1972.

Cinderella only began to show her potential in about 1960 when the experimental Candu-OC reactor WR-1 at the Whiteshell Nuclear Research Establishment at Pinawa, near Winnipeg came into operation, supported by experimental "loops" in the experimental reactors at Chalk River, Ont.

Taking stock of the world in 1956 made it clear that the population had risen to the high level that a considerable fraction would live to the end of Malthusian calamity of mass starvation.

The great problem would be to provide food not only for future generations but for those already here. The most basic feature of the food problem is to harness sufficient energy to make fertilizer and to pump water on a large enough scale even especially when the new grains from the "Green Revolution" are being grown.

All th prospective sources of harnessed energy were reviewed in a major study headed by Prof. Hans H. Paetzman, himself an engineer consultant in harnessing solar energy. He had designed a windmill, or wind-turbine, generating 1,250 kilowatts, the highest power known to have been achieved.

For his study, he created the device of a hypothetical person named Everyman, energy assessing how much could plausibly be derived from the various sources at real costs not more than twice the 1953 costs to meet the plausible demand of a plausible population over the next 50 and 100 years.

Even for a very low estimate of a population of only six billion in the year 2000, he assessed the accumulative energy demand as at least 72 Q and possibly as high as 467 Q. He then assessed the plausible yields from both "conventional" and "vegetal" resources.

The Q is a large unit, 1,000 quadrillion British Thermal Units, or 33,453 million kilowatt-years or 172,000 gallons (or 21,300 million metric tons) of crude petroleum or 12,500 metric tons (not there are no millions here) of uranium in Canadian Reactors.

In many features where the prospects are uncertain over such a long time, Mr. Putnam invites the reader to be his own trustee, and certainly different opinions can be found. Remembering, however, the demand was assessed as lying between 72 and 467 Q with in view of the small contributions from the "income" or renewable resources, it is quite clear that coal and nuclear energy provide the only two greater part. If more energy is to come from coal, the coal will certainly rise.

The 1953 discussion of the oil situation is of special interest. A mounting preference for fluid fuels was evident. In the United States, if the preferences continued to be met, it seemed that fluid fuels would increase from carrying 37 per cent of the load in 1953 to 75 per cent by 1975.

Rising costs of the discovery and refining of crude petroleum and decreasing reserves of synthetic fluid fuels have "brought the two within sight of each other economically. Since then, the synthetics give promise of using less capital per day's production, than the petroleum industry uses."

Oil from oil sands and fluids from oil shales were seen as harnessable fluid fuels that there would be more fluid fuel synthetics used with some day a shift to the process. The study at that time had not reached the prospect that appeared in the study of agro-industrial complexes in 1972 that nuclear energy would more than make good the loss as there could be a gain in energy in, put derived from the fossil fuels.

By 1970 the technical advances in nuclear energy prospects, especially the potential of Cinderella, gave this a real practical significance.

The sudden recent stimulus of increased oil prices now throws a new assessment. No longer are nuclear fission and oil conceived as sources of energy but the oil industry must become the fluid fuel industry and the nuclear energy to produce a conservative fluid fuel.

The 1949-1953 study was openly conducted and contributions from 40 experts were invited and incorporated. The results are published in 1953 as Energy in the Future, a 265-page book by Van Nostrand.

Naturally, this was followed by other studies, many of which were published in 1955 in the Proceedings of the First United Nations International Conference at Geneva on the Peaceful Uses of Atomic Energy.

Some constitute advances but not all come up to the high standard of the 1953 classic. There was, for example, some over-optimism in the nuclear energy aspects largely because of the uncertainties still imposed on much of the nuclear information until the second conference in 1958.

At the 1958 conference, the problems and advances made in the safety features of reactors, the disposal of radioactive wastes were expounded. Canada presented the development of fuelling the highly radioactive reactors into the form of disposable yields from both "conventional" and "vegetal" resources.

The Q is a large unit, 1,000 quadrillion British Thermal Units, or 33,453 million kilowatt-years or 172,000 gallons (or 21,300 million metric tons) of crude petroleum or 12,500 metric tons (not there are no millions here) of uranium in Canadian Reactors.

At the 1958 conference, the problems and advances made in the safety features of reactors, the disposal of radioactive wastes were expounded. Canada presented the development of fuelling the highly radioactive reactors into the form of disposable yields from both "conventional" and "vegetal" resources as imported nine years later and still continues.

Canada also presented the design of the "two-out-of-three" continually testable system of obtaining an extremely low risk of the failure of such breakdowns. By then, also the Candu system of fuelling had already developed that has subsequently been incorporated most successfully in all members of the Candu family, yielding the essential fuel economy that gives all these reactors a fuelling cost of only about half that of other types.

Moreover, even the Candu-NaK-Uranium reactor, can yield twice as much energy from a given supply of uranium from the mine. There are, however, no many details of the design as detail that many months of study of massive books and documents are required for a reasonably adequate appreciation.

Justifiable fear of nuclear weapons in war has led to much irrational fear of radioactivity and of the controlled operations by the skilled and knowledgeable. Now, with the three coolant circuits of unmoved confidence from their neighbors in their magnificent of developing sufficient increased energy to keep massive starvation and its accompanying tragedies.

The promise, however, of harnessed nuclear energy goes far beyond freedom from fear of starvation as stated at the outset. There can be abundant energy for a much larger population of real cost of resources and manpower lower than have been enjoyed by more than a small minority. If we keep in mind the essential qualities of life which that energy is to make possible, we have more chance of achieving these—warmth, fresh air, pure water, travel, gardens, art, communications and other benefits of civilization.

Let us then return to consider how the graces nature has granted to Cinderella at told by Canada at the fourth Geneva Conference in 1971.

Primarily it is a reactor which is highly quality, but most astonishingly in normal operation the coolant circuit is free of radioactivity that one can walk about safely quite close to its piping and circulating pumps with the reactor at full power. In WR-1, it has been possible to change a bearing in the pump while still power. Radiation shielding and without necessary preliminary decontamination.

For about five years, one of the three coolant circuits of WR-1 has been successfully operated at 600 pounds per square output, a temperature above the point where water can be kept liquid. Thus it is able to generate steam at as high a temperature as conveniently, allowing a high thermal-electrical efficiency potentially 44 per cent and capable of an over-all net station efficiency of 40 per cent.

To all these graces, we add the Canadian natural economy of the Candu reactors. The fuel bundles of the reactor energy as 3,659 tons of high-quality coal or 17,000 tons of low-quality coal before needing removal for reprocessing and recycling. Thus the economy is well known but Cinderella also saves 40 per cent more of the capital cost of Candu-PHW-Nat-Uranium and similar reactors. The capital cost per kilowatt capacity becomes still less as larger the scale on which high-power reactors are handling

This scale factor provides the finishing touch to reduce the energy cost, to a figure such as 2.5 mills a kilowatt-hour in 1973 dollar value.

At such a price, the energy could be used to liberate hydrogen from water either for direct use as a clean storable fuel or for use to produce synthetic hydrocarbons to replace the petroleum products when their price rises to about $12 per barrel of crude (in 1973 dollar value).

In these times of rapidly changing oil prices and dollar values, it seems best to look back to the last known period of some degree of stability, so 1972 is chosen.

In effect, this is saying that even when the Athabasca oil sands and lignite coal deposits elsewhere are becoming hard to work, it is reasonable to turn to limestone and shells as the source of the carbon for the synthetic hydrocarbons, the increase in cost should be no more than now is added by a few thousand miles of transportation.

The longer Cinderella has to wait for her prince, the longer the world will wait for its low-cost cost of large-scale harnessed energy. The evidence is all before those engineers who can suppress their personal NIH fetishes (NIH—not invented here).

It is necessary also to suppress restrictive trade practices that have recently limited the number of apprentices in nuclear technology and the availability of welders and other tradesmen. In university circles, there are even restrictions on the opportunities for engineers to pursue lifetime studies.

In other settings I have shown how a population of 15 billion could be supplied if they destire it with 50 kilowatts (thermal equivalent) per capita from Cinderellas. The gigantic effort to achieve this demands mutual confidence and co-operation. The endowment of energy and resources is ample.

Everything comes back to the provision and application of savings from the surest growing industrial activity as capital for the competing developments of technology of which the nucleur source of low-cost energy is an essential component.

It must be recalled that "capital" is not just building materials but all the effort multiplying the skills and organization of advanced technological industry supported by its civilized environment.

Christian Women Meet, Pray - and Give

By SHARON AIRHART

In an age when traditional women's home and church groups are finding it difficult to attract and keep new and especially young members, a fledgling religious club is drawing standing room only crowds to its monthly meetings.

Meeting Wednesday for the first time, the Belleville Christian Women's Club drew nearly 300 women to the Mad Mechanic, a night spot commandeered for lack of sobriety. Four Seasons Hotel rotes big enough to accommodate the crowd for coffee and cake.

One of several new "Christian Women's Clubs" in Canada, the group was set up in November by two professional organizers from the Kansas City-based Stonecroft Ministries, a publishing company linked with several clubs.

The interdenominational setup is the same in every city: monthly meetings in a "nice atmosphere" (like a modern hotel) as local chairman Ray West calls it, coffee and cake at a nominal fee, free baby-sitting a program of speakers and music, a flute of prayer - and a collection.

The funds collected in addition to the $1.75 charged each woman for the coffee and cake, are sent to Stonecroft Ministries' Willowdale headquarters for use in Canada.

A typical Belleville club's budget might be $250.

According to Stonecroft office manager Miss Mahaffey, in Kansas City, Missouri there are "more than" 50,000 regular attendants in Canada. She said the club is unique in that "there are no memberships as in most."

Miss Mahaffey said that the 50,000 women who attend meetings and make monthly contributions are supporting "19 missionary couples" who open non-denominational churches in rural areas where churches have closed or where there is no church.

The Canadian office where local executives — all unpaid volunteers — send collection is the office of Donald and Gladys Harding in Willowdale, who administrate the Canadian program on a volunteer basis.

Mrs. Harding said today the group supports missionary people at a salary of about $300-$800 per month in 24 rural areas. She said there are about 70 groups in Canada.

Local volunteers man phones to draw women to the meeting and plan the programs which always include a guest speaker and a featured speaker who might discuss antique dishes of flower arranging.

At Wednesday's meeting, which opened with a prayer, the women were urged to bring friends to the next meeting and to submit names of out-of-town friends who could be contacted to attend meetings in their cities.

There are currently two groups in Toronto, groups in Kingston, Arnprior, Ottawa, Perth and other places in Canada. Mrs. West said there are 300,000 North American members and chapters in 36 foreign countries, all under the sponsorship of Stonecroft Ministries which publishes tracts and books by authors like Dale Evans Rogers.

At Wednesday's meeting, books published by Stonecroft, were displayed on a table at the front of the room.

Besides attending monthly, women are urged to attend "prayer coffee" meetings and friendship Bible coffees.

Local organizer Betty Johnson, who says she believes the club provides an opportunity for women to come together in a relaxed atmosphere, used a Stonecroft promotional idea to ask the women to pray.

Metaphorically baking the cake with field staff office staff and missionaries as the "ingredients", she displayed a failed cake. She told the women she'd forgotten two ingredients: prayer and financial help. She asked each woman to take home a prayer favor bearing the name of a "missionary" somewhere in the world and to contribute to the support of "500 worthy causes" all over the world. Mrs Johnson told the women regularly scheduled for donations over $2.00

Local chairman Ray West then told the women to remember that the Christian Women's Club meet spiritual needs of women and that it's popular because "God wants that club here."

As to why it draws more members than long-standing women's groups, Mrs. West says "I guess only God can answer that question."

Profit for Travel

HALIFAX (CP) — Dr. Sonia Jones says that if the students of her Spanish-language course at Dalhousie University are to gain a true grasp of the subject they need an opportunity to live for awhile in a Spanish-speaking environment.

So she wrote a book of Spanish cooking and plans to use the profits to send her students on a trip to Spain.

The book, Everything You Have Always Wanted To Know About Spanish Cooking, But Were Afraid to Try Out on Your Friends, is a Spanish cookbook like no other because it avoids exotic ingredients.

"The ingredients for each and every recipe are available at most Halifax supermarkets," said Dr. Jones, who is acting chairman of Dalhousie's Spanish department. By substituting readily available ingredients the recipes become available to more people.

The book was not the only enterprise involved in Dr. Jones' drive to get her students to Spain.

She started with her hobby of cultivating organically-grown vegetables, selling the produce to friends and neighbors. With the profits from this, she purchased a large wooden chest for her students then raffled off, raising $400.

It isn't the first book for Dr. Jones. Spanish One, a first-year university text which she wrote in 1972, won an award of merit at the Canadian Education Showplace in Toronto in October.

She wrote the text simply because she needed a text for her course and none of any liking was available.

The book has been published by van Nostrand Reinhold Co. in New York, and she predicts it will be one of its bigger sellers next year.

Dr. Jones, London-born but a United States citizen now, holds degrees from universities in England, Spain, France and the United States, and has taught at University of California, San Francisco State College, Harvard and Tufts.

OUR CITY ON THE BAY: 1909

THE EYES HAVE IT

A gray eye is a sly eye,
And roguish is a brown one;
Turn full upon me thy eye —
Ah, how its waveiets drown one!

A blue eye is a true eye;
Mysterious is a dark one,
Which flashes like a spark-sun!
A black eye is the best one.

W. E. Ager — Oriental Poetry.

On T.V., last evening an advertisement displayed sun-glasses on a pretty girl and the definite impression was — that glasses are a decided aid, not only for eye-care, but an attractive appearance.

Somehow this comes as good news to those of us whom Dorothy Parker taught — saying men didn't care for us girls who wear glasses. Is she ever out-dated!

But eye-care is very definitely in, and being a major part of our modern day health program, the question arises: Was such care held of any importance back in 1909, in our city?

At 294 Front Street is one of the finest jewelry houses, not only in Belleville, but in this section of the country," the Daily Intelligencer's Industrial Souvenir Number points out and continues:

"Special attention is given the optical department at the rear end of the store. Mr. Telgy Blackburn is a graduate optician, having taken a course at the Chicago Opthalmic College in 1893, and is fully competent to carry on this branch of the business.

"Eyes are tested free and a very complete stock of lenses suited to all eyes. There are frames in all the latest styles in, gold, gold-filled, nickel, steel and aluminum.

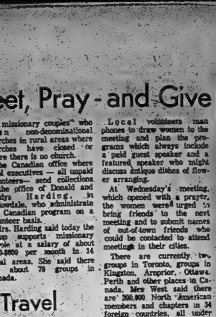
This is all that is said of eye-care, which was indeed competent.

But it is interesting to read about Mr. Blackburn's jewelry store of which there is more said:

"The store, in its appointments and stock carried, bears comparison with the best establishments of this nature in the country. The stock is most complete in every particular, including all kinds of fine jewelry, watches of the best known makers, fancy and plain clocks in marble, onyx, wood, nickel, etc., all kinds of personal novelties and souvenirs, besides a splendid assortment of fancy articles in fine cut and beautiful specimens of cut glass.

"Another important feature is the sterling silverware for table use or general silverware, including the celebrated Gorham goods of New York as well as other prominent manufacturers.

"In addition, a large business is done in general repairing of jewelry and watches.



"The business was established in 1866, in quite a small way, by Mr. Telgy Backburn, and in the intervening time it has increased year by year until reaching its present extensive proportions.

"Mr. Blackburn is a native of Belleville and is an active member in the Belleville Board of Trade, being Treasurer of that body. He has served the city as a member of the Council and was, last year, Chairman of the Fire Department."

Mr. J.A. Blackburn, Proprietor of Stroud's Jewellery and Gift Shop, 208 Front Street, kindly tells us:

"Mr. Telgy Blackburn was my father's brother. My father did not go into business here until 1913. Men died younger in those days. Both brothers died in their fifties.

"Life times were short as compared to nowadays."

Successful Living

Widow Dreams of True Love

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: I have an urge to share my secret. I became a widow six years ago after 28 years of marriage. Everyone thought I had a perfect marriage, but the truth is that after the first year I didn't love my husband. He was a good and kind man, and never once did I let him down.

Now I feel cheated, and wonder if I can still hope to find a quiet sort of love, I am only 51. I love life and people.

Do you think I am acting immature to dream of a new life?

L.C.

Dear L.D.: Immature? Definitely not. You have time for a lot of living yet, and there's no reason why you shouldn't enjoy it.

Get out and meet people. Join a club for single people, do volunteer work, take evening courses, be everywhere there are people of both sexes.

Take a job, even a part-time one, where you'll meet the public. Your dream of a new love can become a reality.

Dear Doris: I wonder if any of your readers will have a copy of a piece written some years ago?

A father is looking at his small sleeping son, in bed after a vexing day. He is apologizing to the boy: — When the youngster came full of excitement and enthusiasm to tell his father something, he was rebuffed. When his childish behavior did not come up to the standards the father set him, he was rebuked.

The father is full of contrition for his impatience and lack of understanding, because his son is only a little boy.

I think it would be worth reviving, as we all need to be reminded that we can be too demanding at times. The piece is not a poem, but more of a short reading, in prose.

Teacher.

Dear Teacher: Sometimes an author can express something in such a reading which will touch the hearts of other fathers (and as poetry does, But for a systematic search we need more clues, such as name of author, name of print, or perhaps the first line or two. I surely hope our readers can help.

Dear Doris: I am 15 years old. I want to be a movie actress and I'm serious. But I'd like to be a movie director. The problem is that I don't know where to start.

Also, all actresses are pretty, and I have an extremely big nose. I believe plastic surgery could help. Can they really shrink noses? Great Hopes! Are They Big? Dear Great Hopes: Not exactly "shrink" (as in washing) but they do make noses smaller through plastic surgery. You need to talk to your parents and your family doctor about this.

As for acting, take part in the drama club at school and in a local drama group. Get all the experience you can, both on the stage and behind the scenes. If you have talent, you'll get to know people who will help you find the way to the right places.

(Is it a point of etiquette that is troubling you? Doris can tell you how it's done in Canada. Write to her in care of this newspaper.)

McLaren — Dean

College Hill United Church was the setting for the Feb. 16 wedding of Beverley Armstrong Dean and John Lloyd McLaren, performed by Rev. Roy Veasey.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Armstrong, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack McLaren.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a long red velvet gown with Princess Anne sleeves and a white veil yet hood. Her carnings were a gift from the groom. She carried a heart-shaped bouquet of white carnations and Red roses.

Jeanne Matier was the matron of honor in a red velvet gown. She carried a bouquet similar to the bride's.

Sherry Dean, the bride's son, was ring bearer.

The groom's brother Glen McLaren was best man. Ushers were brother Robert McLaren, was an usher assisted by Cecil Matier.

After a reception in the Fiesta Room of the Quinte Hotel, the newly married couple travelled to Montreal for their honeymoon.

They now reside at 94 Sidney Street, Belleville.

Nearly 300 women attended the fifth meeting of the Belleville Christian Women's Club, a non-denominational group which meets monthly for a program of music and speakers. The group, which was set up locally by two professional organizers from the Kansas City-based Stonecroft Ministries, has been drawing large crowds every month.

People and Events

St. Ola's United Church Women will hold a pot luck supper and bake sale evening March 20 in St. Ola orange hall.

At the most recent meeting of the Trinity Belt at the home of Lila Palmateer, Pearl Wood acted a skit called "Minister Shopping."

The community concert campaign in Belleville began with a dinner meeting and party preceding the final concert of the season, "Songs by Six."

President, Bob Ord introduced Betty Pauble, the new representative from Columbia Artists in New York.

Mrs. Pauble spoke of the history and purpose of Community Concerts. She said the three most important aims of community concerts are to produce good music with the finest artists appearing on the stage, to bring this entertainment to the communities which eliminates travel to larger centres and to do it on a modest budget so that all members of the community can afford to participate.

Because almost 800 committee workers and dozens more are involved Community Concerts are able to achieve these aims.

Mrs. Cecil Brown, campaign chairman, thanked those who are assisting with the campaign.

Mrs. Jim Stanafield, co-chairman, arranged the coffee party.

Campaign headquarters are downstairs in the Corby Public Library until Saturday, March 16 at 2 p.m.

St. Andrew's Church Hall, Marmora, will be the scene of a public meeting Thursday, March 21, when Dr. R.C. Burr, of Kingston will speak on cancer research and the Canadian Cancer Society. The program begin at 8 p.m.

MAGIC LADY
By Cosmic
Remember the song "It's In It When You Do It To Me Baby"? Well I'm across yesterday's Intelligencer and there it is in the Bible of the world.
The Best It Yet To Come.
Now, I'm no egotist — honest like — but obviously,
I am a beautiful person and playing in the key.
Not to be long ago, I played history with Reed.
Reading, writing, 'rithmetic, and geography, and I remember the schoolmasters saying, "Reed, you're the best in the class."
Gosh, was it a long ago we were man and wife?
Children, grandchildren, our pride and joy. And heartache with our girls and boys.
There have been ones by one, well, two by two.
Raising our children was easy. Oh — I've had "The Best Is yet To Come".
The house was in quiet zone, and we had our own telephone.
Every now and then I'd hear Father's voice — Mother!
Was it as long ago my mate was my best friend?
Oh, how I wish I had what they sin' . . . "The Best Is Yet to Come".
My hearing is not as good and now I use a cane.
Was it so long ago I learned to be patient?
Lady, I've been so richly blessed, my health, wealth, and happiness.
Yes, I've had my ups and downs, but I know the best is yet to come.
For I know of the lord written said — "THE BEST IS YET TO COME".
Pictured above, Mrs. Reed, Magic Lady, with her husband Bill and two grandchildren, Jeffrey and Jason.
Would it that back of mine, with my hearing aid, I could hear the lord say, well done thou good and faithful servant, you have been a beautiful person.
Thanks for the memories, Magic Lady.

Housewives New Servant Class

NEW YORK (AP) — Housewives have good reason for going in person, says a psychiatrist who considers the old expression appropriate "or today.

"Going to pieces is the old expression for a breakdown," said Dr. Robert Seidenberg. "But it's a better description of the lives of housewives today. They must meet their household duties, their children's needs and handle their housework. Their lives are fragmented as they spend more time with, inchiders than with their families."

Dr. Seidenberg says housewives are the new servant class in North American life.

"The husband's life has a structured career to it. But except time he is transferred to a new community, a wife must make new friends, express herself to establish a new identity. Even when moves don't occur that often, a housewife's life is in a bunch of pieces," he said.

Seidenberg, author of "Corporate Wives, Corporate Casualties," explores the issue in his book. He practises in Syracuse, N.Y., where around 100 of the largest corporations in the United States have branches, and where he encountered many "corporate wives" in practice.

"Professionally, I see wives and children rarely bands. The traumatic aspects of consciously fragmenting a woman's life shedding her credentials for each move, the emotional sensitivity of women may take tranquilizers, begin to drink or feel depressed.

"Two things happen to children. Having and being families closer together but they also many overload the system. Mothers expect more of children in the way of gratification. This even happens in countries like Japan," Seidenberg said.

He added that his book "came partly from his own dissatisfaction with theories in his disciplines. Then he began to get letters of reaction from women across the country who said he described their problems exactly.

"Women have little choice about moving. If they don't, they may be guilty of desertion; the law supports the husband.

"The law is not alone. Machismo, which individual men have, corporations also have," Seidenberg said.

"I once asked an executive with a giant corporation what happened if he had a woman executive to promote and transfer. He said he first talked to her husband to find out if it would be okay."

Seidenberg has found little direct investigation of wives by researchers. He says that instead, such investigation is turned over to sociological research organization, or is medicalized so that it appears to involve health care and benefits.

"Corporate America must answer the question of how much of a man they buy when they buy his salary. A line has to be drawn. A corporation buys a man's skills and a certain degree of loyalty, but it cannot and should not expect to own the whole family," he said.

The psychiatrist believes that women in the future will be persons in their own right, working at least part-time. This, he said, would be the real solution to the problem of the corporate wife.

Kill or Cure Home Remedies

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Narcotics, poisons and liquor all figured strongly in last century's home remedies that sound as though, they might really be kill or cure.

Mary Bardett found a collection of them in an 1892 Columbia Cook Book that belonged to her grandmother. Mrs. Bartlett found it in the bayonet in her late father's farm.

Typical of the cook books of the era includes household ideas, home remedies, sick room hints and table etiquette.

One cold-cure remedy suggests soaking feet in hot mustard and water, then applying a bran or oatmeal poultice on your chest. Another calls for grains of Dover's powder and an hour afterward, a pint of hot gruel. Dover's powder was powdered opium.

For a persistent cough, it recommends a mixture of one ounce of essence of hoarhock, two ounces of castor oil and one teaspoon of camphor, shaken thoroughly and added to one pint of molasses.

Belladonna, a poison, was frequently prescribed for sore throat and headache. Another popular remedy stuffed the noses was nux vomica, of which the active ingredient was strychnine.

One toilet preparation that sounds particularly drastic contained one teaspoon of carbolic acid in one pint of rose water as a cure for dandruff.

A spirited hair tonic was made from two ounces of French brandy, two ounces of bay rum and one ounce of castor oil, well mixed.

A remedy for removing freckles might make women today decide to keep them.

It instructed you to beat an iron shovel red hot and throw on it a spoonful of myrrh powder. Cover your head and your face with a sheet to keep in the fumes. Repeat this three times. Then heat the shovel again and pour on it two teaspoons of white wine. Steam the face with this three times.

Another recipe, which was also used to remove tan, was made from fresh ground horseradish and sour milk which was left standing 12 hours, then strained.

Eight Children, 71 Cougars And Still Going Strong at 85

TOPINO B.C. (CP) — In the last 52 years, Mrs. Lawson discarded her first name, survived four husbands, had eight children and shot 71 cougars.

She also built up a world-wide dahlia bulb business, raised chickens, cleared land and ran the Boat Basin B.C. post office, which now is run by her son Tommy.

"I ran it from 1936 until about three years ago," she says. "But the government discovered I was 83 and made me resign."

"I still do the bookkeeping though."

Mrs. Lawson 85, says she was born a city-slicker. Born in Sacramento, Calif., and educated in South Africa and England, she was settled into life in a fishing village on the Kitsilano district of Vancouver.

Selling pets became a lucrative business for her. She would buy animals through the back door and sell them through the front door and at considerably higher prices.

"People were always coming to me for help with their children," she recalls, "and while I may have been a bit of a wheeler-dealer, I did have three children, too."

Then the family fortunes changed and Mrs. Lawson found herself making a living out of the rain forest on the West Coast of Vancouver Island.

"It wasn't the easiest thing for a city born-and-bred girl to cope with," she says. "But it was something I had to do and be done.

"I had to find a way to support my family because my first husband, willing as he was to work, was a drifter as I did about living in the bush."

They arrived at Boat Basin 32 miles north of the Vancouver Island community, in 1915.

"I gave up my first name when I came here," she says. "Once the locals knew what it was, they'd call it just for the sake of calling it. They had me run ragged."

Mrs. Lawson and her first husband, William Rae-Arthur, grew vegetables and brought up chickens and goats. But money still was short so Mrs. Lawson came up with the idea of growing and marketing dahlias. Her business has grown to the point where she now sends her dahlias all over the world at a nominal price of 10 cents a bulb.

She's best known among area residents for killing the cougars which were after her goats and chickens. One of them went after her.

"He was coming right for me," she remembers with a slight shudder. "So I shot him and closed my eyes. I thought for sure that was my last moment."

But the shot found its mark. There were other adventures she shared with her four husbands.

"I didn't want to be left all alone up here," she explains, "so when my husbands died I remarried."

She denies that she's a hermit. "It's just that I'm happy right where I am. And anyhow I haven't had time to go gadding about."

"This patch of land took me 23 years to clear, and we had to go trapping every winter.

"I guess I'm not bad for 85."

Ann Landers Visit Before It's Too Late

Dear Ann Landers: I just returned from a 3,000-mile car trip. My father's younger brother died. He was only 58. His death was sudden and unexpected.

My father went to pieces during the service and wept uncontrollably beside the casket. He had to be prodded to move from the cemetery. Of course, he was deeply grieved, but what was really bothering him was guilt. For years he had been saying he didn't have the time or money to go see his brother. Now, when it's too late, he's found both the time and the money. I have never seen anyone so broken up at any time in my life.

Please, Ann, print this letter for the millions of people who think they can't spare the time or money to go see someone they love. Let them answer this question: If you received a phone call with news terrible enough to cause you to go to pieces, would you go? Well, why not go now while you can enjoy one another? It's always later than you think.—Sad Nephew Daughter

Dear Daughter: There's an old Yiddish expression, a promise to friends and relatives: "We will get together at simchas," which means happy occasions. They know only too well that they will get together when tragedy strikes! Thank you for a provocative letter.

Dear Ann Landers: I let my boyfriend leave in with me because I thought I was pregnant and felt sure he would marry me. It turned out that I was not pregnant and he is still paying the rent, the phone bill, and buying the groceries.

I work long hours at a job I hate because I have to get energy to go out during the week. I need every bit of strength I've got for cooking, housework and laundry. On weekends I would enjoy an evening of diversion, if only a movie, but my boyfriend always has someplace to go that doesn't include me. He is hardly ever at home except to eat and sleep.

Last week I got fed up and told him to get out. He broke down and cried. I couldn't stand it. What should I do, Ann? I'm sure he is cheating on me but I am afraid to be alone.—Misery Like Mary

Dear Mary: Get with it, kiddo. You are alone. I see no evidence whatever of companionship. That fellow has got living room and bread and laundry and you are getting most. That has to be 50 hours to clear out. If he cries, give him a box of paper towels and wish him luck.

Vocalists Please

By EUGENE LANG

An evening of delightful musical entertainment brought (in 1973-74 local Community Concert Series to its conclusion at the hundreds who were in attendance at BCI Auditorium were treated to two hours of vocal artistry by a half dozen young singers who have the appellation of Songs by Six.

All soloists in their own rights with distinguished musical careers to their credit, this coterie of one soprano, one tenor, two mezzo-sopranos and two baritones presented a show of many numbers that exhibited their vocal attestations either in solo work, or groupings ranging from duets through to sextets. Vocal balances were achieved with craftsmanship of projection that demonstrated their sheer joy in singing, regardless of type of song that they chose to offer.

Compositions by American tunesmiths made up the majority of the program, beginning with four Country Songs set to poems by Robert Frost with music by Randall Thompson. Although unknown to our local listeners, they were of interesting calibre using semi set song structures.

Leonard Bernstein was represented by three French Songs from his incidental music to the play The Lark, a drama depicting the trial of Joan of Arc. A certain medieval tinge was inherent in these songs, but we have heard better from Mr. Bernstein's prolific pen.

Varied selections from the productions of Gilbert and Sullivan were captivatingly realized, these offerings receiving high measure of applause from the audience. These old chestnuts just never fail to please, and they proved their worth as perennial favorites in the bouncing renditions given by Songs by Six.

The concluding part of the program was made up of many songs from the popular American Musical Scene during the past few decades. Stylishly conceived arrangements were presented in nearly every instance that made for definite audience appeal. The musical value of these songs might not reach the category of masterpieces, but their present popularity was added to by the renditions of Songs by Six. Extremely enhancing piano accompaniments were turned in by pianist David Ralph.

All in all, it was an evening of entertainment and enjoyment in the lighter vein. The main courses of our musical meal were served to us in the previous two concerts, and here we finished off with Schlagobers' (American Style) — dessert with all the toppings. So ends the fortieth year.

Grants Frozen

OTTAWA (CP) — About 40 leading arts organizations, ranging from the National Ballet and the Stratford Festival down, will have their federal government Canada Council grants virtually frozen in the new fiscal year starting April 1.

Overpowered

TORONTO (CP) — Parliament is powerless to stop the rapid growth of the civil service bureaucracy because the bureaucracy's "own weight in numbers" has "overpowered the politicians," author and lawyer Richard Hoffner said Thursday.

He told the Empire Club that the number of civil servants in each Ministry has grown to 11,851 in 1974 from 257 in 1900.

AT THE PARK — It is common practice for movie theatres to advertise their coming attractions by means of posters, but Cinema 1 at the Quinte Mall Cinemas has gone one step further. Manager Terry Hicks, above, is shown putting up a poster announcing the Cinema 1 showing of "American Graffiti" which opens today. Hicks is also putting up a poster announcing the coming attraction, "Jesus Christ Superstar," which will be shown at the theatre from June 17th to 23rd.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Saturday, March 16 —

Aries (March 21-April 19) If you are caught off balance today it will be because you have assumed others are in accord with your plans. They aren't.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Some work or service you are having performed is not being done properly. If you don't check, you will be disappointed.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) In a situation where you share an interest there is a problem that is known by him but not by you. Ask questions.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) Don't make any major decisions regarding changes that will affect your future plans at this time. Be patient.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) It is best you not tackle a task today that you resent doing. Wait until you are in a better frame of mind.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You feel obligated to entertain those who can advance your interests. Don't do it. Unless your hearts in it, it will backfire.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You will feel very insecure today about things you think are going to happen. Dismiss these doubts.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Set aside material interests today. Direct your thinking to something pleasurable. You can worry about money later.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Someone you have business dealings with isn't treating you as openly and above-board as you treat him. Be on guard.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) This is not a good day to try to advance career goals. Something you are not aware of is working against you.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your attitude today is likely to isolate you from full participation with others. Don't be a recluse.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) Today's activities will involve you with persons you are better off avoiding. Don't be taken in by their wiles.

Births Lower

LONDON (CP) — Live births in England and Wales dropped by 15,000 to 674,000 in 1973, making a total fall of 178,000 since 1968. The two areas now in near situation of "zero population growth."

Repair Hernia Soon as Possible

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Last fall I was told by my doctor that I have an incipient inguinal hernia (rupture or hernia in the groin). The hernia has not improved but it has not got much worse either. So said I would probably need an operation some time.

How will I know when the hernia is bad enough to require the operation? I am 33 and lead a physically active life. — Mrs. R.

Any hernia is "bad enough" to warrant surgery, although in the majority of cases it is in place in the abdominal wall—does not get better by itself. The only thing it can do I says worse. This occurs at variable rates in different people. It may stay small and not be troublesome for quite some time. Or it may enlarge rather rapidly.

Worst of all, a loop of intestine may be pushed through the gap and become trapped. This is a "strangulated hernia," and not only is very painful but is extremely perilous, since the trapped tissue will be unable to get blood circulation and becomes gangrenous.

When that happens, it's an emergency which has to be taken care of immediately to save the patient's life.

Some folks, of course, bumble along with a hernia for a double hernia, one on each side) for years, usually resorting sooner or later to trusses. Whether or how soon the hernia becomes strangulated, or becomes painful, or too much nuisance, is unpredictable. That is a gamble that some patients take—but I wouldn't take that gamble myself.

So my answer to you is just this: the sooner the hernia is repaired surgically, the simpler it will be, and you avoid the risk of a possible emergency. Choose a time that suits you, most preferably a time when hospitals aren't overcrowded. It's what is called "elective surgery." Do it at your convenience but don't put it off indefinitely.

Note to Mrs. J.N.M.: No, penicillin and vitamin B-12 will not make arthritis "act up."

Note to Md.: No, continued use of the pill does not postpone menopause. It comes at the appointed time, regardless.

By Oswald and James Jacoby.

The late Sidney Silodor of Philadelphia was noted for his smooth style at bidding and play. He seldom did anything sensational, but when he did step out of character his sensations! bid or play was always based on logic—not a hunch.

He opened the five of spades against South's three notrump contract. After dummy played low South captured East's jack with the king. Then South led the deuce of hearts.

Sidney studied for a brief moment and played the ace. A second spade lead knocked out dummy's last ace, eventually ace of diamonds and three last spades.

You can all see what would have happened if Sidney had ducked. South would have won the trick with dummy's queen and promptly knocked out the ace of diamonds to wind up with two spades, one heart, four diamonds, two clubs and the rubber.

Sidney's reason for the ace of hearts play was that it would have been normal for South to start on dummy's long diamond suit. Then, why was he leading a heart?

Sidney decided that South needed a heart before starting the really important suit and Sidney was not going to let him get it.

Bay Ice Hangs In

The past winter now fast drawing to an official end may have been a relatively easy one but it couldn't be proved by ice in the Bay of Quinte.

With the exception of open channels in the area of the Bay Bridge, winter's ice still remain in the bay at Belleville and there is no possibility that last year's early breakup will be matched.

James Scriven, manager of the water filtration plant in the city's west end says that last year the ice went out on March 13 — the earliest in the history of such record keeping.

"Our records go back to about 1933," said the plant manager. "Apparently before that they didn't care about when the ice went out."

Girl Hit On Reserve

An 8-year-old RR 1 Deseronto girl was taken to Lennox and Addington General Hospital after struck by a truck on York Rd. west of Highway 49 Thursday.

Laurie Ann Maracle was admitted to hospital for observation. She is in satisfactory condition. A hospital spokesman said today she sustained "mostly abrasions."

The girl was struck, while walking by a truck driven by Percy Austin Maracle, 52, of RR 1, Deseronto.

Belleville provincial police have not completed their investigation of the accident.

Northern Gets Contract

MONTREAL — Northern Electric Company, Limited, today announced that its US subsidiary, Northern Telecom, Inc., Boston, was awarded a $2.3 million contract by the Anchorage, Alaska, city council for an SP-1 electronic switching system.

The Northern Telecom bid to the Alaskan city won out over four competitive systems. Principal factors listed by Jack Harris, Jr., manager of Anchorage Telephone Utility, in his evaluation report to city council favoring the SP-1 were the system's low maintenance costs, high reliability and that it was a system with proved performance.

Party Executive Ban Leads to PC Protest

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

An Ontario government decision prohibiting provincial civil servants from serving on the executives of political party organizations has been protested by the Belleville Progressive Conservative Association.

Fred Deacon, association president, told the organization's annual meeting Thursday night, a complaint had been sent to Allan Eagleson, Ontario Progressive Conservative Association president.

The restriction, announced last fall, cost the Belleville association three directors — all women, Mr. Deacon said.

"I can see one approach — that the government doesn't want civil servants actively involved in politics," Mr. Deacon added later in an interview.

"But people have civil rights as well. Why should anybody, because of their job, be barred from politics? I think we can carry conflict of interest too far."

Legislation can be carried to a point where "you start to impose on people's rights to participate in the political process," added Mr. Deaton, who recently served five years on the province's Criminal Injuries Compensation Board.

Two cabinet members — Correctional Services Minister Dr. Richard Potter, MPP Quinte, and Provincial Social Development Secretary Margaret Birch — were among the audience at the Shrine Club when Mr. Deacon aired the association's complaint.

The meeting returned Mr. Deacon to another term as association president.

Other executive members: Roy Jeffrey, past-president; Vera Morphy, Harold Vaughan, Gerry Brennan, vice-presidents; Bill McBride, secretary; Dorothy Tugnette, treasurer. Directors — Phil Graham, Marg Orr, Bess Shore, Peggy Perry, George Mills, Jan Brady, Gary Sherman, Harold Whaley, Jim Malcolm, Stan Wiggins.

Mrs. Morphy was also named chairman of the association's women's council and Margaret Whaley, secretary-treasurer.

Separate School Board, Teachers Sign Pact

Teachers and trustees of the Hastings-Prince Edward separate school board Thursday signed a two-year salary agreement effective until Aug. 31, 1976. Zdenek Kvarda, chairman of the trustees' negotiating team said the agreement represents an over-all increase in cost to the board of about 8 per cent in 1974-75 and about 13 per cent in 1975-76.

The salary schedule covers three separate terms. For the first term from September to December 1974, the lowest salary that can be paid is $8,200 and the highest $17,400. The $8,200 paid a teacher with an elementary school teacher's certificate and no experience represents a $500 increase over the previous schedule. Most teachers will receive a $100 increase for the second term of the schedule from January to June, 1975 and a $200 increase in 1975-76.

A unique provision of the 1975-76 term is a clause passing on to the teachers 75 per cent of every 1 per cent increase in government grants over a 6 per cent annual increase in spending ceilings.

A clause has been inserted into the agreement guaranteeing an increase in travel expenses above the present 15 cents a mile for every 10 per cent increase in fuel prices.

The board has increased its contribution to a group life insurance plan from 50 two-third per cent to 75 per cent. For the first time the board will offer a dental health plan, paying 75 per cent of the cost.

For the first time the board will grant sabbatical leave to teachers after seven years' service. They will be paid 50 per cent of their regular salary and a 5 per cent allowance for each dependent to a maximum of 75 per cent.

The board will continue to pay an additional allowance up to $800 a school for teachers who coach school teams. No teacher can receive more than $300 annually in coaching fees.

Frank Evans was chairman of the teachers' negotiating team and members were Frank Evans was chairman William Guay and Jo-Anne chairman of the trustees, committee and members were Msgr. J.F. Sullivan and Austin Scott.

Both trustees and teachers said the negotiations were conducted with honesty, openness and fairness. Mr. Evans added that the new contract will not limit any existing programs in the schools and none may be increased over the two-year period.

Contract Signed

Trustees and teachers of the Hastings-Prince Edward separate school board signed a two-year salary contract Thursday afternoon . . . one of the first in the province and the only two year contract ratified by teachers and trustees so far this year. Making the document official are the two negotiating team chairmen, Frank Evans for the teachers and Zdenek Kvarda for the trustees and, standing behind them, Msgr. J. P. Sullivan, Bill Guay and Austin Scott.

Recreation Budget Boosted

Organized recreation in Belleville will cost almost $600,000 in 1974 if the budget recommendation of the city recreation - arena committee gets approval by city council.

The committee estimates of recreational costs this year are set at $595,000, up more than $180,000 over the figure approved by council last year.

The year's recreation department estimates were arrived at this week at a five-and-a-half-hour budget meeting that saw staff proposals cut by approximately $80,000.

The $595,000 figure will now go to city council for budget consideration.

In addition to the depart ment's current operating budget are capital expenditure estimates for the construction of an addition to the senior citizens drop-in centre on Pinnacle Street and provision for a new east end skating rink.

The estimated cost of the drop-in centre addition has been given as $139,000 of which council has already approved $85,000. A further $50,000 will be required from city coffers with the balance to be paid through provincial grants or subsidies.

A figure of $400,000 is in the capital works budget for the proposed east end rink.

And with council approval the recreation committee this year will continue its program of un-dating for the Memorial Arena.

Planned are renovations to the arena's main foyer and canteen area which would see a new four-door entranceway with dual ticket selling facilities.

The main canteen area would be completely renovated and enlarged with service facilities relocated against the north exterior wall of the arena.

Also hoped to be completed this year are the men's washrooms in the southeast corner of the arena.

The site for the proposed east end rink is still under consideration by the arena committee, although the city manager has recommended purchase of the former brewing alley building on Dundas Street East, and its renovation for rink purposes.

The new east end rink would be constructed with the view of 12-month operational availability.

In addition to the planned Memorial Arena renovations, provision of a storage area at the Ben Bleecker Auditorium is another capital cost that would come out of this year's current budget.

The year's proposed budget includes $26,000 in grants to minor sports and the Kinsmen swimming pool, a new roof for the Parkdale community centre and minor renovations to the Hillcrest community centre.

Recreation director Lorne Williams said that in addition to playground operations, continuation of the joint YMCA-Recreation day camp at Vandervoater park is proposed this year.

Also this year will see the new Centennial School park site and nearby Ontario School for the Deaf athletic field starting to reach their potential in programmed recreation.

The four tennis courts adjacent to the Dick Ellis Rink will be in operation as will three soccer pitches, three softball diamonds and the baseball diamond.

Mr. Williams said the OSD track would be available for track and field events, while the OSD pool would again be in operation during the summer season.

Potter Pleased With Achievement

"Most interesting. At times . . . most frustrating."

It was Dr. Richard Potter reporting home to his political base on his last two years as a key figure in Ontario public affairs.

The last time he spoke to the Belleville Progressive Conservative Association, Dr. Potter was Ontario's controversial health minister. Thursday night, he was back at another of the organization's annual meetings as correctional services minister — a career change necessitated by the recent provincial Cabinet shuffle.

It was one of the few meetings Dr. Potter has been able to attend in his Quinte riding since he was assigned the health ministry. His time in the interim has been absorbed with evolving new methods of health care delivery for the province.

He gave the association this evaluation of how he felt he succeeded: "While we by no means achieved our ultimate objective, I think we've been quite successful. We've had the opportunity to initiate complete revision of the health services in the province, to develop new programs of health delivery services."

Among the "flak" raised by his program was criticism over restricted hospital budgets. Yet, in five months $47 million had been extended.

"So while there has been a lot of criticism about some of the programs that were initiated, I can assure you through the provincial grants are still savings to be realized."

His new appointment had been a "tremendous relief, to a certain extent," acknowledged Dr. Potter, who replaced Syl Apps, Kingston MPP, in correctional services.

"I'm looking forward to the challenge in this area," said Dr. Potter. "It's going to be very difficult to follow a man who has achieved so much with very little fanfare."

Citizen Involvement Will Be Emphasized

Social change in Ontario life will see more emphatic future involvement by the people themselves, Provincial Social Development Secretary Margaret Birch indicated Thursday night.

Citizenship participation — by both individuals and the community — will hopefully become an integral part of decision-making on social programs, she told the annual meeting of the Belleville Progressive Party Association.

The recent Cabinet appointment of Mrs. Birch casts her as co-ordinator of all government ministries involved in social development.

New to her post, following a recent Cabinet shuffle, Mrs. Birch shunned specific policy statements. But she broadly defined the philosophy involved in her government assignment:

"Quite simply, our priority is people. And our primary objective is enhancing the quality of the social and cultural aspects of life in Ontario."

Emphasis for developing social programs needed to enable Ontario to grow and prosper increasingly on a local base, she said in a brief address.

The community will play a more obvious role with government hopefully finding local initiatives.

She told the meeting: As more citizens understand the new objectives "we will be able to extend the processes which these decisions are made in broader and increasingly broader cross-section of the province."

Thanks, Chief

Belle Theatre To Close Doors

A Front Street movie house that has entertained Belleville and district residents for almost half a century is to close its doors.

It was announced this week that the Belle Theatre has been sold to the development firm of S. and A. Investments Ltd. The last picture at the Belle will be shown on March 31.

Owned by Famous Players, the Bell had been on the market for some time and its eventual closing was indicated with the construction of the two new theatres at the Quinte Mall.

The local office of Fraser and O'Neil Ltd. sold the theatre building but the new owners have made no announcement of the use to which the theatre building or site will be put.

Building Permits In Spring Spurt

Issuance of a building permit for the new Lamplighter Realty Ltd. condominium complex for the city's waterfront has boosted Belleville's building total to nearly $3 million in recent weeks.

The Lamplighter permit for the nine-storey apartment structure on South Pinnacle Street is for $1,666,000 with construction of the development to commence immediately.

Other big building permits issued so far this month include a $230,000 structure for Mundet Crowns Ltd. to be built on University Ave. The Toronto-based firm manufactures bottle caps.

Also this month a permit for a second factory structure, valued at $119,000, has been issued to Cornerstone Builders Ltd. The structure slated for construction on Hanna Street, will be leased to Red Beech Industries, manufacturers of special use, custom-built furniture.

During February permits with a construction value of $260,000 were issued at city hall.

The February permits included one for a new office building on Dundas Street West. The structure, already under construction by Rollins Construction, is being built at the corner of Dundas and Applewood Drive.

Earns Praise from Ranger Coach

Veisor Delivers the Goods

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Chicago goalie Mike Veisor is small but mighty when he gets a chance to play for the Black Hawks in a National Hockey League game.

The Rangers found the wispy Veisor a force to be reckoned with Thursday when they edged a 5-3 decision to the Hawks in New York.

Elsewhere, the combination of Boston Bruins 4-3 victory over Buffalo and Toronto Maple Leafs 2-1 win over New York Islanders, all but ended the fat-head' hopes for a playoff berth in the East Division.

In one other game, Philadelphia Flyers banged to a 4-2 decision over St. Louis Blues.

In tonight's action, Atlanta Flames will be guests of Vancouver Canucks and California Golden Seals entertain Pittsburgh Penguins.

Veisor doesn't get much chance to be forceful, playing second fiddle to iron-man Tony Esposito in the Hawks' goal.

But Wednesday night Veisor held Montreal Canadiens to a 3-3 tie, and Thursday he stopped the New York shots.

The victory was his third in five games he's played this season. One ended in a tie, and the other game had been decided when he relieved Esposito in the third period.

He had no idea he'd play either the Montreal or New York game, but said, "I'm like a pitcher in baseball. They told me I was starting as I played."

"It was the difference in the game," said coach Billy Francis, whose Rangers lost only their second game in the last 13. "You have to give the guy credit."

"There was more pressure on him than anybody else the last two nights," said veteran centre Stan Mikita, whose third-period goal proved to be the winner.

"You get down when you don't play you don't think you're part of the team. He has really showed me something the last two nights," said Veisor's team-mate.

Boston 4 at Buffalo 3

Phil Esposito scored his 60th and 61st goals of the season to pace the Bruins to victory. His first came 16 the first minute of each of the second and third periods and his second one—35-footer—was the winner, at the 40-second mark. The lost left the Sabres 10 points behind fourth-place Leafs with only 11 games remaining.

NY Islanders 1 at Toronto 2

Veteran Eddie Shack scored the winning goal, received a standing ovation from a capacity crowd at Maple Leaf Gardens and earned the first-star rating after Toronto's triumph over the Islanders, who are tied with the Canucks for last place in the East. A combination of four Toronto wins and four Buffalo defeats would eliminate the Sabres.

St. Louis 2 at Philadelphia 4

The Flyers soared to their seventh consecutive victory and extended their undefeated streak to eight games. Leading the attack was centre Bobby Clarke, with his 30th goal of the season. He also earned two assists. Philadelphia, leaders in the West Division, remained eight points ahead of the runner-up Hawks, while St. Louis trails Los Angeles Kings and Atlanta Flames, tied for third, by five points.

Harris Getting Tough

By THE CANADIAN PRESS.

Coach Billy Harris ticked off the Toros Thursday night after the Toronto team dropped a 3-2 decision to Quebec Nordiques in a World Hockey Association game.

"Some of our athletes are overweight and overpaid," Harris said.

He said he had placed a chart of playing weights on the wall of the Toros' dressing room and he wants the players to attain them by March 27.

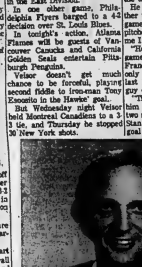
"If they don't they'll be suspended without pay when they reach the required weight," Harris said.

The coach refused to give names, but it was rumored that one player he was concerned about was team captain Wayne Carleton.

Harris said he was ready to take his chances with the club's flamboards if his regulars didn't shed their fat.

"I mean business," he said.

Goalie Richard Brodeur was brilliant in goal for the Nordiques, blocking 36 shots.



In other WHA games Thursday, New England Whalers and Houston Aeros coasted to easy victories. Whalers, leaders in the East, downed Vancouver Blazers 6-3, while the Aeros, top-place team in the West, shut out Los Angeles Sharks 8-0. The Cougars defeated Minnesota Fighting Saints 7-4.

New England 6 at Vancouver 3

Hugh Harris collected two goals to spark the Whalers who broke a 3-3 deadlock of the third period on a breakaway goal by Tom Webster. Harris's goals provided all the scoring New England needed. The Whalers have dropped only one of in four of six games between both teams this season, but the Vancouver club has received the support of 2,562 fans.

Houston 8 Los Angeles 0

The Aeros scored seven goals in the second period en route to their shutout victory. Murray Heatley had two for the Saints but scored nothing after Watson began scoring leader, was restricted to one assist. The loss for Minnesota was the team's third in a row after an unbeaten string of 11 games.

Jacques Laperriere

Future Uncertain

MONTREAL (CP) — The hockey future of Jacques Laperriere, veteran of the Montreal Canadiens defence, appears uncertain.

The National Hockey League veteran has been skating lightly for the last two weeks and there doesn't seem to be any improvement," coach Scotty Bowman said Thursday.

Laperriere is having knee ligament problems, the result of an injury in mid-January.

"You need a decision on an operation will be made March 25.

Grant injured his foot Thursday.

Trainer Bill Antonini said Grant suffered a stress fracture of the navicular bone in the game against Virginia and will be unable to play for three weeks. He could rejoin the team in a later playoff round if the Q's make it that far.

Different Approach For 'Nothing' Games

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Quebec Remparts and Cornwall Royals apparently have different philosophies when it comes to playing out the "nothing games" between now and next week's end of the regular-season. Quebec Major Junior A Hockey League schedule.

The Remparts, firmly entrenched in second place in the league's East Division, visited Drummondville Thursday night and were handed a 5-4 loss by the lowly Rangers.

The Royals, holders of first place in the West Division, at least had the home crowd pulling for them in their "nothing" contest with the fledgling Hull Festivals. They scored a 16-1 win.

In the only other contest, Montreal Juniors blasted Laval Nationals 12-5.

Two goals by Daniel St. Cyr in the late stages of the third period helped Drummondville pull into a 3-1 tie, then boosted that to 5-3 at then end of the second. Claude Lacasse scored the other three Rangers' goals.

In Cornwall, the home team opened a 6-0 lead in the first period,increased it to 13-0 after 40 minutes of play and coasted to the win over the Festivals.

Gary MacGregor led the scoring parade with three goals while Reg Oder with Royals, two.

Diotelli, John Nazar, Pierre Brassard, Doug Chase and Bob Fernand Dupont added two each. Marc Brazeau, Kevin Treacy and Dave Rooks were the other Cornwall marksmen.

Louis Lortie's goal late in the third period averted a shutout for the visitors.

Rick Moore tallied three times to lead the Juniors over their crosstown rivals while Fernand Dupont added two.

In tonight's games, Chicoutimi is at home to Sorel, Quebec plays host to Cornwall and Trois-Rivieres travels to Shawinigan.

Bears Move Two Up

PEMBROKE (CP) — Smiths Falls Bears moved two games ahead in their best-of-seven Central Junior Hockey League final playoff with Pembroke Lumber Kings winning 5-2 Thursday night before 1,700 Pembroke fans.

Barry Kerfoot scored twice for Smiths Falls his second goal gaining the win at 14:19 of the third period. After Pembroke had tied the score 2-2 midway through the period.

Brian Johnston, Terry Fournier and Gary Nichol scored the other Smiths Falls goals. Randy Rich and Peter Paliseki scored for Pembroke as the final beat the Bears to a 1-1 first-period score and a 3-1 second-period edge.

The game was held up 45 minutes in the third period while officials patched a large hole in the ice by one of the goalposts.

In all, the Bears, who lead the series 2-0, outshot the Kings 37-26.

The series resumes tonight in Smiths Falls.

Hull Has Advice For Lou Angotti

WINNIPEG (CP) — Playing coach Bobby Hull of the World Hockey Association's Winnipeg Jets had little to say about comments made earlier this week by former team-mate Lou Angotti regarding his coaching problems.

Angotti, now coach of the National Hockey League's St. Louis Blues, said Hull was having trouble maintaining discipline as a coach because he wasn't playing. Hull retired when he was with Chicago Black Hawks of the NHL.

Angotti said Hull was allowed to miss practice, could fly out of town on business and kept his Chicago teammates waiting on the bus while he signed autographs.

Hull replied Wednesday:

"Why doesn't Lou say something about the times I went to bat for the players when they wanted some communication with management. Any time they wanted something, they always came to me.

"And as far as them walking off the bus for my part when he was with Chicago Black Hawks of the NHL.

"They could have gone to hell for the nearest pub and to hell with the bus leaving."

"Some people forget easily."

Gordie Studies Son's Form

15 Years Ago — The World Championship

By DOUG WALSH ... Sports Editor

"It certainly doesn't seem that long ago," mused Gordie Bell over a coffee, earlier this week.

But it is 15 years ago this week that the Belleville McFarlands, with Gordie Bell supplying the clutch goaltending that is so necessary, pulled out all the stops and won the World Hockey Championship at Prague, Czechoslovakia.

Today, Gordie is putting his experience to good use. As coach of the Belleville McIlmoy-Maines minor hockey team, he passes on the tricks of the trade and may be pardoned if he leans a little toward the goaltenders.

Drew Stotesbury and Bruce Bell handle the goaltending duties for the McIlmoy-Maines squad.

It was Gordie's son, Bruce who drew the assignment for the opening game in Trenton, Tuesday night. And, as the photos at the top of this page show, Bruce was getting plenty of attention from the coach during the contest.

In 1959, in Prague, it was Gordie hoisting their coach Tuesday night in Trenton. Bruce followed suit. Like father like son. Bruce blanked Trenton as McIlmoy-Maines posted a 5-0 win.

As a coach, Gordie is a keen observer. His gaze never shifts from the action. And his facial expression rarely varies. He is a study in concentration.

Born in Portage La Prairie, Gordie has had many highlights during his career in hockey. And it's great to see him giving something back to the game which provided him with so many great moments.

He and brother Joe were members of the Portage La Prairie Junior team which won 25 straight games on the road to the Memorial Cup in 1942. Both pursued pro hockey careers after that memorable championship year.

Gordie and Joe made it in the big top. They saw service with New York Rangers.

Getting back to the McFarlands, Gordie very nearly wound up his career in Troy, Ohio. Only a stopover in Buffalo, New York, where he was to pick up a pair of skates, turned his steps toward Belleville.

A message, from Bep Guidolin, then coaching the McFarlands, awaited Bell in Buffalo. Guidolin must have got his point across because Gordie did come to Belleville in 1956. And he became the Macs' No. 1 goalie.

An Allan Cup victory in 1958 was reward enough. But the big one in Prague was something else again.

The high point of his long, successful tenure as a top ranked goalie did not come with the Memorial Cup, or elevation to the Buckaroos from the American Hockey League Springfield club, and no, it wasn't in Kelowna, British Columbia when he earned Macs' crew cuts the Allan Cup in 1958.

Naturally, these were all, at the old refrain goes, moments to remember.

"The big thrill was that day in Prague when we beat Russia," Gordie reveals, with a touch of pride in his voice. And while Bell reminisces, the listener gets the feeling Gordie is once again remembering vividly, each and every one of his saves in that match.

Those McFarland days were something.

They are certainly worth recalling.

And what about the other players who were brought in to play hockey here and stayed on to settle in Belleville and make contributions to the city in so many ways.

Belleville has benefited in more ways than one from the fact that so many of these imports chose to remain here and make the city their home.

Floyd Crawford (team captain of the Macs), Wayne Brown, Fiori Goegan, Lou Burke, Lionel Bolt, J.P. Lamirande and Eddie Mattiussi are still around," advises Bell and they've made their presence felt.

Each and every one of these fellows would make interesting copy. As would the homebrews, Dave Jones, Keith MacDonald, and of course, the dependable spare goalie-trainer, Don (Turk) Barclay.

Drury Degrea was manager of that world championship team. Billy Reay served as assistant manager and Ike Hildebrand was the playing coach.

Rounding out the roster were: Jean Paul Papelle, Bert Bradley, Denis Boucher, Moe Benoit, Minnie Menard, Pete Conacher, Al Dewsbury, George Gosselin, Billy Graham, Marv Edwards, Johnny McLellan and Red Berrenius.

Does Gordie Bell ever regret his decision to accept Bep Guidolin's invitation to Belleville and the Mc-Farlands?

Has he had any second thoughts about making Belleville his home?

"No way," says Gordie.

Belleville is fortunate to have Bell and the others who came to play and stayed on to become productive citizens.

Hunter, Bassin Compare Notes On the Blues

By MIKE BRADSHAW
Sports Staff

Sherry Bassin, the coach of the Pickering Panthers, is an analyst. He tears every team in the Metro Junior B League apart and finds out their weak spots and knows their strong points so he can "make use of gaps in a team and avoid the points that bridge them together."

Bassin doesn't dispend entirely on his own theories when he does his analysis. He has two other coaches that help him decide how to play.

Sherry already had his analysis of the Bramalea Blues done before he started playing the Belleville Bobcats, but when he played the Cats he "ran into a defence and goaltending that no team in the league could cope with."

Last season, the Panthers didn't even make the Metro playoffs. This season they finished in first place with Sherry Bassin coaching them.

Bassin says "the Bobcats will have no problems beating Bramalea if they continue to get the great defence they're getting and the key goaltending."

"Their defence is so versatile you just can't set up any specific plays to counter it. I think Tim Yohn is the leader of the Cats defence and he has to be about the best in the league," observed Bassin, "their four defencemen Dave Taylor, Dave Fleisch, Tim Yohn and Vern Arney) know their positions and play them excellently."

Sherry added, "They've got the goaltending that is so very important to any hockey club. Their goalie can make the key saves. The kind that pick his team up and get them going in the right direction. If a goalie can come up with those important, key saves it usually turns the momentum of a game around. So many times you see a goalie make a great stop at one end of the ice and his team runs around and skate back up the ice and scores."

"Bramalea's," commenced Bassin, "is a simple team to beat. Offensively the Blues always carry the puck up the middle. They have their centre take the puck up the ice and rag it until one of his wingmen are open."

"Hunter's defence always covers the man in front of the goal. Bramalea is a high scoring hockey club, but the only place they score from effectively is from in front of the opposition's net on "rebounds and the Cats defence men don't allow teams that second shot."

"To score goals on the Blues the Cats have to do what they can't let Bramalea do. Oakes (Bramalea) is a good goalie and it's not very often you score on him on the first shot, but Oakes is too flappy in goal. After he makes the initial save he's out of position and he is very susceptible to the second shot. Belleville can get those second shots away because the Blues' defence isn't really good at clearing men in front of the net," stated Bassin.

Coach Moe Hunter, Belleville Bobcats, feels his team and Bramalea are "two hockey clubs with a lot in common. They do a little bit of everything — hitting, forechecking — and so do we."

"My greatest concern," said Hunter, "is making sure we have one of our wingers coming back all the time. The Blues like to pass once they get out of their own end and if we get one wingman coming back and our defence standing up at the blueline they won't be able to do too much to us."

"I think we can score enough goals on Oakes," stated Moe. "We've got some pretty smart forwards who know how to operate around the net and that's where we're going to score on him."

"Bramalea's better than a pleial right now," commended Hunter, "they've just won eight out of their last nine games so we've got to win here tonight. I don't want to have to go to Bramalea for two games in a row already down one."

The Belleville coach says Rob Duncan will be starting in goal for the first game tonight at 8 p.m. at the Memorial Arena.

Lindsay Whipped 8-2, Birt's Sweeps Series

TRENTON (Special) — Birt's Handy Stand Juvenilles wrapped up their Ontario Minor Hockey Association A quarter-final series 2-1 with Lindsay in straight games here Thursday Night.

As more than 1,000 fans roarred their approval, Birts downed the visitors 8-2 in Game 4, to qualify for the semi-final series against Thornhill.

Lindsay stayed with Birt's for one period, It was 2-1 for Trenton at the first interval. The home team took command in the second, potting a pair of unanswered goals and put the game well out of reach of their opponents with a 4-1 edge in scoring in the final 20 minutes.

Winger Gilt McLean was the top producer for the Charlie Drake coached Trenton Squad, connecting for three goals. Singles were supplied by Dick Matheson, Wayne Cafferty, Al Maclntash, Mark Klemencic and Rob Cameron.

Working as pivot for McLean and Maclntash, team captain Don Armstrong helped himself to four assists. Wayne Patton and Pat Lynch took care of the Lindsay scoring.

Officials of the Trenton team know when the series with Thornhill will start but when the second game will be worked in is causing some concern.

Birt's open in Thornhill, Sunday, at 8 p.m.

But availability of ice time for the return game at Trenton's Community Garden is a problem. The Golden Hawk Midget Tournament takes over at the Gardens for one week, beginning Sunday, so it could be March 25 before the Thornhill-Trenton set gets around to the second game, says Birt's publicity direct.or, Don Taylor.

The second half of the Thursday night OMHA playoff doubleheader was a disaster for Trenton Quinte Ice Products pidgets. They bombed 14-4 by Whitby-Brooklin.

Trenton trails the best of five quarter-final 2-1 with the fourth game in Brooklin, Saturday at 9 p.m.

WINS CUP BERTH

CAIRO (Reuter) — Zaire underlined its right to represent Africa in this year's Cup soccer finals when it beat Zambia 3-0 Thursday to win the African championship. The replayed final-round match in the Nasser Stadium followed a 3-3 draw after extra time when the teams first met Tuesday.

WINS ELKS CURLING ...

THUNDER BAY, Ont. (CP) — Don Longmore's rink from Red Deer scored two points on the 10th end Thursday to defeat Wally Palendale of White Rock, B.C., to win the Elks Canadian curling championship for the second year in a row. In the consolation final Ontario's Peter McCallum of Thunder Bay beat Gene Milbury of New Brunswick 10-2.

Watkin's World Of Minor Hockey

By AUSTIN WATKIN

With the season already having completed its regular schedule, the remainder of the leagues will finish up this week with playoffs beginning for most groupings, the week of March 18. All league coaches will receive a playoff schedule as they are completed.

Novice

Belleville Credit Union led by their leading scorer Gerry Archer, held on to their slim one-point lead at the top of the standings by downing Local 1000, 6-1. Archer counted four goals to give him 46 for the season.

Second place Dixie Lee is still hot on the heels of the leaders after topping Belleville Jaycees 8-2. Allan Bunnett pumped home four goals to help Beaver Lumber outscored Warren's Esso Home Heat 8-1. Stephen Licence topped Red Shark 7-1 with Dave Wright counting six goals. Mannings Temporary Service doubled the score on Uniroyal Tiger Paws 4-2 and White's Truck Rentals clamped Sun Luck Gardens 6-1.

Atom Minor

Trevor Powell scored six goals for the second time this season, bringing his league-leading total to 46 as he led Maher Shoes in a first place clinching win over Hawkins Chips. Dennis Bergeron put an end to Mutrooey Sunoco's hopes of a first place finish when he recorded a 2-0 shutout.

Wayne Peters of Quinte Rent-Alls and Bob Emary of Eastern Business Equipment traded hat-tricks as the Rent-alls picked up a close 8-5 decision. Robbie Freeman scored three goals to help Mac's Milk down Belleville Firefighters. Quinte's TV matched Simonovs-Sears 6-1.

Atom Major

Dave Mortensen fired three goals as Belleville Yardmen beat Cherrey's Furniture World 7-5. Nicko Pitching blasted seven goals to spark his Eddie Printing team past Dairy Queen 9-3.

First place honors locked up, Wm. Belch and Sons knocked off Reid's Plumbing and Heating 7-1 as Al Derry brought his league leading goal total to 61 with a four goal display. Quinte Home Builders lost to Cole's Jewellers 4-3 and Uniroyal Winter Patrol slipped by Arnd T Esso 3-2.

Peewee Minor

Doug Austin and John Frauts each contributed three goals as Signs Unlimited won the regular season championship with an undefeated record by downing Daby's Texaco 13-3. The league champs got together 17 times and three ties on the season. The team also boasts the league scoring champion in John Bicketts who brought his goal total to 44 with a pair of counters in the club's most lopsided victory.

Craig Munroe scored a hat-trick to help 'T and C Construction to a 8-3 defeat of Motorland Chrysler. Ten Hipton Donuts blanked Bellewood Lumber 1-0 with Randy Empey chalking up the shut out. Police Association got by Kings 2-1. Ellis Printing overpowered the Gems 7-1.

Peewee Major

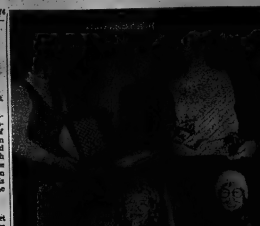
Tim McKinney doesn't let an artificial leg keep him from playing hockey. He chalked up his first shutout of the season as Bowes and Cocks Real Estate blanked Bob's Body Shop 4-0. McKinney is noted for helping out the offence as well. Records show he has at least three assists to his credit.

Led By Donnie Pope's three goals, Red Shark turned the tables on Lou Williams 7-2. Belleville Plaza clinched first place by edging Y's Men 5-4. Elliott Motors "70" outscored Ideal Vendors 3-1; Dairy Queen beat Canadian Legion 4-3 and Circle TV slipped by Belleville Conductors 3-2.

Bantam Minor

Scoring a 7-1 win over Ed's Esso, Brooks and Rozell held on to a share of first place in the standings going into the last week of play. Randy Donovan fired three goals to spark the winners. Co-leaders Belleville Real Estate Board kept pace by topping McInroy-Aldwes 5-3. Belleville Toyota topped Blake Kerr Imperials 4-3 and Kiwanis Club defeated King Penguins 8-5.

Bantam Major



Dave Jones scored three times to pace Belle Cleaners who doubled the score on Gilmer Ins. 6-4. Avia Car Rentals, who have already won the regular league title, played to a 3-3 tie with Canadian Legion. Allied Chemical edged Y's Men 5-4; Belleville Boardtown scored a narrow 7-6 win over Art's Esso and ANAF Dukes took Phil Bennett Real Estate 9-1.

Midget

The Canadian Legion who have already clinched first place, kept rolling along by tripping SKOD 9-2. Mike McClelland came up with shutout goaltending to lead Ross Royal to a 4-0 win over Stirling Sheet Metal. Demark Construction blanked Warkwick and Weeks with Ted Clarke closing the door in a 2-0 win. Uptown Billiards outscored Emperor Penguins 5-1 and Mead Johnson won from Belleville Yardmen 6-4.

Juvenile

Albert College, loser of its first 16 games, made it two wins in a row by downing Lou Williams 3-1. Pioneer Petroleum held league champion Arthur Sills 4-2 and Harvey's Drive-In beat Ontario School for the Deaf 3-1.

Designated Hitter Rule A Hit with the Braves

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The National League has been conducting cautious "experiments with the designated hitter rule this spring and Atlanta Braves are pleased with the results.

The Braves nominated Jack Pierce as their DH Thursday against New York Yankees and Pierce responded with three base hits in Atlanta's 3-1 14-inning exhibition victory.

Pierce doubled and scored in the eighth inning and did the same thing in the 12th, bringing home the winning run with a single by John Oates. Mike Hegan drove in both New York runs with a single in the third.

The Braves were able to use a DH because the game was played at the Fort Lauderdale, Fla., home of the American League Yanks.

In other exhibition games Baltimore routed Texas 12-3, Los Angeles blanked St. Louis 3-0, Chicago White Sox shaded Philadelphia 5-5, Milwaukee dumped Chicago Cubs 10-6, Boston defeated Houston 8-2, Pittsburgh trimmed Kansas City 7-1, New York Mets edged Detroit 3-2, California stopped Cleveland 7-6, San Francisco beat San Diego 7-4, and Minnesota split a squad lost 8-4 to Cincinnati and 7-5 to Montreal.

Baltimore pounded Texas pitching for 18 base hits, three by Don Zaylor.

Steve Garvey was the Los Angeles offensive star with four hits and two runs-batted-in.

Ken Henderson's three-run homer in the ninth inning lifted the White Sox past Philadelphia.

Milwaukee collected 18 base hits, including a two-run homer by Don Ellis and a three-run double by Don Money.

Reggie Cleveland of Swift Current, Sask., hurled five scoreless innings and Carlton Fisk belted a pair of homers for Boston.

Dave Parker homered, singled and drove in three runs for Pittsburgh.

Felix Millan's two-out single in the seventh gave the Mets the decisive run in the bottom of the ninth in California's triumph.

Jimmy Howarth's tie-breaking single in the ninth inning led San Francisco past San Diego.

Ken Griffey keyed a four-run Cincinnati rally in the eighth with a two-run single against Minnesota. The Twins second team was dumped by Montreal Expos' Terry Humphrey who drove in five runs with spate of homers.

Rogers Wants Repeat Of 1973 Performance

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (CP) — Steve Rogers, the right-handed pitcher who turned the season around for Montreal Expos in 1973, does not want to let the sophomore jinx bother him during the 1974 National League baseball season.

"My main concern about the sophomore jinx is that I don't want to dwell on it," Rogers said. "There's always the pressure there but instead of thinking about the fact that last year, I did the job.

"I've done it once before. I can do it again."

Rogers came up to the Expos from their class AAA farm club in Peninsula in the International League on July 31.

His first major league starting assignment was in Houston and he pitched well, leaving the game in the seventh inning for relief ace Mike Marshall, who won the game 3-2.

His second start was against Philadelphia and he twirled a one-hit shutout as the Expos defeated the Phillies 4-0. Four days later, he pitched a 1-0 shutout against the Mets in New York before making his home debut Aug. 4 with a 6-1 win over Chicago Cubs.

He finished the season with a 10-5 won-lost mark and an earned-run average of 1.54 for 154 innings pitched.

"My goals next this year is to be consistent. I want to feel good after every time out there.

"If I could have 35 starts and be consistent in all of them, it would have to be considered a good season. I guess it's the case of expanding what I did in 17 games last year to 35 this season.

"My 20-win season is the goal of every starting pitcher, it's that simple. But I just plan to go out there and pitch the best I can," Rogers added.

Expos On TV

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Expos announced Thursday that the CBC will broadcast nationally 20 of the National League baseball team's games during the 1974 season.

The telecasts are to begin with the team's home opener from Jarry Park April 6 when the club will play host to Chicago Cubs.

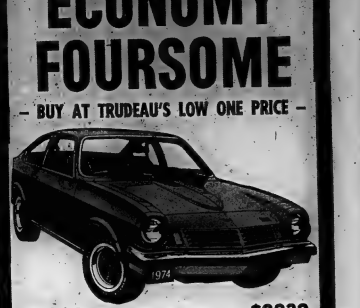
The final broadcast is scheduled for the Sept. 18 home game with New York Mets, the club announced.

Of the 20 telecasts, 15 will be on Wednesday night and five on Saturdays.

O'Brien and Miller Tops in Senior A

CAMBRIDGE, Ont. (CP) — Jim O'Brien of Orillia Terriers and Ernie Miller of Barrie Flyers skated off with the major awards in the 1973-74 Ontario Hockey Association Senior A season.

O'Brien won the Ecclestone Trophy as league scoring champion for the second time. The Orillia centre led goal scorers with 35 and added 29 assists for 64 points. Runner-up Corby Adams of Barrie had 27 goals and 33 assists for 59 points.



Miller won the Fern Belanger Trophy as the league's top goalie for the second straight year. He posted a 2.57 goals-against average and also led in shutouts with four.

Orillia winger Grant Moore, sixth in the points race, led in penalties with 36. Two more Orillia forwards, Gary Milroy and Gary Marsh, had 35 each.

O'Brien had a comfortable edge in goal scoring. Barrie's Bob Baird and Adams tied for second with 27 each, eight behind O'Brien. Baird also had the most winning goals—seven.

Barrie forward John Lunn led in penalty minutes with 207 minutes and Flyers were the most-penalized team with 506 minutes.

IN MEMORIAM

DAWS — In loving memory of a dear husband, Norman, who passed away suddenly on March 15th, 1966.
Sadly thought, when leaving home,
He would no more return.
He has left death so soon would come
And leave us here to mourn.
Yes we do not know what pain he bore,
We did not see him die,
We only know he passed away,
And gently closed his eyes.
—Lovingly remembered by Mom and Kim.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to extend our sincere appreciation to our friends, neighbors, relatives, Belleville Collegiate Institute, Quinte Secretarial College, Rev. Ian Thomson, Rev. Ian Wright, Rev. Fred Hall, Rev. J. Gilley and Rev. J. Morrison and to the ladies who acted on behalf of the Belleville Cemetery Board, Mr. Ross Wilson and staff of the Belleville Cemetery, Mr. Fred Pringle and Mr. Thomas Pringle, Mr. William Andrew, Keith Price, Doris Walker, Shirley Wood-ley.
I would like to thank my friends, relatives and neighbors for the many acts of kindness, cards, flowers and gifts while I was a patient in Belleville General Hospital and since returning home. Special thanks to Dr. Ross Wilson, Dr. Ken Hall, Dr. Ken Reynolds and nursing staff on Quinte 3 for their excellent care.
—Marilyn Rowe.

LIFE INSURANCE BRANCH MANAGEMENT

If you're an aggressive go-getter you probably have quite a personal Life Insurance sales record. You may even be in a sales supervisory capacity with your own ideas about how to get things done, you've got your own personal values, your own ambitions and you have probably taken a good swipe at self improvement since entering the Life Insurance business.

If you think it's still the most fascinating business in the world then it's time for us to meet, and talk about your moving up in a sales management post we have open in the Belleville area.

We're all friendly here, we've been around long enough to know what it takes to attract good men to our team. Drop us a line at

Crooked Charge Cards Replace Old Con Games

VANCOUVER (CP) — Confidence men are dealing themselves good hands with crooked charge cards.

"There was a time when con artist would spend days setting up his victim," said Staff Sgt. Ezelle Wilson, chief of the Vancouver fraud squad.

"But it's much easier to use the new system. They just hand over an illegal credit card and say charge it."

The change in the criminal pattern has been so dramatic that it has been more than a year since police here have recorded a swindling case by a professional con man.

"But now there are days when every detective in the squad is working on credit card cases," said Sgt. West.

Cards issued by oil companies or department stores are no problem, he said, because oil company cards are linked to licence plates and department store cards are checked on each sale.

"It's the new concept of cards issued by banks and credit companies that invite tremendous abuse," he said.

"It's the coming medium of exchange," he added, but "both the street criminal and the underworld are taking advantage of the lack of control on the cards."

The only major control now on the cards is a credit ceiling, but teams with illegal cards can work in pairs, moving from store to store, making small purchases in each.

A relatively low credit ceiling can be built up into thousands of dollars of merchandise in a few hours.

Sgt. West said most people arrested for illegally using credit cards don't buy what they've bought in a beer parlor from a stranger. "It would usually be being charged with theft.

Some cards are lost in the mail, some are stolen when they arrive in mail at rooming houses, others are taken during house and car break-ins.

And some people apply for cards, tell the credit company they did not receive it, and then sell the card to another person.

Sgt. West said what is needed is a central computer system, similar to that used by department stores, so each transaction can be verified before the card is used.

Peter McGrenera, security chief of Master Charge here, admits that criminal use of credit cards is a growing problem and agrees the answer lies in the advancement of computer technology.

He said a centralized computer is in use in San Francisco where the high volume of business has returned the high cost of the computer. There is no comparable system in Canada, he said.

Dief Wants Orders Issued Railroads

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons was full of proposals Thursday for more government involvement in the private sector.

Former prime Minister John Diefenbaker called for a government supervisor to tell the railways where and how to use their freight cars. The aim was to speed delayed shipments of western grain.

Transport Minister Jean Marchand agrees that a co-ordinator would help, and said he will submit the idea to cabinet.

But the Progressive Conservatives weren't so warmed during debate on a bill aimed at increasing business competition, while hoping to cut prices to consumers.

The bill, among other things, would force suppliers to provide goods to buyers, which the Conservatives called interference with the fundamental right of sellers to deal with whomever they choose.

Instead, the Conservatives renewed their demands for freezes and increases controls.

The liveliest exchanges came over grain shipments and what the opposition called the railways' failure to move grain off the Prairies.

Mr. Diefenbaker (PC-Prince Albert) said the lag in grain shipments has reached desperate proportions and grain contracts are being lost all over the world.

Don Mazankowski (PC—Vegreville) said $300 million in sales has been lost, while Les Benjamin (NDP—Regina Lake Centre) said grain shipments are 11,000 cars behind schedule at Vancouver and 7,000 behind at Thunder Bay, Ont.

Mr. Marchand said he is "inclined to support entirely" Mr. Diefenbaker's proposal for the supervisor. He had discussed the idea at a meeting with western provincial transport ministers earlier this week.

On the competition bill, the Conservatives wanted the government to break the legislation into pieces. Some of it would pass quickly; other parts require detailed study.

The Conservatives supported the bill's restrictions and controls on misleading advertising, unfair pricing and other similar practices.

PC Effort to Oust Plumptre Defeated

OTTAWA (CP) — Liberals and New Democrats joined forces again Thursday, this time to defeat a Conservative motion that eventually could have ended Beryl Plumptre's reign as chairman of the food prices review board.

New Democrats Terry Grier (Toronto-Lakeshore) and Grace MacInnis (Vancouver-Kingsway) joined seven Liberals in the Commons miscellaneous estimates committee to defeat a motion by Walter Dinsdale (PC—Brandon-Souris) that would have cut Mrs. Plumptre's $40,000 annual salary to $1. Eight Conservatives voted for the measure.

Mr. Dinsdale said his motion, which was similar to one made last year on the Commons food prices committee by Mr. Grier, was intended as an expression of frustration over the government's handling of food cost inflation.

Mr. Grier said after the meeting that he considered the motion a foolish one, particularly since it followed an earlier move by Mr. McGrath that would have given the board considerably more power than it now has.

He added that he was more interested in giving the board power to roll back price increases than in throwing out its chairman.

For her part, Mrs. Plumptre took the whole business lightheartedly.

"I run up against this sort of thing all the time."

Boost In Oil Price Sought

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Ministers of the world's major oil-producing states met today to consider a recommendation to increase the price of oil above the current $11.65 a barrel.

No decision was announced immediately.

The economic commission of the 13-member Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) recommended the price increase, Iran's finance minister, Jamshid Amouzegar, told reporters. He gave no figures.

The Kuwait oil minister, Abdul Rahman Ateeqy, indicated that the ministers are still some way from agreement, but said they "have only started the discussions."

Amouzegar said the ministers are not discussing the lifting of the oil embargo against the United States because OPEC is not a political organization.

But he said the issues of whether to raise oil prices and whether to lift the embargo are necessarily connected "because both deal with economic considerations."

He said the meeting will continue Sunday if no decision is reached today.

The regularly scheduled meeting of the 11-member Organization of Petroleum-Exporting Countries (OPEC) came on the eve of an expected announcement by Arab oil producers formally lifting—at least temporarily—the oil embargo against the United States.

Algerian Oil Minister Belaid Abdessalam was asked as he entered the conference room at OPEC headquarters whether oil prices will be lowered at the meeting.

"I would prefer to discuss increased prices," he replied.

The new Venezuelan minister for mining and hydrocarbon, Valentin Hernandez Acosta, said the factors that brought the posted price of oil up to its current rate of about $11.65 a barrel "have not yet been reviewed." He apparently was referring to continuing inflation in Western industrialized countries where the oil producers get most of their manufactured goods.

The Arab ministers are reported to have decided Wednesday in Tripoli, Libya, to lift the oil ban against the United States. They were expected to debate the matter again in Vienna and then make an announcement Sunday.

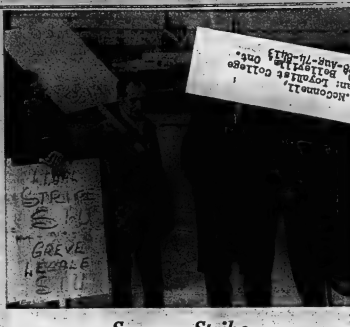
Saudi Arabia's oil minister, Ahmed Zaki Yamani, told CBS News Friday night that a final decision on lifting the embargo has not yet been made but he has no doubt it will come Sunday. Yamani said production of oil, now 15 per cent of pre-October levels, will be increased.

Ismail Arabia, the caretaker of the world's largest known oil reserves, is the key to the boycott.

Canada Changes Mind, Opposes Flooding Vale

WASHINGTON (CP) — The Canadian government has strongly urged the United States not to proceed with a power project that would flood the Skagit River Valley in British Columbia, "one of the last remaining unspoiled wilderness areas which is both easily accessible and well-suited to human use."

In a note delivered Thursday to the state department for transmission to the Federal Power Commission (FPC), Canada argued:



—Opposition to the project comes from all Canadian political parties, the government of B.C. and private conservation groups.

—Circumstances have changed since earlier Canadian and B.C. support was given the scheme.

—A reservoir that would be developed by flooding the Skagit Valley will destroy "unique" wildlife resources and "will not be operated for the benefit of those using the lake for recreation."

—The mutual respect Canada and the U.S. have had for each other's environmental relationship leads Ottawa to express confidence that the Skagit will not be flooded.

The text of the note was to be made public officially in Ottawa Monday. A copy was obtained in advance here by The Canadian Press.

Seamen Strike

Lakes Seamen Start Walkout

MONTREAL (CP) — The Seafarers' International Union of Canada went on strike Friday amid warnings that such a move could result in economic setbacks for all Canadians.

Union president Roman Gralewicz told the union's members he has ordered a "couple of hundred" union employees off the job and advised the rest of the union's 3,700 members not to show for the April 1 "thing-out" day which heralds the new season.

The men, who make up the bulk of the crews on board about 230 ships operated by the Canadian Lake Carriers Association, have been without a contract since last January, he said, and are striking to back contract demands.

Talks between the two sides in the presence of a federal mediator had broken down.

The strike will halt about 90 per cent of Canadian shipping on the Great Lakes, he said, although United States and other foreign shipping will not be affected.

Hubert Benoit, general manager of the CLCA which groups 16 firms operating about 270 ships between the Lakehead and the Gulf of St. Lawrence, said the strike could deal a "crippling blow" to the national economy.

Strike action taken by the union against the carriers could have a "ripple effect" on the business community and likely would hit employees in other industries as well as consumers, he said.

The opening of the navigational season is a critical period for the movement of strategic commodities such as petroleum products, wheat, iron ore and coal, he said.

Mr. Gralewicz said the union, which includes deckhands, officers, wheelmen and seamen, is seeking a 15-per-cent wage increase in a two-year contract.

Minimum wage for a union crew member now is $698 monthly while the top-paid wheelsman earns $800 a month. He said the carriers had offered an hourly wage increase of under 50 cents during the life of the contract.

A carriers' spokesman said the union had been offered a package deal, including overtime and fringe benefits, which would mean a 33-per-cent wage increase over a two-year contract. The SIU, he said, is seeking a 45-per-cent wage increase.

Mr. Gralewicz said his men are also seeking a "normal and natural" 40-hour work week instead of the 56-hour week they now work.

Also attending the news conference were officials of the Canadian Merchant Guild, whose members are deck officers, and the Canadian Marine Officers Union, representing engineers.

Spokesmen for both unions said their members would not cross SIU picket lines.

Hearing Opens Monday

Davis Indicates Airport Decision Not Yet Firm

TORONTO (CP) — The long battle over the proposed new international airport for Toronto enters a new phase Monday and Premier William Davis says there is still some doubt whether the $1.5 billion project will be constructed.

Mr. Davis told a reporter Friday that federal government projections indicate the need for a new facility for this area whose burgeoning growth has made the present Malton international airport the busiest in Canada in terms of passenger traffic.

"But who knows what even two years from now will bring in terms of changes in technology or approaches in the field of air transportation?" Mr. Davis added.

The premier emphasized he had no information of "anything immediate" on the horizon but the very fact that the federal government was opening an inquiry indicated the possibility of change had not been ruled out at any level.

The Ontario government plans no formal submission to the commission opening hearings Monday as a result of public protests following a federal decision to build a new airport at Pickering, just east of here.

The outrage of Pickering opponents has been matched by agonized pleas of citizens groups complaining of increasing jet-plane noise in the heavily-populated Malton area north of the city.

At least 38 briefs have already been filed before the commission, including an all-out attack on the whole concept by People or Planes (P.O.P.), an aggressive Pickering-based citizens' group.

Mr. Davis said his government would respond to any questions that might arise relating to such things as services or parkways but had consistently maintained that the question of need for the airport itself was one for the federal authorities to decide.

Opponents of the project contend no new airport is required and, in any case, no such facility should be plunked into the comparatively peaceful neighborhood of Pickering. P.O.P. has joined hands with a Quebec protest group demanding better payment for expropriated land in the area of Montreal's new international airport, now under construction at Mirabel, north of the city.

Premier Davis cited the advent of the Jumbo jet—capable of carrying double the passenger loads of earlier jets—as an example of what has happened in aviation in the last five years.

"I don't think anyone is clothing his mind to disagree to occurring that might make the situation different in the future," he added.

Mr. Davis declined to speculate on whether any move is developing between anti-noise groups in the Malton area and the anti-airport group at Pickering.

IRA Plans Drive Against Soldiers

BELFAST (Reuter) — Northern Ireland braced for new violence today with an offensive announced by Irish guerrillas against British security forces.

Four persons died in bomb blasts and gunfire Friday, many were injured and 20 buildings wrecked. Incidents throughout troubled Ulster.

Explosive disposal experts walled for dawn before they approached two express trains halted rickety side on the Dublin-Belfast line near the border and primed with bombs.

An armed gang ambushed the two trains and ordered their hundreds of passengers off before leaving nine bombs in the cars.

The violent IRA provisionals said their campaign against the British troops will be intensified. It accused the troops of using children as shields and warned parents to keep their young safe from soldiers.

One man died in a bomb blast from a hijacked truck in Londonderry County. Seven more persons died in another blast at Dungannon.

At midnight, a Catholic man was killed in a shooting incident in Belfast.

Otter Flying Girl to Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — A CPB Trenton spokesman said today that a twin Otter aircraft has taken aboard a critically-injured girl at a James Bay community and is en route to the Hospital for Sick Children here.

The spokesman said the plane landed on a snow strip in Kashechewan Ont., about 9 a.m.

After an 80-minute stopover in Moosonee, about 200 miles north of Timmins, Ont., to refuel, the flight.

He said the packed-snow runway in the comunity 10 miles east of Fort Albany is not lit and a night landing was inadvisable.

Nixon Deed Destroyed

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP)— An original deed donating President Nixon vice-presidential papers to the National Archives was thrown away, Nixon tax lawyer Frank DeMarco says. The 1969 deed was destroyed when a replacement deed was drafted and signed April 18, 1970. He described it as routine legal practice. California Secretary Edmund Brown Jr. has said the new deed was fraudulently backdated to April, 1970, in an apparent effort to qualify the president for a full $576,000 income-tax deduction for the papers. The tax law was changed in July 1969.

Only 16 Killed

TEHRAN (AP) — The death toll from a fire that broke out on board a Danish airliner as it taxied toward takeoff at Tehran airport stands at 16, says Iranian civil aviation department. The department said 39 persons were rescued from the plane in Friday's accident.

Charges Requested

TORONTO (CP) — City council voted 12 to 2 Friday to ask the attorney-general of Ontario to lay criminal charges against the Meridian committee, owners of a three-storey rooming house in which five people died in a fire a week ago.

Two Die in Fire

TORONTO (CP) — Two men were killed in a fire in a two-storey rooming house in the city downtown area early today. A girl jumped cuts and bruises after escaping to safety from a second-floor bedroom window.

Trip Called Off

BONN (Reuter) — President Nixon's letter to Wea German Chancellor Willy Brandt calling off his planned trip to Brussels next month has said United States-European Common Market relations took a new low. The message was followed by Nixon's speech in Chicago which he attacked the European Community's stance on transatlantic political and economic relations.

Anarchists Blamed

CARACAS (AP) — Venezuela's new government blamed "anarchist groups of adventurers" for a wave of fires and bombings Thursday and Friday that caused millions of dollars in damage. A government source said about 150 persons have been arrested.

Trial Hears Testimony

NEW YORK (AP) — A former White House aide, Hugh Sloan, says that, at the direction of committee secretary Maurice Stans, he distributed a $199,000 contribution by financier Robert Vesco to President Nixon's 1972 campaign as coming from John Mitchell. Sloan testified Friday at the criminal conspiracy trial of Stans and Mitchell, former attorney-general.

Wilson Will Seek Vote if Defeated

LONDON (CP) — Prime Minister Harold Wilson, in power for less than two weeks, says he will seek a new general election if his minority Labor government is defeated in next Monday's crucial parliamentary vote.

"The Labor government will not emulate the Conservatives in a desperate attempt to hold on to office," Wilson told a High Wycombe party meeting Friday.

Faced with opposition motions that have raised fresh election speculation, Wilson maintained that the British public wanted to see the Labor administration given a fair chance to get Britain back on the road to recovery.

"They will be impatient of any further manoeuvring designed to put back into office the administration which almost had to be dragged from office 10 days ago."

This was a reference to the fact that Conservative Leader Edward Heath tried for three days to form a coalition before resigning as prime minister after his party was beaten in the Feb. 28 election.

Besides Heath, Wilson criticized Liberal leader Jeremy Thorpe, who is a member parliamentary caucus has decided to support the Conservatives in the Monday vote.

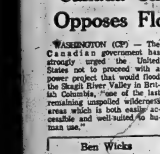
He said: "If Mr. Heath and Mr. Thorpe are determined to play the role of wreckers, it is the British people, in the first place, who will have to face a heavy bill for damage."

"But they and their parties will not be immune from the consequences of their own frivolous irresponsibility."

The prime minister's speech was the first indication of his likely course in the event of defeat in the vote of confidence in the House of Commons Monday.

Before the election, there were 299 MPs in the 635-seat House compared with 296 for Labor, are condemning the government for not including a specific commitment in the recent speech from the throne to maintain statutory controls over incomes. They have moved an amendment to that effect which could be voted on Monday at the close of debate.

Lining Up for Gasoline



Not only drivers of automobiles had to line up at this service station in San Jose, Calif., a man who needed a refill for his lawn mower got the same treatment. The owner of the service station wouldn't sell gasoline to people showing up with containers.

St. Patrick and His Day

Bedad! Best-Known Irishman of 'em All Wasn't Irish

By LYNN ELLIOTT

Some say he was born in France. Some say Wales. Others even say England. But no one thing is certain — he wasn't born in Ireland.

This may come as a surprise to many people, because the one thing that even the Irish agree on is that St. Patrick was a Irish Irishman.

His birthplace is not the only mystery. Historians don't agree on his birthdate either. It's any time between 373 and 389 AD.

Why we celebrate St. Patrick's Day on March 17 is another puzzle. Authorities differ as to whether that was the date of his birth or his death!

St. Patrick first came to Ireland as a young man, having been captured by pirates and sold into slavery and put to work as a swineherd in the county of Antrim.

After six years of serfdom, he experienced a vision that enabled him to escape to the continent of Europe.

There, France, became his home. There he pursued his education in the Church. Eventually he became a bishop and a statesman and was sent voluntarily this time, to Ireland to convert the people from paganism to Christianity.

His Irish welcome was not the now customary enthusiastic one. But he persisted in his mission and succeeded, eventually, in establishing 365 churches, baptising approximately 126,000 persons and Christianizing the entire country.

St. Patrick's most famous feat was banishing the snakes from Ireland and, according to Chambers' "Book of Days", rendering the Irish soil, forever after, so obnoxious to serpents that they instantly die on touching it."

One story concerning the last snake to leave Ireland describes the difficulty St. Patrick had getting rid of an old serpent in Lake Dhveen. He finally left the snake on a Saturday, promising to return "on Monday" to destroy him.

His never did come back and, to this day, every Monday the old snake is supposed to appear on the surface of the lake and look questioningly at by it. him, saying, "It's been a long weekend, Patrick!"

The shamrock, a plant supposed by the ancient Druids to have special curative powers, gained even more importance because of St. Patrick, according to another familiar story.

In an effort to explain the Christian theory of the Holy Trinity to the pagans, Patrick used the trefoil plant as an example. The three leaves are all separate, he pointed out, but all attached to the same stem — just as the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost are separate but all attached to the Godhead.

Today, little of the religious significance of St. Patrick's Day is acknowledged. It is an occasion for merrymaking and festivities.

Parades and festivals take place all over Ireland. Pubs are filled and the beer flows freely, and often green.

An old legend even credits St Patrick with introducing the art of distillation although in truth, he and his followers were strict abstainers.

Ireland is not the only ancestor of huge St. Patrick's Day celebrations. In New York, a massive parade makes its way up Fifth Avenue every March 17. Up to 130,000 people have taken part.

Of course, everyone, no matter where they are, can look forward to March 17. There is an old belief that St. Patrick's Day will always dawn clear and bright, and that every alternate day following will be blessed with sunshine.

Province Rescues Emergency Measures

The Quinte Emergency Measures Organization Friday got the news it has been fretfully awaiting.

Ontario will pick up the federal government financial slack in order to allow municipal emergency measures programs to continue to the end of the year.

The announcement — made in the legislature by Solicitor-General George Kerr — brought a relieved response from Mayor Robin Jeffrey, chairman of QEMO.

"I'm disappointed in the federal decision not to rescind its action," said "But, of course, we're delighted the province has recognized the value of emergency measures. It is going to allow it to exist for 1974 and I hope in the future."

As chairman of QEMO — which programs peacetime disaster planning for municipalities in Hastings and Prince Edward counties — Mayor Jeffrey has repeatedly called on both senior governments to take action in recent months.

The problem was posed when Queen decided to withdraw its allocations to emergency measures programs from 34 municipalities in Ontario.

Federal funds pay 75 per cent of local budgets and the cutback seriously threatened QEMO's ability to operate.

Mr. Kerr told the legislature Ontario had "no real success" with the federal government in asking to be consulted on the future of the emergency measures program.

"A study is now under way to determine how best to provide a more effective program at provincial and municipal levels to deal with civil emergencies in the province in the face of the already reduced support of the government of Canada."

The solicitor-general said that since the impact of emergencies are always felt at the municipal level the study will undertake an analysis of a number of typical municipal programs.

In addition, it will examine the effectiveness of the provincial response to such emergencies.

"The representative area programs being surveyed include Sudbury Region, Windsor, Essex County, Metropolitan Toronto and Bruce County," Mr. Kerr said.

Greenbelt Means A Job Well Done

By COLIN BRUCE

While concrete and asphalt spill over municipality after municipality, it's really fresh good to sit in a park.

For its size and the money available, Trenton does a terrific job, grabbing green space wherever the opportunity comes up.

Centennial Park and its long-range plans, rival any other project for thought and appeal and is indicative of the town's awareness of the growing public concern for green space.

According to Marion Baker, the long standing backbone of the Board of Park Management there is a steadily growing public input into the management of Trenton parks.

"People are taking more interest and forwarding more ideas about how to handle the parkland," she said.

One of her hopes for the future is more active participation of children in parks and appreciation of why parks are here.

Miss Baker says there is a need for more parkland, particularly for special recreational activities.

"We have to be careful though that we don't grab up prime land that would better serve another use," she said.

A highlight of current park negotiations is the Mount Pleasant section. Parks representatives point to the hill as a prime recreational facility. Town council points to it as a road relocation possibility and land that could be used for light industry or swapping power as land is bartered from merchants on Trenton riverfront land.

Indent S.M.

Whatever happens, it's important that the parks board — which celebrates its 80th birthday this year — is looking for green space.

This week work begins on flower beds across the town, making them ready for May planting.

Religious Instructions Need Careful Approach, Too

By MARGARET HAYLOCK

PICTON — A Carrying Place couple who recently questioned religious instruction at Rednersville school has set in motion a public response proportionate to an attack on motherhood.

Donald Sloane, Carrying Place, addressed the Prince Edward County board of education recently to protest religious instruction by a layman who has not been approved by the local clergy. He noticed, out that an unqualified instructor would not be accepted for the new math, nor should it be different for religion.

Parents and teachers in Prince Edward jumped to the defense of religious education teacher Twila Langman through a barrage of letters to the board of education.

One parent wrote: "It was with horror that I read a letter in the recent Belleville Intelligencer, in which a five lady who is contributing freely of her time to help the children in our community learn how to live in love and brotherhood was viciously slandered and criticized. I find, by a person who is quite new to the community."

Another mother commented: "We feel that she has a real love in her heart for the boys and girls. We are 100 per cent for Mrs. Langman teaching the religion in our schools. I am sure a credited clergy would not be able to reach these children in the way Mrs. Langman does."

A third letter stated: "Mrs. Langman devotes most of her spare time to working for the children of Amelias'burch township and uses her salary from driving a school bus to buy supplies to teach her class. She is a mother correspondent, guidance counselor and what have you, all rolled into one."

Even a grade three pupil wrote to the board observing: "My friends and I love Mrs. Langman. We also enjoy her stories very much. She makes them seem so real. She tells us how important it is to be good and to love each other and not to dislike others."

In all, trustees studied 17 letters in support of Mrs. Langman's continued teaching at a meeting this week.

Three of the persons who wrote to the board mentioned in their letters that the Sloanes were newcomers to Prince Edward.

One parent wrote: "They have only lived in their present residence for approximately 9 months. There are hundreds of families who are responsible taxpayers who have been residents of the area many years and perhaps their whole lifetime, who desire religious instruction in our schools and are very grateful that a person of the calibre of Mrs. Langman is the instructor."

The fact that Mr. and Mrs. Sloane have lived in Prince Edward only a short time surely does not discredit their observations concerning religious instruction at the school their seven-year-old daughter attends.

Mr. Sloane, in a brief to trustees, read an excerpt from the Public School Act stating that a lay person or lay persons selected by the clergy or clergymen may give religious instruction in lieu of a teacher or teachers".

He and his wife spoke with Rev. Morris McLeod of Redmond church and Rev. David Hawkins of Wellington and discovered that neither of them had been approached concerning the lay teacher.

One letter in support of Mrs. Langman refers to "open prejudiced or agnostic individuals," who in some cases, succeed in having religious instruction removed from the classrooms.

Mr. Sloan clearly did not approach the board seeking the abolition of religious instruction. He stated that if religious exercises are to be given in the schools then "it must be the responsibility of parents and personnel, qualified to instruct in accordance with the course of study authorized by the department, and / issues of controversial or sectarian nature shall be avoided."

Mrs. Langman has told trustees that she considers Rev. Morris McLeod her "boss" and consults him regularly.

Rev. McLeod told The Intelligencer this week that there is a "very loose arrangement" between himself and laymen instructing religious education in the Prince Edward school in question.

He says he talks occasionally with Mrs. Langman and another lay teacher and has no liaison at all with the Prince Edward County Board of Education.

If parents had suddenly learned that a favorite bus driver with an excellent safety record, in fact, did not possess a driver's license, would there have been a flood of letters to trustees supporting him?

Would parents approve of a mathematics teacher with no degree or would they express concern and point to regulations under the Public Schools Act?

Public response to the issue strongly shows that Twila Langman is admired and respected by principals, teachers, parents and pupils. The popularity of her religious instruction classes is clear in all 17 letters submitted to trustees. But she apparently does not have the required approval of the clergy for her work.

The layman who volunteers his time to the community as Mrs. Langman has done deserves respect and recognition but the question of her qualification must not be tossed aside as an imagined insult.

If Mrs. Langman is as highly qualified as her supporters maintain, then she should experience no difficulty in obtaining the approval of the local clergy for her volunteer work. This clerical nod would correct any possible contravention of the Public Schools Act.

No matter how devout or well-intentioned the individual, it would seem best that he or she participate in a religious education program only in close liaison with the clergy.

Volunteers in first aid are not turned loose with band aids and tourniquets until they have completed courses with qualified medical personnel. If this type of protective concern is demanded for the body why should a lesser significance be placed on the soul?

Since religious education is being taught in Prince Edward County schools it should be approached with the same concern afforded all other subjects. If it is impossible for clergymen to instruct the classes personally, then laymen working in the program should teach only under the direction of the clergy.

Perhaps it would be possible for the ministerial association to arrange for a series of classes for laymen teaching religious education. The individuals participating would certainly emerge better equipped for their volunteer work.

Rocks Yield Peerless Hues

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

BANCROFT — Much of Quinte country rests on a formidably solid foundation — the Canadian Shield.

The majestic march of granite gives the impression of sombre hues to the landscapes of the northern townships.

But the detailed inspection heretabouts reveals a treasure trove of color in the rock.

And this is the place to take a closer look. Scratching below the surface of outcroppings and cliffs can reveal a glittering cache of natural gems and mineral deposits. It's a natural phenomenon unmatched for variety — and color — in Canada.

So much so, as the weather warms, the surrounding countryside becomes a rendezvous for rockhounds — collectors of semi precious stones and minerals.

And the annual Bancroft Gemboree, now the biggest show of its kind in Canada, is getting ready again to attract collectors from across America, even Europe.

Rockhounds have been probing for finds for years — a thourth few as long as Bert Ellerbeck.

Bert came here as a village barber in the 1930s. Inevitably in a mineral-rich area, he turned to prospecting in his spare time.

Today, the shop where Bert still barbers at 67, shows the results of his long years pick-ing prizes from the rock.

Bert's place you can get a haircut, then walk out boasting an eye-catching piece of jewelry.

Rare samples of the area's mineral richness line the walls. Polished natural gems are offered for sale — as they are in other village stores.

"This is the best town in Canada for rockhounding," says Bert. "What we have here in all kinds of semi-precious stones is unique."

He'd hate to guess at the number of varieties created by the formative upheavals that created the region's geology.

But, long before collections into the stores, or the Gemboree excited international attention, the Bancroft-area deposits had gained prestige.

Marble from the district was used in the Ottawa parliament buildings.

But the most unique deposit is sodalite. There's not other another town — not even Bancroft, which bills itself as sodalite — unless it's Brazil.

These are the only two other known world areas where the mineral is found in quantity, says Paul Rasmussen.

He's qualified to know. Four years ago he became the latest owner of the Princess Sodalite Mine, site of the rare rock deposit bordering Highway 500 just east of here.

The cache first came to prominent attention when it was among mineral samples presented the Prince and Princess of Wales early in the century. It's rich color caught royal attention. Arrangements were made to ship a quantity to England. In 1904, some 150 tons was quarried and used in the decoration of an English aristocrat's Park Lane mansion.

Today, Paul says he ships across Canada and the United States, to schools, universities and scientific supply houses seeking specimens of the rare stone.

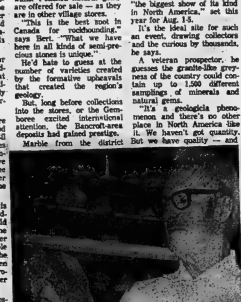
The upsurge in rockhounding has created a popular surge of interest in sodalite — and the whole range of minerals hereabouts.

"You've got to remember it's the fastest-growing hobby in North America — bigger even than stamp-collecting now," says Paul Rasmussen.

Tangible proof can be seen each year at the Gemboree, indicates Carl Boslak.

Former owner of the Princess mine, now president of the Bancroft Mineral Society, Carl is busy preparing for the 1974 version of what he calls "the biggest show of its kind in North America," set this year for Aug. 1-5.

It's the ideal site for such an event, drawing collectors and the curious by thousands, he says.



A veteran prospector, he guesses the granite-like greyness of the country could contain up to 1,500 different samplings of minerals and natural gems.

"It's a geological phenomenon and there's no other place in North America like it. We haven't got quantity. But we have quality — and variety."

"A lot of people don't just realize what we have in this country.

One who has never lost his fascination is Bert Ellerbeck.

Winter still holds a grip on the Quinte north country. But, come summer, says Bert in his barbershop, he'll be out with his pick, packsack and chisel, seeking stones in the rocks he's explored for 30 years.

Uneasy Lull

Given the circumstances of our day, there is something of an eerie silence in places where of late there has been the sound of gunfire and exploding bombs, terror, bloodshed and death.

Let's hope governments and airport security people are not letting down their guard.

Patricia Hearst meanwhile is still in captivity and we can only wonder what her ultimate fate will be.

Even if she is freed sometime soon, how much will the scars of her ordeal show? What sort of relationship will it be with her parents whom she has criticised on tapes released in recent days and which she says were not made under duress and do not reflect brainwashing by her captors.

The world has had too much traumas of late. And without overlooking the unfulfilled needs which terrorism admittedly reflects to some degree, the same world can scarcely better these days with murderous and degrading acts of man toward his fellow man.

But let those in authority keep up their guard; to do otherwise is to invite further brutalities.

Fire's Toll

Belleville firefighters had had a relatively trouble-free winter until the blaze the other day at Electronic Controls and we can only share the concern that is felt when there is such an occurrence in the community.

What caused the fire is a matter for the Fire Marshal, but some lessons may be drawn from the fact that paint and cardboard boxes were stored in bulk in the building.

Another — and recurring — problem at this time are the kids who play with matches, like those who put a match to some marshland near the bayshore the other day.

Fortunately there were no serious consequences, although the proximity of a tank containing 200,000 gallons of methanol has some hair-raising potential in this regard.

Parents: see to it that children are afforded better things to do than is too often apparent these days.

Hockey Spat

Boston Bruins' defenceman Derek Sanderson has been a sort of court jester of the ice, provoking players, officials and fans to mirth and rage according to how he tickles their ego.

Now he has been suspended for some commonplace wrestling which if harmless in itself was also something in the nature of the straw that broke coach Bep Guidolin's back.

The Globe and Mail's Dick Beddoes, in one of his customarily sensitive pieces, laced with humor, and poignancy, and quoting Omar Khayyam's "Moving Finger" philosophy (in a more latter day Thomas Wolfe viewed it that: "You can never go back"), said in part: "Possibly Sanderson has forgotten that talent is effervescent, easily corrupted without a sense of responsibility to craft. Playing the character may have gotten in the way of playing hockey."

Who knows? Coach Guidolin, accusing Sanderson of "a lackadaisical attitude," and ex-coach Thomas Johnson: "This town no longer digs Sanderson's act," reflect the mood of some.

But Sanderson may not be through with the game yet. He believes he has been treated unfairly, that his chance spat with a team-mate in the dressing rooms was no worse than many an incident of the kind — and his lawyer is talking about waiting for tempers to cool to get things straightened out.

Meanwhile having some tie-in with a film company and prospects of a job to perform for them in Honolulu, Sanderson showed another side to his rugged exterior as he sat in a Los Angeles hotel room. He phoned his mother in Niagara Falls.

Shades of De Gaulle

France Pursues Its Arrogant and Nationalistic Course

By JOHN D. HARBRON

France and the French remain irrevocably the same in Europe, no matter how nations outside the changes in the ways of men and nations.

The country which coined the oft-used and for that matter often-misused expression "the more things change, the more they are the same," is the best practitioner of the expression.

In politics and foreign policy, the colossus of Charles de Gaulle though physically departed, strides France as vibrant in spirit as if once was in the flesh.

The performance of Michel Jobert, head of the French delegation to the recent Washington conference of so-called "natural allies" admittedly nationalistic in a way not even the United States can afford to be these days.

Jobert came if not as a professed Gaullist, certainly as a rousing and acting like one, that France would go it on her own in dealing with the rich oil-producing nations.

Indeed the perfidie (perfidity) once allocated to Britain by Napoleon and more often practised by France had already taken place before Mr. Jobert arrived to shake up the conference.

This was the massive bilateral French deal with Saudi Arabia for 20 years guaranteed supply of oil in exchange for huge French technological contributions to an emerging Saudi-Arabian society.

The French go-it-alone position during the current energy crisis is the most publicized Francophile action since de Gaulle's time, but there are other more historic French determinants in Europe.

A closer look at France reveals that many of the policies and programs of the late but emissatic general are still in force. The French nuclear military program or force de frappe the keystone of Gaullist foreign policy, is still there gobbling up billions which France could better use for other purposes.

The French army, navy and air force remain at the ready.

The French franc is still independent of the European currency snake.

The French army, navy and air force remain at the ready.

The French franc is still independent of the European currency snake.

The French break with NATO is still intact as that organization's somewhat fractured manoeuvres around Europe must also be taken with care not to violate French sovereignty. Indeed the cohesive NATO fleet in the Mediterranean is not the question while French warships do not participate with other NATO naval units in a combined force.

At home puritanical Gaullist policies which ended Parisian prominence as Europe's city of lights, its easy virtues, the modern sub-cultures, are still in force. From his grave and his association with his dwindling followers, de Gaulle's fundamentalism wreaks havoc with a free press and the arts in Paris.

It is a travesty on the bawdy Parisian record, yet true, that London once boasted to the bluff, hearty but the imaginative English sense, as the real world's cultural and mod capital of Western Europe.

The ancient Anglo-French animosity never far beneath the surface, should find new outlets for rebirth with Harold Wilson as prime minister, given his pre-election comments to the effect that France was the stumbling block to Britain's entry on the path to a Common Market alliance.

Britain went in to Europe Wilson had contended for years, not on her own terms, but those of his arch-enemy in Parliament, Opposition Leader Edward Heath, but at the back and call of France, a kind of sirren's call to participate.

The exciting these images will do no good for good Anglo-French relations and Prime Minister Wilson has been, pathetically quiet about France and Europe as he went about his first task, finding industrial peace at home.

With all this, small wonder that even anti-Gaullist editors are talking about the next French boom of the 1980s with a stronger France; secure with her allies and her resources still following the Gaullist path.

The Perils of Income Tax: Or How to Make A Million Or Two — By Mistake of Course

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Canadians paid $150-million too much in personal income taxes last year, by mistake.

If you are settling down to the task of calculating your 1973 taxes, resolve not to make that kind of mistake. You need the money more than the government does.

Another $100-million worth of mistakes in favor of themselves were made by other taxpayers, and spotted by the taxman.

For many people, performing a series of mathematical calculations is always difficult and full of potential pitfalls.

They can obtain answers to their questions, free, by calling the District Taxation Office. Telephone numbers are listed on the back cover of Your Guide To the 1973 Income Tax Return. Long-distance calls are free when you ask the operator for Zenith 0-4000.

If they prefer to deal with the private sector, they can turn for help to tax-advisory services that charge a fee. Surveys have shown, however, that no two services will necessarily come up with the same net figure from the same facts.

For the do-it-yourself taxpayer, here are some pointers:

To start with basics, be sure to file a return. A surprising number of Canadians fail to claim refunds they could have if they asked for them by sending in a tax return.

If you owe taxes, you can't avoid payment by the simple expedient of not filing a return. The government and its computer catch up with delinquents eventually.

Pay close attention to the section (Page 3) of your T-1 that relates to overpayment of Canada Pension Plan contributions or Unemployment Insurance premiums. People who changed jobs during 1973 are probably entitled to a refund.

If a change in job is involved that you move to a new home in Canada that is at least 25 miles closer to your new job location, you may deduct removal expenses incurred for moving yourself, your family and your belongings.

These include travelling costs, transportation and storage, up to 15 days' temporary board, cost of selling your old residence, and other items.

A marriage or death in the family in 1973 may permit extra personal exemptions. Check the guide and consult advisers.

There is a $1,000 disability deduction for sightless persons or those confined to a bed or wheelchair for the whole year. The $1,000 person also has an estate may claim the deduction. If the disabled taxpayer needs help with his or her affairs, or her taxable income, the spouse may claim the rest of the deduction.

Parents should remember to claim the deduction of $50 a month for the son or daughter attending a university or training.

Claim deductions for other eligible relatives whom you support in Canada. Again, check the rules.

Alimony payments must be reported as income. Otherwise, there will eventually be back taxes and interest charges to pay.

The rewards of tax-trimming are all the greater because the deductions apply to your marginal (highest) rate of tax, not so her own terms, but those of his arch-enemy in Parliament, Opposition Leader Edward Heath, but at the back and call of France, a kind of siren's call to participate.

The exciting these images will do no good for good Anglo-French relations and Prime Minister Wilson has been, pathetically quiet about France and Europe as he went about his first task, finding industrial peace at home.

With all this, small wonder that even anti-Gaullist editors are talking about the next French boom of the 1980s with a stronger France; secure with her allies and her resources still following the Gaullist path.

Japanese Officer's 29-year Saga In Jungles of the Philippines

By John D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Those incredibly loyal and very small numbers of Japanese soldiers from World War Two who keep emerging from Southeast Asian jungles decades after Japan was defeated have curious fantasies about how our long grass hills and his could be written, the tough world we live in if restored to life.

It's a bitter sweet form of day-dreaming usually associated with someone whose presence is desperately missed and where time heals the wound of loss so very slowly. The comforting thought eases the mind that the beloved could not stand life's hectic pace today in any case. So all was meant to be when they left us.

In the case of the emerging Japanese ex-GI's, however, still thought the war was on, especially so Lieut. Hiro Onoda, imperial Japanese Army who came out of a Philippine jungle a few days ago after 29 years. They still live and still must face up to a world scarcely conceivable to them.

Lieut. Onoda was an intelligence officer ordered to keep up guerrilla warfare against the Japanese army forces in late 1944. After the searchers found him, apparently after he spoke to a Japanese boy near his hideout. Lieut. Onoda returned to retrieve his officer's sword which he formally surrendered to the chief of staff of the Philippine air force.

And now this loyal, obviously gallant and admirable man's reinstatement of imperial Japan will result in a society changed beyond belief from the one he knew in the 1940s.

Someone will have to tell the once 22-year-old officer, now 52, what happened at Hiroshima and Nagasaki and he will be expected to comprehend.

The bustling, commercialized, pollution-prone but above all modernized Japan he will see in a few days will dazzle him. He is a real Rip van Winkle, another example of the truth being stranger than fiction.

And all will have changed. The imperial Palace will still be there in the centre of downtown Tokyo, in better shape, more brightly painted than in the days of the empire. And so will the Yasukune Shrine not far from it where those like all those of Japan's five million war dead have been remembered in a cliing by the bereaved to the state Shinto religion on Japan by the long-gone military.

Someone will also have to explain to this bright officer that Japan, at peace since 1945, excelled in the trade captured the markets of Southeast Asia and is on the verge of becoming the greatest economic power in the world, but all without a single military conquest.

He will gawk at miniature color TV sets, transistor radios, Japanese discotheques, thousands of Japanese small cars. The visions of a sedate, puritanic and controlled Imperial Japan which he has undoubtedly cherished will fade forever when aged portraits greet him in Tokyo.

For most of us who roll back the years in our mind's eye, there is an acute fascination with the emergence of these men, our contemporaries if we served in World War Two, almost like creatures from a time machine.

History becomes reality. Time's passing is impressed even more on us as being a twinkling of an eye. We smugly say to ourselves that this Japanese has missed most of his best years of living. What kind of career, family, professional life might he have had if the quirk of fate had not cut him off from the living for three decades?

But then when we ask these questions about Lieut. Onoda we are truly asking them about ourselves. What have we accomplished in the years we are very far behind? How well have we spent the passing years?

Emperor Haile Selassie Faces Dissident Elements

By KEVIN DOYLE

LONDON (CP) Ethiopian Emperor Haile Selassie, one of the world's longest-reigned monarchs, faces the gravest challenge ever mounted against his authority as a middle-class revolution simmers to a boil in his remote African homeland.

Outside his sedate Jubilee Palace in the heart of Addis Ababa, throngs of normally-placid suburbanites have suddenly burst into angry demonstrations demanding everything from the right to form political parties to fundamental changes in the music played by the national radio.

The aging 81-year-old monarch, who claims to trace his ancestry to a night of lovemaking 3,000 years ago between the amorous King Solomon and the Queen of Sheba, is clearly reeling under the impact of the escalating unrest. Many observers on the spot believe he may yet be forced to step down.

The emperor's troubles began more than a year ago when a British television team exposed a largely hushed-up famine in Ethiopia which claimed an astonishing total of more than 100,000 lives.

News agencies and newspapers from many countries eventually discovered that much of the famine relief and aid funds which began flowing to Ethiopia were being misused or directed away from the starving victims.

Unrest within the country grew until earlier this year when non-commissioned officers in the army were said to be on a minor rebellion demanding greatly-increased pay and other major concessions.

Rather than try to rally the higher levels of the military against them, Selassie chose to meet their demands in most areas, giving the NCOs the full wage increases they demanded.

But while the emperor's move quelled the immediate threat of an armed takeover, it did not prevent a curious psychological effect from the army's ancient spreading throughout the country.

The young NCOs, traditionally conservative and in the vanguard of the growing middle classes, had been dissatisfied with their lot for years.

But they were reluctant to act, largely a result of the carefully nurtured mystique Selassie built around himself as the Immortal Elect of God.

When they finally did rebel, their action shattered this image and within days labor unions organized the first general strike in Selassie's 58-year rule, students clamored for widespread reforms and a spread through the capital.

The monarch's appointment of a new prime minister and cabinet did little to improve the situation. Only the army's fear of an outright civil war prevented it from taking over full control of the country.

Both Selassie and his prime minister have been moving slowly towards constitutional change including the unprecedented freeing of controls on the press. They display evidence that they can push for greater social and political changes many build into a massive wave which will sweep away the old aristocratic order.

Letters to the Editor

Editor,

You published a letter in the Saturday issue, that I cannot allow to go unchallenged. It was written by a Mr. Patterson, who put forth an extreme right-wing view of the Gaelic culture of the Scottish and Irish people. Mr. Patterson, a first class thug having a very important role, in the Orange Movement.

I think that Mr. Patterson's views are very extreme, and go as far as to try to describe them as bigotry in its worst form. They are certainly inflammatory in Canada, tending to divide rather than unite, one of Canada's greatest needs. Therefore I think all Canadians, and in particular Mr. Patterson, should carefully re-examine his views. He should also realize that in 1874, and 1798, and we are now an independent nation, not a colony of Britain.

No one can call the Davis government progressive. With monotonous regularity the members of his party or the party as a whole seem to be mixed up in some sort of conflict of interest.

The latest (and it is hard to keep up) is the matter of Camp Asbestos. This company received $1.2 million for tourism advertising. It is coincidental of course that the chap that heads this latest piece of Tory benevolence is the same fellow that took care of Mr. Davis' election campaign.

When you read that this company managed this without the formality of a contract you have to agree that the Davis era is one, indeed, a remarkable lot.

Many prayers are not heard and answered simply because they are not prayed. Don't be afraid to pray. Jesus encouraged us to "Ye have not because ye ask not." "Ask what ye will."

None can accuse Premier Davis and his colleagues of being tight wads when it comes to handing out generosities of the party hangers on. Party pals seem to be getting the lion's being part of the team has its compensations.

Anyone who choose not to be part of the team is becoming less and less tolerable. It is high time that Davis and his tight clique were given the office.

We need a new broom in the legislature and there appears to be a lot of sweeping to be done.

Adam and Eve Pioneers Of Streaking

By MAURICE SWITZER
Managing Editor

Adam and Eve were the first streakers, and just about everybody since has had a brief crack at it, at least until they were pinned with their first diapers.

Streaking, in case you've just returned from a safari in darkest Africa, is the latest craze to sweep the civilized world.

Basically, it involves running around in the nude, and the more populated the environment, the classier the streak is considered. It's an inexpensive pastime, requiring only a smile and perhaps a pair of shoes.

The fad became popularized, like raccoon coats and riots, at institutions of higher learning, usually those as close to the Equator as possible.

Basically, anyone who can walk is eligible to participate, although we expect anytime to hear of the first wheelchair streaker.

We've already had a parastreaker, airplane aisle streaking, and last week Belleville's Memorial Arena was the site of the world's first known hockey streak.

And age is no barrier. A 67-year-old Ohio man was arrested for what he termed "snalling."

Canadian Press, the national wire service, has been forced to run regular "streaking roundups" to keep abreast of the latest developments.

Public reaction has been interesting. A Kingston news commentator demanded the offenders be thrown in jail for indecent exposure.

But it's getting harder every day to sell that sort of indignant morality.

Any child could have turned on his television set this past week and tuned in to the movie "Bob and Carol and Ted and Alice", a film which rather graphically portrays wife-swapping.

John Salvin, spokesman for the American Sunbathing Association also waxed self-righteous on the subject. "Nudists wouldn't be caught dead streaking", Mr. Salvin salvoed, which left many of us wondering what nudists WOULD be caught dead doing.

There are two alternatives in handling the situation.

We can make streakers martyrs, like modern-day Doukhobors, or treat their uninhibited hobby like a fad that is born and dies a natural death.

In a very serious age of hijackings and pub explosions and empty gas tanks, we can all afford a good laugh now and then. Many passing fancies only become problems when people take them too seriously.

Belleville hair salon is taking the right lighthearted approach by offering "a streak special." Shoe stores might offer see-through sneakers for streakers striving for perfection.

Promoters could organize streak-ins, selling blindfolds for interested, but inhibited spectators.

It's all a question of attitude, and people like Seattle attorney Irving Clark seem to have a level-headed viewpoint.

"Streaking is not a moral issue," says Mr. Clark. "It's just one of those innumerable things people do that I don't really think should be other people's business.

"I've just never seen any real significance in that thing people do in college."

It's only fair to mention that attorney Clark did one significant little thing when he was a Harvard undergraduate.

On March 27, 1939 he swallowed 24 goldfish.

Point

Psychic Energy Source of Spirit

By ALLEN SPRAGGETT
Tweedie Sea Syndicate

With deconcomitable sweeping the country in the wake of the movie, The Exorcist, many intelligent people are asking: Could it be for real? Do such things actually happen?

The movie (in the unlikely event you don't already know) depicts the mysterious and terrifying experiences of a 12-year-old girl possessed by the devil. The author of the novel and the screenplay, William Peter Blatty, claims the story is based on fact.

From the standpoint of parapsychology — the scientific study of psychic phenomena — the trouble with The Exorcist is that it mixes a drop of fact with a gallon of fiction.

To understand the difference between science and superstition, consider a real case of purported evil possession that occurred in October 1970 in the Ontario city of St. Catharines.

The haunted individual (called by parapsychologists the "focal person") was, as in The Exorcist, a youngster at the age of puberty — 11-year-old Peter Walchuk. He lived with his parents in a modest apartment behind a store.

The strange noises came first. They were eerie scratchings, then raps and thumps, coming, it seemed, from inside the walls of the apartment.

Next, furniture began moving, apparently under its own power, and doors opened and closed by themselves. Then holes appeared in the plaster walls of boy's bedroom as though punched out by an invisible hammer.

The city engineering department was called to check if structural changes in the building could account for the queer goings-on.

"We satisfied ourselves there were no such problems," said Mel Holeshak, St. Catharines assistant city engineer.

On Feb. 2, 1970 men from the gas company checked the furnace in the building and found it working normally.

A number of police officers summoned by the distraught parents reported witnessing inexplicable phenomena. One policeman told reporter Ron Whilmarth of the St. Catharines Standard that, while he watched, a large chair rose from the floor with the boy sitting on it, then tipped backwards pinning him against the wall.

The chair, the officer added, was "much too heavy" for the boy to have moved himself.

Things got spookier. More than one policeman reported seeing the boy's bed shake violently and then rise straight up almost to the ceiling.

Several lawyers representing the owner of the building witnessed the eerie events. One saw a footstool on which the boy was sitting fly from under him as though yanked by unseen hands.

A lawyer who visited the haunted apartment left his overcoat there and was reported too scared to return for it.

The family was Roman Catholic and two priests were summoned. They kept their lips sealed about what they had seen but evidently were impressed because on Feb. 16, 1970 the Catholic bishop of St. Catharines, Thomas J. McCarthy, told a reporter he believed "something supernatural" was preying on the boy.

It was noted that the phenomena definitely centred on the boy. When he left the apartment for a few days to stay with relatives, the strange happenings subsided. When he returned, they started again.

The outcome of the mysterious affair?

Well, parapsychologists know from the study of numerous cases that such a "poltergeist outbreak," as it's called, usually burns itself out in a few days or at the most weeks. That's what happened. Within a month, the phenomena ended and everybody lived unhaunted ever after.

What caused the mysterious sounds and movements? Was it a devil, or a ghost? Or something projected from the boy's own mind?

Parapsychologists accept the later view. In this interpretation a poltergeist outbreak is due not to some disembodied entity — whether spirit or demon, depending on your bias — but to emotional conflicts, possibly sex-related, within the unconscious mind of the focal young person. These conflicts unleash raw psychic energy — the same force that some people reportedly can use consciously to move small objects in the lab — and it is this that shifts furniture and produces unearthly noises.

A poltergeist haunting is a case of psychic measles. When the trouble youngster feels better, the haunting stops.

There are significant differences between this psychic case and the fictional story of The Exorcist.

In the movie, the evil spirit is only routed after a horrendous exorcism ritual in which one priest dies of heart failure and another leaps to his death.

In actual case, no exorcism was performed and the household soon returned to normal.

Counterpoint

Even Ouija Board Can Invite Demons

(Ed. Note: Salvation Army Brigadier Leslie Hall stunned fellow corps officers in Belleville for a three-day retreat when he recounted an exorcism he claimed to have performed in October.

The Alabama brigadier was called in by the parents of a 16-year-old musician after fruitless visits to doctors and psychiatrists. He had been involved with drugs and had been experimenting in witchcraft.

Since the Salvation Army has no exorcism ritual as do the Anglican and Catholic churches, Brig. Hall's "exorcism" — which was to last over four hours — began in the boy's den.)

By BRIGADIER LESLIE HALL

Although I had gone there expecting to experience the cold chills, the nauseous odors and the demon speaking through the possessed, I didn't find those signs.

But I realized that the young man was under some sort of supernormal domination.

The demons expressed themselves to the young man through voices and as well as being evident in certain witchcraft rituals he would follow, such as fanning the flames of a fire.

Preparations involved the man recounting his past philosophies and his involvement with witchcraft and affirming his faith in God. These preparations took about 3½ hours.

The actual rite itself took roughly an hour. This involved praying and an earnest desire on the man's part to want to be saved.

There were no physical changes when the exorcism proved to work. There was a release of pressure on the part of the man. His expression changed and the haunting spirit he had before seemed to disappear.

He is now doing well and has returned to college.

First off you must remember that the interest in the occult in our culture today has been evident in Eastern cultures for centuries.

But here the weakened position of the church has a lot to do with it. We have departed from the concept of the institutionalized church. We are seeing a deterioration of religion and young people are looking to other sources for answers.

BRIG. LES HALL

The basic cardinal doctrines have been weakened by external and internal criticism of the church. We have attacks on the Scripture, on Jesus Christ and we have a weakened Christ, weakened Christ.

The power in the occult is a strong one. Just as there is a strong power such as sex involved in witchcraft.

The bars are down. We are living in a permissive society and people are seeking their kicks in the supernatural. Power, satisfaction, everything is in the flesh.

The church, society and psychiatry reject in some way the concept that a person can be possessed. But Jesus is mentioned in the Bible as casting out demons.

And Jesus is also mentioned as giving his disciples the power to cast out demons. The rite of exorcism is established and maintained one.

Some Christians haven't accepted the fact that there are in fact demons and that there are those with the power and authority to cast out these demons.

Ecstasy, clairvoyance, the ouija board. These are all opening the door to a demonic force when young people start experiencing them. Make yourself susceptible to it when you start experimenting.

United Church Members Issue 15 Affirmations

By DR. GORDON C. SMYTH

A formal statement has been released to the public. It is called "Fifteen Affirmations for Lent, 1974."

A number of concerned members of the United Church of Canada, including some leading theologians and pastors, have thus said that many pronouncements made in the name of the Church "have given the impression that our Church has compromised its theological integrity and clearly ignored essential beliefs."

I was among those who, however sadly, in all conscience had to sign that statement which urgently calls "our Church to a more serious commitment to its theological foundations and to a more positive affirmation of Christian faith."

If our denominational fortunes have been dwindling, we cannot lay the blame on changing social patterns, on the impact of science upon minds unformed at the time of Church Union (1925), or on cynicism produced by the world's plight. We have been less than faithful to a rich inheritance.

The evidence is clear. Figures show that, from 1963 to 1972, United Church affiliation dropped 33 per cent, that 43 per cent fewer children were baptized, and that 55 per cent fewer youngsters attended Sunday School. But in the same decade conservative Churches were more than able to hold their own.

When asked about these "Fifteen Affirmations", Rev. Rev. N. Bruce McLeod, Moderator of our denomination, said that there should be a variety of voices, not just one point of view heard.

Of course, that is democratic. It is also part of our legacy from the Congregationalist Churches. But we surely have a right to expect that those holding top official positions in the Church will express views consistent with the fundamentals of the Church.

We are paying a stiff price for the baleful of voices out of officialdom. Parliamentary democracy, as we know it, could not survive under such circumstances. Those who disagree with their party, on matters, either change parties or are told to do so. Are we more clerical or less in control of our Church?

Rev. W. Clarke MacDonald, Secretary of Church in Society, has acknowledged that his sphere was probably a major object of the "Affirmations". Well he might.

His free editorials for the "undaunched" as they say, led to the secular press across Canada, bit a new low in the one concluding that the message of the First Coming of Christ was "brotherhood" whereas the doctrine of the Second Coming represents "selfishness".

Moreover, reactior to this Lenten document. Dr. Macdonald was also quoted in the press as to dilute the Incarnation at Bethlehem and the Atonement on Calvary of its content except a sort of service club appeal — "love to God and your neighbor."

The sole reason for the existence of any branch of the Christian Church is to proclaim the faith expressed by St. Peter in the region of Caesarea Philippi, and to extend the experience of the apostles on the Day of Pentecost.

Since we have been asked to consider ways of commemorating the fiftieth anniversary of Church Union in 1975, we might well begin with a soul-searching question: what are we celebrating?

Lutheran Establishment Said Screening Delegates

TORONTO (CP) — Some Ontario Lutheran ministers have accused their bishops of a conspiracy to deliberately screen out dissenters from preparations for an Ontario district convention in June.

Rev. Terrance Heione of Redeemer Church, North Bay, Ont., said in an interview Thursday that Rev. Alvin Sandfel, president of the 37,000-member Ontario District, has refused to name known liberals or moderates to committees preparing for the district's convention in June.

"No one in disagreement will be allowed to sit on a floor committee."

Rev. Lawrence Martin, Universalty Lutheran Church, Toronto, said:

Slanted brags to congregations that it is a political matter to appoint only his own committees."

"The conflict is a spillover into Canada of controversies that divided Missouri Synod Lutherans two years ago. The 98,000-member Lutheran Church-Canada is a branch of the U.S. Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod.

Since 1969, Rev. J. A. O. Preus, synod president, has been trying to insure that Concordia Seminary in St. Louis, largest Lutheran seminary in North America, purge itself of liberal theological positions.

Among those who say views that there might have been no compromise on the issues of the gospels do not record the exact words of Jesus.

Shortly after Mr. Preus's re-election in July, the seminary president was suspended for advocating false doctrine and the majority of students boycotted classes.

Since then, a Concordia Seminary in Exile has been functioning on the campuses of a Catholic university and a United Church of Christ college in St. Louis, supported by a dissident anti-Preus organization called Evangelical Lutherans in Missouri (ELIM).

Mr. Stanfel said he is not screening out critics of Dr. Preus's theology, but Ontario members of the organization.

"I will not knowingly appoint anyone to a floor committee who is a member of ELIM. I want men who won't take serious issue with decisions of the Missouri Synod convention."

In October Mr. Heinze sent newsletters to Ontario pastors soliciting funds for the Seminary in Exile and ELIM. The money would also support the president and teachers wrongly suspended, he said.

All five Ontario District students originally studying at Concordia now are at the Seminary in Exile, although two have decided to transfer to the Lutheran Seminary in Saskatoon, he said.

Europeans Finding Hinduism Comforting

BOMBAY (CP) — Thousands of Europeans are turning to Hinduism to escape the strains and stresses of industrial life, say Hindu religious leaders here.

Indian newspapers speak of "spiritual collaboration" between West Germany and India.

"One columnist wrote: "While West Germany has stepped up technological assistance to India, we are exporting spiritualists to that country in large numbers."

A report in Bombay Free Press said the number of Yogi followers in West Germany has reached 100,000.

France, Italy, Norway, Denmark and Sweden are also witnessing a steady growth of Hindu influence, said an Indian professor just back from Europe.

Prof. Dayanand Banerjea of Calcutta said more and more Europeans find Hinduism "comforting".

"There is a spiritual emptiness, particularly in West Germany," Banerjea said.

In Banerjea's view, given a chance many East Germans, Czechs and other people living in European Communist countries would also opt for Hinduism. "But these regimes have virtually banned religious propaganda," he said.

A survey of Hindu religious growth in Western Europe by the Press Trust of India (PTI) news agency quotes a Protestant theologian in Frankfurt as saying that "young Germans are seeking to find for themselves a deeper connection with the realities of life through Hinduism."

Buddhism is also said to be enjoying a boom in West Germany and some other European countries, though not to the same extent as Hinduism.

Buddhist "houses of quietness" have sprung up in several West German cities. The PTI says "four to five thousand young Germans are estimated to adhere to the teachings of Lord Buddha."

An estimated 300 West Germans and Scandinavians are believed to have joined Hindu and Buddhist monasteries in India.

Dr. Michael Ramsey, Archbishop of Canterbury and spiritual head of the church of England, waves after announcing his intention to resign effective November 15 this year. Dr. Ramsey is 69 and has held his post since 1961. His successor will be appointed on the advice of the Prime Minister.

Beef Subsidy Aids Ranchers

OTTAWA (CP) — Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan interrupted a New Democratic Party push for selective price controls Friday, by unveiling a subsidy program designed to hold down retail beef prices.

The NDP had introduced a motion that sought government consideration of special price controls and, in some cases, power to roll back prices.

The tempo of the debate changed when Mr. Whelan revealed that cattlemen will get seven cents a pound on various grades of cattle. The subsidies will cost taxpayers about $2.75 million a week.

The cost is based on estimated weekly sales of 39,400 head of beef cattle, resulting in an average subsidy of about five cents each for live animals. A prime A1 or A2 beef animal weighs between 950 and 1,100 pounds, about 62 per cent of which is meat.

Mr. Whelan said the program was implemented to offset the effects of a flood of U.S. beef imports which were lowering prices to Canadian producers.

Subsidies on the top-grade cattle, A1 and A2, paid indefinitely and retroactively to March 1, but will apply to lower-grades for limited periods. The subsidy period for A3 cattle will be March 18 to April 13 while A4 cattle will be subsidized between March 18 and April 6.

Beef processors will pay the subsidies to producers and will be reimbursed by Ottawa. Mr. Whelan said the government hopes to announce a more permanent price stabilization program for the beef industry soon.

Subsidies were chosen instead of higher tariffs on imports because subsidies will keep consumer prices down, he said. Increased duties on American cattle would have boosted the retail price, while the subsidy hits Canadian consumers indirectly through taxes.

Opposition spokesmen were unreceptive.

Bert Hargrave (PC—Medicine Hat) said the subsidies will do nothing to stop the influx of cattle from the U.S. Alf Gleave (NDP — Saskatoon - Biggar) agreed, calling the program a "bail-out policy" for the government.

Mr. Hargrave, a rancher and former president of the Canadian Cattlemen's Association, considers the subsidies a "stopgap and short-term announcement that will cost millions."

Mr. Gleave, a farmer, said producers likely will sell cattle before they are ready for maximum benefit, so they can take advantage of the subsidy before it expires.

Mr. Whelan said the subsidies on A1 and A2 cattle would end when "there is a return to a better and more stable market."

The program was designed to protect cattlemen from a "disastrous period where many would be bankrupted in the reverse between higher costs of production and lower returns from the market.

Mr. Whelan said producers lose $58 to $100 on each marketed animal, a situation inconsistent with the government's statement last month that a healthy agriculture industry is essential if consumers are to be assured continuous supply at reasonable prices.

Beef cattle usually are sold when they reach about 1,000 pounds. Mr. Whelan has said farmers are selling animals for between five and 10 cents a pound less than it costs to raise them—between $50 and $100.

"To maintain a strong agricultural industry, farmers must be assured of fair returns . . . which equate to the cost of production, plus a reasonable margin for labor and invested capital," Mr. Whelan said.

The New Democrat motion was introduced by Terry Grier (Toronto Lakeshore) on the premise that the food prices review board should have the legislative muscle to control and roll back prices. This is a long-standing complaint by the NDP, but it was rejected Friday by the government and the Conservatives.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp, speaking on behalf of Finance Minister John Turner, who was absent, said selective price controls could lead to general controls. These had proved ineffective in the U.S. and Britain.

James McGrath (PC—St. John's East) said his party would not support the motion "because we have no confidence in the food prices review board or in the government."

Envoy Gave Warning

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says the Ontario government's decision not to use gasoline advertisements as a lure for United States tourists was prompted by the Canadian ambassador's office in Washington.

The newspaper says a caution from ambassador Marcel Cadieux, relayed through Ottawa, was the reason that the provincial ministry of tourism decided to edit references to gasoline supplies from advertisements aimed at U.S. tourists.

Mr. Cadieux sent the message to Ottawa last month suggesting that the province be advised of the potential political embarrassment and backlash that might result from the advertisements, The Globe and Mail says.

PCs Want Canadian Ownership Increased

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian ownership of non-renewable resources industries should be raised to 50 per cent by 1980, the federal Progressive Conservative party recommended in a proposed new resources policy Friday.

The policy, subject to approval at the party's national convention this weekend, proposes private investment of $5 billion to $4.5 billion over the next 16 years to buy back foreign-held shares in resource companies.

Sinclair Stevens (PC—York-Simcoe) said James Balfour (PC—Regina—East) told a news conference that no estat-

Nixon Says All Accusations Against Him 'Totally False'

CHICAGO (AP) — President Nixon, launching a series of image-building forays around the United States, has said that all Watergate-related accusations against him are "totally false."

Fielding an hour of questions from members of the Executives Club of Chicago, Nixon said Friday the presidency might be gravely damaged if he resigned as an innocent man.

Nixon told the television-radio audience that if he were to quit, any future president might be removed abruptly by becoming the target of unproved charges.

Tonight the president will join Mrs. Nixon in Nashville, Tenn., to help dedicate a new home for the Grand Ole Opry and on Tuesday will have another hour-long broadcast question-and-answer session before a Houston, Tex., audience.

In the wide-ranging Chicago appearance before what proved to be a friendly audience, Nixon also made other major points:

—European allies are balking at negotiating with the United States on economic and political issues, he said, and therefore 23 his planned April trip to Europe to sign a new statement of principles for the Atlantic community has been derailed.

—While there has been no official word on ending the Arab oil embargo, suggestions that strings may be attached prompt him to say that "the United States is not going to be pressured by its friends in the Middle East and pressure could upset American efforts to promote peace settlement in that region."

—The administration will continue to pursue détente with the Soviet Union, believing the alternative might be a $100-billion increase in arms outlays and more difficult prospects for Soviet Jews wishing to emigrate to Israel.

—The president will co-operate with the House of Representatives judiciary committee in its impeachment inquiry "as fully as I possibly can to get a prompt and just resolution of this matter." However, he will insist on drawing the line against granting a "fishing licence" for searches of his files because, in his view, that also would weaken the presidential office.

Nixon was not asked directly in Chicago about differences between two of his past statements on a crucial Watergate issue—whether or when he was told hush money was being paid to original defendants in the burglary case.

At a March 8 news conference, Nixon said ousted counsel John Dean told him last March 21 "that payments had been made to defendants for the purpose of keeping them quiet, not simply for their defence."

However, in an Aug. 15 television speech, Nixon said he was "only told that the money had been used for lawyers' fees and family support, not that it had been paid to procure silence from the recipients."

The president raised the matter himself in Chicago, saying in effect that his March 8 statement was not meant to suggest hush money was paid as part of a cover-up because, he said, such questions still must be resolved in the courts.

Press secretary Ronald Ziegler later told reporters he did not expect Nixon to discuss the issue further, saying "I think he covered it pretty well."

High Prices? Gourmets Keep on Paying

Are you a gourmet? Would you pay $3.75 for a pound of cheese?

What about those quiet little buffets you give? Would you pay $4 a pound for cold meats?

In these days of inflation, the gourmet is faced with the ever-rising food costs just as everyone else.

Gourmets are not necessarily those people who can afford exotic dishes. They're just people who enjoy unusual or foreign foods and meals made from natural foods.

A survey of the health food stores and gourmet shops in Belleville showed that inflation has cut the trade a little, but regular customers continue to buy their favorites at these specialty shops.

Cooke's Gourmet World on Front Street carries imported meats, cheeses, teas, herbs and spices.

Margaret Lacey stocks many cheeses from Switzerland, Germany and Holland. One of the more popular cheeses — Kirsch — is a cherry-liqueur-flavored cheese which sells for $3.30 a pound.

La Grappe cheese is an imported, fruit-flavored cheese covered with grape seeds. It sells for $3.75 a pound.

For the more adventurous gourmet there is turtle soup, $2.18 for a 14½-ounce can; escargot $2.79 for 12; and crawfish, $1.29 for a 14-ounce can.

Mrs. Lacey will make up a special cheese platter for your wine and cheese party, or she will recommend which meats to offer at a buffet.

Gift baskets, including a variety of jams, teas and other gourmet delicacies are available, starting at $10.

Rita Quinn, of The County Health Food Store believes that "winter brings an increase in customers to the store." She feels that people are more willing to experiment and cook over a hot stove in colder weather.

The store, also on Front Street, offers more than 60 kinds of tea, from hawthorn and catnip to various herbal teas for home remedies.

One very economical item was a soup mix for 45 cents a pound. When added to a broth base, this is almost a meal in itself, she says.

While visiting the County Health Food Store, I noticed a wide variety of types and age groups of customers. There was an elderly gentleman who was interested in bulk foods, while a distinguished-looking lady purchased some pastry flour. Two long-haired youths examining the teas finally decided on dandelion.

According to Mrs. Alton, of the Quinn's Health Food Store, also on Front Street, there is really no one group or set bracket of people specifically interested in health foods. "Young as well as old seem to be taking an interest in health foods."

Although "fours have gone up considerably, health foods are more economical in the long-run," she believes.

Mrs. Alton believes that the nutritional value offered by the natural foods offsets recent food price increases.

Local supermarkets stock various gourmet foods, some at reasonable prices.

Murray's, on Front Street, has just established a new spice shelf. Many of the spices needed to prepare gourmet or national dishes may be purchased here at very reasonable prices.

Loblaws on Pinnacle Street, has a gourmet section which includes clams, lobsters, cockles and mussels. Although there is a limited variety of gourmet foods, Loblaws carries an extensive line of cheeses in a wide price and flavor range.

The inflation of food prices has affected the gourmet world. People are becoming more economy-minded and are looking for the most practical way to prepare and serve national, gourmet and health-food dishes.

Shirley Follen an English teacher at Loyalist College is just such a person.

"To me," says Shirley, gourmet cooking is getting into different nationalities."

According to Mrs. Follen, the easiest way to have gourmet foods at a low price is to learn how to use herbs and spices.

"I learned to cook by experimenting and asking people how to do certain dishes. By starting with a basic food and "adjusting a recipe to the supplies you have on hand", Shirley believes you can prepare an economical meal.

If you are just starting to get interested in gourmet foods, Mrs. Follen suggests "start with one nationality and find someone who can help you."

Mrs. Follen feels that the basic foods such as hamburger and chicken can be used in many different ways to prepare tasty, economical meals.

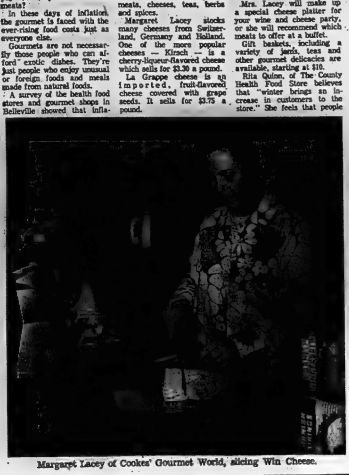
Although gourmet dishes tend to be on the expensive side, some people indulge for enjoyment, getting together with friends to try different foods.

George Maybee, a retired high school teacher, finds gourmet foods very "extravagant".

But George enjoys getting together with friends for a gourmet evening. His group, of about 12, ranges in age from 40 to 65 or 70.

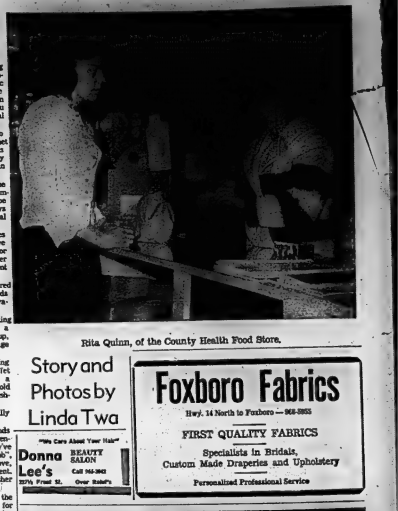
They begin their evening with cocktails and a buffet luncheon at the home of a member of the group. Cold meats, cheeses and refreshments make up the menu.

The group then usually heads off to a dance.



George and his friends enjoy their "gourmet evenings" so much that they've formed a "FLEE Club", standing for Fellowship, Love, Economy and Excitement. They plan to get together about once a month.

Although they find the prices of the cold meats for their buffet very expensive (up to $4 a pound), the FLEE Club puts enjoyment before the high costs of the foods.



"After all," says George, "we don't do this sort of thing too regularly."

Whether you're a hamburger gourmet, an escargot fan, or a person interested in enjoying the finer things in life, shop around and plan your meals with variety.

You can enjoy gourmet foods at reasonable prices if you plan your menu carefully.

Successful Living

Innocence Impossible In Today's Society

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: I want to express myself re an article by some sociologist re morals and modern life styles. From observations over the years it is my opinion that the more experts we have, the less common sense.

We used to attend and enjoy movies, until we noticed (in the 50's) that they became a little more crude, violent and sex oriented. We stopped going. The entertainment world immunized people from shock step by step until our last two generations have lived on garbage (mentally). When educated people ask, "Why do people react to sex resentfully and not so much to violence?" it is wonder.

Anyone with a half ounce of brain know that the year of puberty and, till 20 years, children's sex level is at its highest and their stability at its lowest. This includes both boys and girls. The entertainment that stimulates this appetite is dangerous. Violence is bad too, but it isn't the same thing at all.

The charm of childhood is essence is its innocence, but this is being taken away from our children. The charm of teen-agers is modesty and a certain aura of innocence too, and this is also being taken away. Going steady is promoted when boys and girls should be enjoying a carefree time. Certainly, everyone has a crush here and there, but that isn't the same as dating.

When I see our varsity students unkempt and untidy, smirking and talking smart about their freedoms, it turns my stomach.

How free is the pregnant girl? How free is the boy responsible for a child he will never see or be able to love? How free are those afflicted with V.D.? (Is there a greater slave than a drug addict?) The greatest freedom is a clean and healthy mind and body and a clean conscience.

It is time we got back to some real values, self-discipline, modesty, and responsibility for our actions. It's also time we put children in proper perspective. Let children be children with love and guidance by parents. Let teenagers be teenagers, instead of confused adults. Certainly they need to know the facts of life when they enter woman hood and manhood. That is a certain amount.

Take the dirty language off the media, the filthy sick movies out of the theatre and pornography off the news stands. Put the kids to work; there is still lots to be done around the house. Inspire them, instil in them responsibility for all their acts. Encourage discipline.

The tragedy of the provocative clothes, which led to a permissive attitude, the relaxation of moral rules for teen-agers, the promotion of sex in the entertainment, business and advertising worlds, and drug addiction, have ruined thousands of young people. It has cost many their lives.

Nothing Is Sacred.

Dear Nothing: I admire your sentiments, which are well expressed. But we no longer have the state of affairs in which we can - or even should - keep our young people in ignorance ("innocence", you call it.)

But we are failing in not giving them the whole picture and some basis for judgment. That is what Maureen Orton's letter was all about.

(Every day Doris hears from readers who report success after taking her advice on a human dilemma. Let her help you with yours. Write to her in care of this newspaper.)

All About Bread

Ideal, too long ago, people who made their own bread knew they were being extravagant when they used a loaf of white or whole wheat bread much more cheerily. Why, weren't we sure that's still there so we began counting up fractions of cents worth of salt and cups of flour to compare.

First, we compared the price of flour. If you bought wheat in a 100 lb. bag and ground it yourself, the resulting whole wheat flour would cost you about two cents per cup. White flour at current supermarket prices would cost about 4¼ cents per cup. Whole wheat flour costs about 4¾ cents per cup. (If you buy health food store whole wheat flour it costs 5 cents per cup.)

If you made your own 100 per cent whole wheat bread from a standard recipe (see below) using home-ground flour, your cost per 24-ounce loaf would be 17 cents a loaf, compared with 36 cents or more in the supermarket.

This cost includes only materials, including bread dough, about has to be a labor of love. As for baking costs, Ontario Hydro says to preheat your oven to 400 degrees and then it at that temperature for 30 minutes will cost about two cents. If you bake four loaves of bread, that's an additional cost of ½ a cent per loaf.

The same loaf of 100 per cent whole wheat bread purchased with store-bought whole wheat flour would cost about 29½ cents.

Many people prefer a lighter whole wheat bread or plain white bread. Here are comparative costs: plain white bread costs about 23½ cents a loaf to make according to our standard recipe.

Sixty per cent whole wheat would cost 18½ cents a loaf with home-ground flour and 23½ with all store-bought flour.

You can, by the way, also buy frozen bread dough — not a brand advertises "no preservatives" — for some thing over 20 cents for a small loaf.

If you're one of those four-person families that uses eight loaves of bread a week — the Canadian Department of Health and Welfare recommends that amount — then your savings could be substantial. However keep in mind that your actual costs may not be so low; the family is likely to eat a lot more home-made bread!

Bread

One tbsp or package dry yeast
½ cup lukewarm water one tsp sugar
two cups milk
¼ cup sugar
two tbsp margarine
two tbsp salt
two cups water
10 - 12 cups flour

Sprinkle the yeast in ¼ cup warm water with one tsp sugar. Let stand 10 minutes. Scald milk, add sugar, margarine and salt. Stir until shortening melts and add water. Cool slightly. Add yeast and stir in about five cups flour, beating with a spoon. Add remaining flour gradually, adding enough to keep dough from sticking to bowl. Turn out onto lightly floured board and knead for 10 minutes. Shape into a ball and let rise in a greased bowl in a warm place for about an hour. Punch down and divide into four portions. Let rest 10 minutes. Shape into loaves and place in greased pans. Let rise one hour. Bake in preheated 400 degree oven for 30 minutes.

For white bread, substitute all whole wheat flour and use double yeast: for 60 per cent whole wheat use five cups white flour, and seven cups whole wheat flour, and use two packages or tablespoons of yeast.

Progress by Baby Steps: Ending Sexism in Kids' Books

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Sympathizers with the women's movement say a giant step will be taken when children's rhymes no longer present girls like frightened Miss Muffet, Little Mary and disorganized Bo-Peep.

But the changes toward nonsexist children's literature — in which girls think and act and boys care and cook — is proceeding by baby steps.

"As a rule, books haven't changed very much," said Betty Swyers, children's literature instructor at Virginia (Commonwealth) University.

"Where the change is seen is in books that are being written by women authors, who are writing about girls. It is going to take six months to a year at least before the public becomes aware that there are alternatives to the good old faithful, and parents can choose books in which girls are doing their thing."

A survey by one of her classes showed that certain readers "are definitely stuck" where mothers stay at home and fathers go to work, and biographies and social studies books deal primarily with men.

This trend carries over into the books chosen for home reading.

"People are afraid, fear Mrs. Swyers commented, "of the books that change the traditional roles. Our survey showed that if girls were called tom-boys, their mothers said: 'It's just a phase.'

"But if boys were called sissies, the mothers became determined to teach them to be a man. They were very defensive about what they thought to be effeminate traits in boys."

What the new "liberated" books deal with primarily are human feelings and situations, dealt with by both boys and girls, or genderless animals.

"I don't believe anyone is deliberately setting out to change roles in books," Mrs. Swyers said. "But what is obvious to anyone who takes a good look at some of the children's books is that there are some real injustices — both to men and women."

Mrs. Swyers stated that in pre-school ages, cuddling and crying and exploration of the world is much the same for both boys and girls, and to impose sex roles at that age is false.

Realism and fantasy are finding their way into the non-sexist children's literature. Examples of the new realism are books that show a variety of roles for parents, not just the traditional division of labor at the old Dick and Jane readers.

Several deal with new jobs for mothers, in addition to the stay-at-home mommy. Mommies go to work, daddies help with the dishes; mommies build houses, daddies fix breakfast.

Ann Landers

Friends Scarce During Illness, Flock Around When It's Too Late

Dear Ann Landers: I can't get anything done today. My phone keeps ringing. For nearly a year I waited for it to ring. But it rang so seldom it was always a shock. The same with the doorbell. Almost nobody came.

My husband was buried yesterday, and now his "friends" are pestering me around the clock. I know it won't last long, but I have to get this off my chest.

Where was everybody when he needed visitors? He was such a fine man. Why did they phone once or twice and not return? He wasn't one to ask favors. He would never impose on anybody. And he was good company, too. Where was everybody during those last months when he desperately needed to see people?

If I sound bitter, Ann, it's because I am. Please run my letter for those who know someone who is ill. Maybe it will help them. It's too late for my darling.—No Signature Please

Dear N.S.: Here's your letter. If the shoe fits, folks, wear it.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a guy. A certain chick who sits across from me in study period is my type. I sort of liked her and have been wanting to ask her for a date.

All of a sudden, a strange feeling came over me. Without even thinking, I asked another chick who sits across from me. I don't know why I did it. I hardly knew this other girl. We haven't said more than 10 words to each other. She seemed surprised but accepted the invitation. So now I have to go through with it.

Can you explain why I did this crazy thing. It makes no sense.—Big Mystery

Dear Big: When people are uptight, they sometimes say or do exactly the opposite of what they had intended. It's a freaky, psychological twist, kind of a perverse joke on themselves.

You're still young, fella. There's plenty of time left to ask Miss Girl-Next-Door, and I hope you do, soon.

Dear Ann Landers: Your columns are a faithful reflection of what is happening in the world. They provide irrefutable evidence of how times have changed.

I was struck by the letter from the mother who didn't think children should be paid for doing chores or helping in the house. She said the kids should know that, as members of the family, they were expected to pitch in and no rewards need be given. I certainly agree.

When my children were small back in the '30s, money was very hard to come by. We had four children and I gave them each 30c with the following stipulation: 10c to spend on whatever you want; 10c for penchre or writing paper for school; 10c for charity.

I never made any connection between the 30c and "you want"—but I noted with interest that no one shirked his duties. I always felt they wanted to "earn" the money I had given them.—Mrs. L., Edmonton

Dear Mrs. L.: You sound like a wise woman. I especially liked the 10c for charity. I wonder how many parents today plant this thought in the minds of their children.

Men's Clothes Subdued Again

By JEAN SHARP
The Canadian Press

It looks as though men are reverting to conservatism in clothing styles for the spring.

A buyer in Ottawa said, "You can hardly give away a brightly colored shirt these days."

He said the industry may be "sliding back" into a replacement business, partly because of rising prices and tight money. Men would not buy to keep up with fashion, only to replace clothes as they wear out.

He was, perhaps, the gloomiest in outlook, but men's wear fashion experts everywhere predicted a conservative season in a Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press.

In Regina, styles were described as "more conservative".

A Toronto fashion writer said lapels now are four inches wide, jackets slightly tapered at the waist. The flare on trousers is reduced to 21¼ inches from 25 inches. Ties are 4¼ inches wide.

In St. John's, Nfld., as elsewhere, knitted suits have gone out of favor because of tailoring difficulties, and because they have a tendency to bag.

A buyer there said about half the dress suits available for spring are white-on-white and colored shirts are in subdued shades.

Co-ordinates were reported doing well in Montreal and Winnipeg, mixing shirts, vests, blazers, safari jackets in suits or jacket-and-pants ensembles.

In Edmonton, a department store buyer said good quality men's shoes continue to have the traditional look.

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Police are looking for about 50 bicycles — stolen from the police impound lot — after the theft was pounded off the door. The burglars apparently used two trucks, loaded the bikes which had previously been stolen or found abandoned and fled.

To Your Good Health

Shaving Still Best Depilatory

By G. C. Thesleson, MD

Dear Dr. Thesleson: What's the problem of facial hair is driving me up the wall. I have tried numerous depilatories, at least eight kinds, the wax method, bleaching, and even tweezing (which is, to say the least, impossible, especially with a touch of arthritis in the hands).

Electrolysis is out of the question because of the amount of hair involved and the cost.

One more complaint: with depilatories the hair for the most part remains but the skin becomes off.

Please, is there any solution within reason? Why, oh, why, if they can land a human on the moon, can't someone, anyone, invent something to help us poor bearded ladies?—Mrs. E.J.

Please don't think I'm being facetious when I say that a pretty reliable method had been invented. You didn't mention trying it, but I think you'll find it meets your needs.

You are, obviously, more skin-sensitive than most, although you are not alone in encountering irritation from depilatories.

But I think your answer is shaving. If those arthritic hands make shaving with a blade difficult, then your choice would be an electric razor. No danger of cutting yourself, and even tender skins usually take kindly to such a method of shaving.

Of course, hairs grow out again, but as soon as a bit of stubble appears, you can take it off in a matter of a few minutes. Even spend three or four minutes every morning if need be.

There are long-standing myths that shaving makes the hairs grow faster and heavier, but they are not true. Except for such arguments which are by without validity, there's no reason why the ladies shouldn't use razors as needed. In fact, there are ladies' models of the electrics available.

Dear Dr. Thesleson: I am 40 and have lost two teeth because they became loose and fell out. They were not decayed.

My friends have told me it is cancer of the gums, to take Vitamin E, that it's a vitamin deficiency. Will you please help me? Is there a cure for loose teeth?—A.G.G.

Friends with advice like that you don't need. "Cancer of the gums" is ridiculous, and taking Vitamin E for such a purpose is one more example of the outrageous claims being made for it.

What you need to do is see a dentist and find out whether pyorrhea or some other dental disease is causing you to lose teeth. More teeth are lost from such gum diseases than from tooth decay.

Dear Dr. Thesleson: I am 65 and my doctor has put me on Premarin, which is a hormone. I have heard that hormones, when given as medicine, cause the hair to grow on the face. Is this true?—M.H.

No, not true. The point you are missing is that there are two main kinds of hormones, male and female. You are receiving the latter. Female hormones don't cause hair growth.

Dear Dr. Thesleson: My complexion was forever breaking out. A dermatologist prescribed tetracycline before a day. In almost no time I saw a big improvement. The prescription ran out and I stopped and in a week my face was broken out. I went back for another prescription and today my complexion is fine.

I've been on this medication for a year and am afraid to stop. I wonder if there is any danger or side effects from taking this antibiotic so long?—J.A.F.

That's one of the standard treatments for acne. The drug I used is quite small doses and my advice is that you let your doctor worry about side effects. He knows what he is doing.

Dear Dr. Thesleson: My son is 17 and I took out of a tree and he broke his jaw. They did not have to do any surgery but they took at least 20 x-rays in one evening. I became upset and refused to let them take any X-rays more. That was five years ago and his jaw hasn't given him any trouble, but every time I read an article about excessive x-ray being harmful, I wonder if he could suffer any ill effects now or at later times and what would be the symptoms?—Mrs. J.

The 20 x-rays might have totalled an exposure of about two seconds, all told, and I wouldn't expect any harm or any symptoms now or in the future.

Note to Mrs. J.A.P.: Psoriasis may be influenced by nervous tension but is not "caused by nerves." While there is no specific cure, various medical treatments can limit the severity and discomfort.

By Oswald and James Jacoby

Since this seems to be the week for unusual plays, we will wind up with a humdinger.

North's three-spade call was a real stretch. He had no reason to attach any value to his queen of hearts and one king of spades did not justify his attempt to reach game.

Still that queen of hearts was of value and if East had not made a very fine defensive play, North's overbid would have worked.

South won the heart lead with his jack and led a low trump to dummy's king. Any ordinary bridge player would have put the ace on the king without a moment's hesitation, but East was Giorgio Belladonna of Italy's world-champion Blue Team.

Giorgio may well be the best player in the World. He is certainly one of the top five and he had no problem. He let that king hold the trick.

Now, what would you do if you were South? You would do just what this South did. You would lead a spade from dummy and finesse your ten. West would collect a surprise trick with his jack and East's three aces would complete your downfall.

What would have happened if Giorgio had played his ace? South would probably have held his queen of trumps down; dropped the jack and made his contract.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Sunday, March 17

Aries (March 21-April 19) Loosen up a little today. You tend to be yourself and others too seriously. Look for the lighter side.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Hold a bit if discussing with friends issues and philosophies not in accord with yours. They have rights to make as well.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) You can't expect others to be free and lavish if you aren't equally generous with them. Give, in order to get.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) Though it appears the other party is selfishly seeking to have his way, he feels the same about you. Try to compromise today.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) You're likely to delegate a task today because you've neglected to do what you should have.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If you're out among friends today, relax. Let yourself go. Minimize conversation that deals with weighty subjects. You'll bore them stiff.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You're home will lack its usual warmth today. Those who enter will sense this unless you make an extra effort to put them at ease.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) This is a good day to take care of neglected correspondence. Write or phone those to whom you owe letters or calls.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Make sure you like the person to begin to be wise by living within your means. Give the old budget another once-over.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You'll not want to be idle or feel penned-in today. It's best you have some outside activity planned for yourself.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You require mental discipline today or you'll see only shadows when you should see light. Be more positive.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) A friend has a serious matter to discuss with you. He can't now because you've been unable to get together, but you can today.

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Monday, March 18

Aries (March 21-April 19) You will make a faulty decision based upon a resentment harbored against another. It will be to your disadvantage in much that annoying is.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) There is a problem brewing with a friend over a material matter. Spell out clearly any financial transactions.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) Is a situation where you have a joint interest someone you are dealing with favors your partners. Be alert.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) Make no major decisions now unless you are certain you have all the facts. Something important is being held back.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) It doesn't appear as if you are getting full value for work or service you are having done at present. Compare prices elsewhere.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You will find yourself in the middle of an unusual social situation that could cause you some posted problems.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Keep a watchful eye on items and possessions today. Be sure older members of your family do the same.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) A gathering you are hoping forward to may not turn out as pleasurable as you anticipate. Check first to see who else is coming.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Curb your outside spending temporarily. Concentrate your means on family and home. They can put it to better use.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) There will be some confusions where work or career is concerned. Be sure your goals are in line with co-workers'.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Funds you have earmarked for something worthwhile may be foolishly snared for something else at this time.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) Avoid if you can large groups of people who hang together clannishly. Crowds spell trouble.

Priest Imprisoned

VENICE, Italy (AP) — A court sentenced a former parish priest to two years in a mental hospital for insulting Pope Paul by carrying said Michel Colin, 58, called himself "Pope Clement XV" and denied Pope Paul as a heretic and usurper of the papacy. Colin lives in France and would be subject to the sentence only if he enters Italy.

Spring Due--And No Winter of Discontent, After All

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Spring is due next week. Meantime, the compara-tively easy winter experienced so far this season has been a money-saver for Belleville residents.

In fact, they have saved on two fronts.

Mercy, then - average temperatures have resulted in not only in a marked to fuel bills. At the same time, less-than-normal snowfall has meant lower costs for snowplowing and sanding of city streets.

James A. Driscoll, Metro Scientific Funds Manager, estimates that the initial winter has saved the homeowners approximately 10 per cent in fuel bills.

And, in addition, Mr. Driscoll feels consumers indirectly have saved up to another four per cent by setting thermostats a bit lower.

"It appears the total saving will be somewhere between 10 and 14 per cent," he says.

City Engineer Wilbur Purcell has not worked out up-to-the-minute figures on winter control costs for this season. But he admits the saving is more remarkable when you consider the heavy snowfall and blizzards of January and February costs during this period were expected to be down.

In the city water filtration plant in the west end of the city, plant manager James Sriven confirmed the lighter snowfall this winter season.

Actually Mr. Sriven said, the amount of snowfall doesn't mean too much. It's the amount of water that remains on the ground that really determines costs.

However, snowfall this winter season was 41 inches to the end of February.

This compares with 94 inches for the same period a year ago and 78.5 inches for the 1972-1973 season.

"Snowfall for the two-month period of December and January was 23.5 inches with 34.3 inches being received during January and February.

But whatever the snowfall total, abnormally warm temperatures late in February and early March have meant that it is now all gone.

And Spring starts March 20, at 7.07 p.m.

Yardmen Sports Centre Start Seen for 1974

By AL ZABAS
Staff Reporter

Several Belleville Yardmen officials are hopeful a 1974 construction start can be made on a proposed Quinte Sports Complex on the organization's 37-acre Camelfinn Rd. site.

Ken O'Bryan, a ranking member of the Yardmen advisory committee, said Friday night the group is hoping to break ground this year. Mr. O'Bryan is with the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education applied psychology department.

Committee chairman Maurice Reglendal, special lecturer in physical education at Sudbury's Laurentian University, confirmed "We want to break ground this year."

However, before a sod is turned, architectural drawings must be completed.

To this, Reglendal plans may be based upon a report the advisory committee is currently engaged in, said Mr. O'Bryan. A portion of the report, dealing in part with observations made by several committee members during a recent week-long visit to Olympic facilities in Montreal.

Colored slides taken during the visit by Mr. O'Bryan, Yardmen president Ted Brandon, Mr. Reglendal and Yardmen secretary Ernie Belanger were given a special preview Friday night.

Both men spoke following a special dinner-conference attended called by the Yardmen to announce that the organization has reached the $1 million mark on its way to an estimated $5 million price tag for the proposed complex.

Mr. Belanger said the fund has more than $1 million in cash in the bank. Another $400,000 has been pledged for 16 acres of land and a recently-established field office on Camelfinn Rd.

Through the monthly provincial lottery, the Belleville Yardmen Benefit Fund Inc. has been raising finances for the project. It is a proposed sports complex to house an Olympic-size pool, arena and a gymnasium. The lottery has been in operation for four years.

Mr. Belanger said he could not give a firm figure as to eventual cost. With constantly escalating prices involved in construction waits the higher the eventual cost, he said.

Mr. Reglendal said the advisory committee expects to have an extensive report on the project started by April. Completion, it will be passed on to architect Fred Rosenkrantz, of Toronto.

The advisory committee's Munich visit collected ideas to round off the study, said Mr. Reglendal.

"We hope the architect can incorporate some of these ideas," he said. "We want to make sure the complex is not a white elephant."

Project Draws Support From Local Politicians

Jack Ellis MP Hastings, says he already has contacted federal health and welfare ministry officials on the proposed Sports Complex in Belleville.

He told a meeting called by the Yardmen at Club Cosmo Friday night, the project has his 100 per cent co-operation in seeking federal funds towards the $5-million estimated cost.

Mr. Ellis said the project will have him pushing for government support "when the time is ripe."

Ernie Belanger, Yardmen secretary, told The Intelligencer that federal government officials have indicated they will commit funds if the provincial government agrees to do so.

He said he was not at liberty to say from which "top civil servants"" he received the assurance.

Also present during Friday's celebration marking the Yardmen attained 1/4 of $1 million in cash toward the project, was Mayor Robert Jeffrey.

"Belleville is interested in your project," she said. "We have set that land aside for you. I hope that this year, we'll see that shovel in the ground."

Yardmen have requested the city hold 21 acres of township property on the east side of Camelfinn Rd.

Dog Raises Fire Alarm

A Corbyville woman escaped serious injury Friday when the barking of her dog warned her that part of her house was afire.

Mrs. Pat Hammill RR 1 Corbyville, was taking a bath about 4.30 p.m. when her dog began barking. Deciding to investigate, she put on a robe and found a corner of her kitchen on fire.

Thurlow township fire captain Bob Pearce said he encountered some difficulty locating the home as the woman didn't leave much details after she hurriedly phoned the alarm to the operator.

Location was made after inquiry at Corbyville post office.

Fire moved to the back end of the two-storey frame house, and firemen stayed on the scene until 11 p.m.

Damage was estimated by Cpt. Pearce at $10,000-$15,000.

It was the fifth house fire in Thurlow township in the past two weeks.

Agreement At Millhaven

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — The terms of an agreement between guards and administration at Millhaven penitentiary appears to be holding despite a announcement Friday that the sides have reached agreement following a week of discussion.

The statement made no mention of when the prison will resume normal routine. The guards have been refusing to work more than one over-time shift and a number of other programs have had to be curtailed.

The talks have centred around overtime and working conditions.

The guards also are concerned about the amount of privileges that are granted to a recently formed prisoner organization and the way in which disciplinary charges against prisoners have been handled.

Six Hurt — On 401

Six people were injured this morning following a series of four separate pile-ups on Highway 401 in the Marysville area, 5 miles Belleville OPP.

Provincial police were called to the scene about 8.30 a.m. when poor road conditions were blamed as the cause of the pile-ups, police said.

Three Hurt In Crash

TRENTON — Three people were injured in a two-car collision at the corner of Byron and Dundas Streets at 12.36 a.m. today.

An estimated $1,400 damage was caused to vehicles driven by Walter Joseph Paul, 27 Byron Street, and John Cunningham of 643 Bridge Street East, Belleville.

A passenger in the Cunningham vehicle, Marilyn Reid, 283 Sidney St. Belleville, was also taken to Trenton Memorial Hospital with injuries.

Relaxing Behind Bars

Correctional Services Minister Richard Potter (left) chose a cot in vacant cell for brief pause on tour of Quinte Detention Centre Friday. He and centre's superintendent, E. W. Martin, kept on discussing facilities at the installation — the first outside Toronto visited by Dr. Potter since re-cent switch to new ministry.

Potter: Public Not Aware Of Inmate Rehab Programs

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

The Ontario public isn't sufficiently aware of the progress made in positive social results in its provincial detention centres.

That's the opinion of the province's new correctional services minister, Richard Potter, after Quinte Detention Centre visit Friday.

Dr. Potter says his view is confirmed after an inspection of the Quinte Regional Detention Centre at Napanee, Friday.

Programs at the centre exemplify contemporary emphasis on rehabilitation instead of just plain incarceration in provincial institutions, he said.

"It's a correctional service, not just a detention centre."

No cause has been determined for the fire.

Slight Fire

TRENTON — A house fire at the home of Virginia Hillgion, R 1 Trenton in Wooler caused minor damage Friday night.

Trenton Fire Department answered the call at 9.54 p.m.

No cause has been determined for the fire.

Growers Might Find Help At Region Detention Centre

Correctional Services Minister Richard Potter says inmates from the Quinte Detention Centre may help local fruit growers with yearly picking problems.

Inmates at the Napanee centre could be employed by growers under the ministry's temporary absence program.

Under the scheme, inmates work on jobs during the day at local communities, returning to detention centres at night.

They're paid going rates by employers and the centre charges working inmates for lodging expenses. At Napanee, the room-and-board charge is $4 a day.

Dr. Potter said he has already discussed with local growers the possibility of offering work in Quinte fruit fields to Napanee inmates. Similar projects have worked elsewhere in the province.

Finding pickers is a recurring problem for growers. In the Belleville area seasonal immigrant workers have been hired from the West Indies, Mexico and Europe.

Bancroft Units For Elderly: April Tenders

BANCROFT — Tenders for this village's senior citizen housing project will be called by mid-April, Clarke Rollins, MPP Hastings, anticipates.

Mr. Rollins said he had been advised by the Ontario Housing Corporation that the project will consist of approximately 28 units.

It will be located on the site of the old community arena.

What the minister saw included third floor facilities, medical, recreation programs, algeblo-music, medical and dental facilities and a mess on which a main meal is set repeated in six weeks.

What he heard about included how his ministry's temporary absence program works by the Quinte-Kingston area.

Dr. Potter received data on the key project. It permits inmates to work in surrounding communities. They're paid going wages and contribute to room which the institution then deducts lodging expenses.

At Napanee, the charge is $4 a day for inmates in the detention centre while boarding a daytime job.

Dr. Potter was given a development of a 200-acre tract of land at Kendall Bay at a provincial park and camping ground.

The tract is between Highway 62 and the Barry's Bay - Bon Echo Provincial Park. It has lake frontage of 700-800 feet, a beach less than a half-mile from the highway.

Nearest outlay to the site is approximately two miles away so Mr. Briggs feels there would be little possibility of pollution.

The question of pollution, should the Papineau Lake site be developed, is main objective of Papineau Lake Ontario Associations.

It was proposed by the Mount Madawaska group in about 16 miles north of Papineau Lake.

The Mount Madawaska Development Ltd. organized about eight years ago and initially with a 1,000 acre grant, has a $500,000 recreational complex on 3,200 acres of crown land in the Barry's Bay area.

Papineau Park Issue Brings New Proposal

If Papineau Lake cottagers don't want the provincial park and camping grounds being developed for their area, Mount Madawaska Co-Operative would be happy to oblige.

That is the word from Ron Briggs of Barry Bay, chairman of the Mount Madawaska group, who said the proposal would be discussed at a Provincial Resources Minister, Leo Bernier.

Today, Mr. Briggs said the Mount Madawaska group has the support of the development of a 200-acre tract of land at Kendall Bay at a provincial park and camping ground.

The tract is between Highway 62 and the Barry's Bay - Bon Echo Provincial Park. It has lake frontage of 700-800

CUPE Now Bidding On Parks, Recreation

Hourly-rated employees of Belleville Recreation-Arena committee and the Board of Parks Management could be represented by applications scheduled before the Ontario Relations Board are expected to be heard.

The Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE) has made separate applications to the board for certification of the bargaining units for the two local groups of employees, it was learned by Toronto is scheduled for March 27.

A total of 11 employees would be involved in the parks board unit, while the Union is asking certification for a total of 37 recreation-arena jobs, including part-time jobs.

The city will ask that only eight essential full-time workers for the recreation-arena department be considered for any bargaining unit.

Many of the department's summer employees are students and others are workers who work less than full time.

City clerical workers and hourly-rated employees of the city public works department are already members of CUPE.

At the Toronto hearing the city will be represented by City Solicitor John C. Miller and personnel officer Douglas Wright.

Picton School Earns A From Pupils' Parents

BLOOMFIELD — Douglas Trumble, Prince Edward-Lennox Elizabeth school in Picton this week reported results of a survey on the school's educational program to Prince Edward parents.

Mr. Trumble said that the survey was conducted in the community in two sections by sending questionnaires to parents of children in Grades 3 to 8 and to parents of students in Kindergarten to Grade 4.

First section of the questionnaire asked parents to comment on the statement", All is all, Queen Elizabeth School is doing a good job of education in our child or children."

"All aspects of the questionnaire speak very highly of the interest and concern shown by the in the town of Picton, for educational matters," said Mr. Trumble.

Approximately 80 per cent of the questionnaires were returned.

Results of agreement or disagreement with the questionnaire's statement regarding the school showed the following percentages results:

The results were decisively favorable — 82 percent for Kindergarten grade, 4 and 72 per cent for other grades.

In general, comments included need for greater emphasis on basic skills in the open area and a more severe disciplinary system in the schools.

Mr. Trumble noted that 11 per cent of the respondents to the survey asked for a greater streaming of basic skills in all subjects, but especially in mathematics.

Home Project Gets $250,000

PICTON — James Taylor, MPP Prince Edward-Lennox Friday visited the site of the new Prince Edward County home for the aged in Picton as a provincial government cheque for $250,000.

The cheque was received by past warden and owner of Bloomfield Allan Anderson, chairman of county council's social services committee. With Reeve Anderson were Prince Edward warden Ross MacDonald and George Ross, administrator for the county home.

Council already has received another government cheque, bringing the province's total contribution to $430,000 to date.

Mr. Taylor said that he expects a further cheque for $230,000 will be available within the next ten days.

Phys Ed Furor Gets Into Exam

By LENNY WILLIAMSON

Honestly, we're bored to death with phys ed.

The most we extract one word of the anti-phys ed column that started the furor. But the subject has been worked to death.

If we have one regret it is that the materials in our argument were not more widely cogent. At one stage we even considered offering our services as phys ed teachers to the jocks' lobby, just in the interests of good sportsmanship. But wiser heads prevailed and pointed out that such a move would violate newspaper ethics.

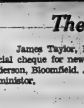
But what banished our boredom and brought us into the fray again was news sneaked out of the closely-monitored rooms where thousands of high school students this week were writing exams.

The jocks dealt us a blow before the bell rang, and evident sur of all to one who still harbors pathological tenors of exams.

At one school the anti-phys ed column was the subject of a question, worth 10 marks, on the phys ed exam. It was one of several topics the student could choose for an essay type answer.

The question began by stating that "a certain writer" had called for the abolition of high school phys ed. It asked the examinee to support or oppose this attitude giving five reasons to back up his or her argument.

Now really folks, is this fair? Our feelings about exams are only slightly less than our feelings about phys ed. The excessive amount of testing and examining our students are subjected to is a waste of teaching and learning time, merely to give teachers written evidence of their predetermined evaluation of their students standing. So leave me off the examination sheets in the future.



However, some student friends of ours (not connected with the school in question) have enabled us the blow a bit. The answer calls for an opinion, not a regurgitation of a half forgotten lesson, they point out.

"Look at it this way," they say. "You've given the kids who didn't study for the exam a chance by offering an excuse for an opinion answer."

I wish I could do as much in every subject.

So good luck, kids, and may you all get 19 marks out of 18 on the reformed question. And to all the battle-weary survivors of this week's round of examinations: don't hold post mortems; get your kicks by remembering your teachers have to give up their leisure to mark all those damned papers and have a happy winter break.

The Happy Handshake

James Taylor, Prince Edward-Lennox MPP, presented $250,000 provincial cheque for new homes for elderly in Picton, Friday to Reeve Allan Anderson, Bloomfield. Among those at ceremony was George Ross, home administrator.

Remparts Rip Royals

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Cornwall Royals might have been permitted a smug and self-satisfied smile Thursday night when they clinched first place in the Quebec Major Junior A Hockey League's West Division with a 16-1 shellacking of Hull Festivals.

Friday they found out how the other half lives, going down to a 13-1 loss at the hands of the Quebec Remparts.

Canucks Play Spoilers' Role

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Vancouver Canucks, in next-to-last place in the East Division, Friday night put a slight crimp in Atlanta Flames' bid for a playoff berth in the Western sector of the National Hockey League.

The Canucks, only two points ahead of the last-place New York Islanders, and out of playoff contention, defeated the Flames 3-0 before 15,870 fans.

In the only other game Friday, Pittsburgh Penguins fanned their faint playoff hopes by bounding California Golden Seals 6-1.

In today's action, Boston Bruins visit Toronto Maple Leafs for an afternoon game; and tonight, Chicago Black Hawks are at Montreal Canadiens, New York Rangers at New York Islanders, Detroit Red Wings at Los Angeles Kings, Buffalo Sabres at St. Louis Blues, the Penguins play in Vancouver and Philadelphia Flyers go to Bloomington to oppose Minnesota North Stars.

Gerry O'Flaherty's two-goal performance sparked the Canucks, who also shutout goaltending from Gary Smith. It was Smith's second shutout of the season. The loss prevented Atlanta from breaking a tie for third place with Los Angeles. However, the Flames still enjoy a five-point edge over St. Louis, their closest pursuers.

The Penguins, with 11 games remaining, have a mathematical chance for a berth in the post-season series, but currently are 19 points off the pace. Jean Pronovost's 35th goal of the season and Lowell MacDonald's 32nd, set the pattern for the Pittsburgh triumph.

Elsewhere in the National League, the Rangers said Friday that centre Walt Tkaczuk will be sidelined for an indefinite period with a broken jaw. He suffered the injury in the third period of Thursday night's game in New York, where the Rangers were beaten 5-2. Tkaczuk has 17 goals and 39 assists for 56 points in 63 games.

New York Islanders have called up defenseman Bill Nicholson and forward Brian Marchinko to replace defenseman Dave Lewis and forward Lorne Henning. Lewis suffered a fractured cheekbone in Thursday night's 2-1 loss to Toronto Maple Leafs. Henning underwent an appendectomy last Wednesday. Nicholson has been playing for Fort Worth Wings of the Central Hockey League and Marchinko was with Providence Reds of the American Hockey League.

Boston Bruins' coach Bep Guidolin says suspended centre Derek Sanderson may never wear a Boston uniform again. "If we were to meet on the street and he invited me for a couple of drafts, we would be talking like two cab drivers, or two executives—or whatever.

"But it's very doubtful, as far as the present management of the Bruins is concerned, that he will ever wear a Bruin uniform again," Guidolin said.

Sanderson missed the team plane from Oakland last weekend and subsequently was suspended and fined $1,500.

"In my mind, he ran out on us," Guidolin said. "Then he didn't come back to Boston and that was it for me."

3-0 Lead For Bears

SMITHS FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Smiths Falls Bears downed Pembroke Lumber Kings 6-4 Friday to take a 3-0 lead in games in their Central Junior Hockey League best-of-seven final series.

Don Robertson led the scoring for the Bears with two goals including the last goal of the game to clinch the win.

Perry Hemingway, Beaver Corkran, Barry Kerfoot and Terry Fournier all scored once for Smiths Falls.

Tim Harrington, Mike Toppazini, Peter Pallotta and Randy Rich were Pembroke's marksmen.

Nine of 23 minor penalties went to Smiths Falls. Each team was assessed a major. Pembroke's Randy Burman left the ice early in the third period for a game misconduct.

Over 3,000 fans attended.

The fourth game of the series is scheduled for Sunday in Pembroke.

CHECKING WITH YOUR STICK— EFFECTIVELY

Earlier, I mentioned that I check more with my stick than with my body. Whether it's a poke or sweep check you've got to be extremely careful.

You should always make sure that in case you get beaten you've provided yourself with a chance to get the attacker with your body.

In other words, let's say Montreal's Yvan Cournoyer is coming in on me. When I've made my move to knock the puck away from him I want to be in a position which would allow me to step into him if I miss the puck.

A good way to improve your stick-checking is to work one-on-one situations in praiters. The puck carrier will also benefit from the drill, especially with his stickhandling and deking.

When the puck carrier is skating towards you; DON'T put your stick out as far as you can — you're not trying to deke and how far you can reach, KEEP your stick close to your body.

Once he makes his move to get closer to you or around you then you should reach out either for the puck or his stick. In either case, be sure you've squared yourself from the play. If you've waited for the opportune time to come to you, then you won't be completely beaten.

Stick-checking is another of hockey's fundamentals. Toronto's Dave Keon is quite good at it and Derek Sanderson is an excellent sweep-checker. Work on stick checking at every practice, it's one more way of being an effective hockey player.

Playoff Openers To Flyers, Terriers

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Barrie Flyers and Orillia Terriers open the finished Ontario Hockey Association Senior A hockey schedule in first and second place respectively Sunday in first-game victories Friday in best-of-seven playoff series action.

At Barrie the Flyers downed Brantford Travelers 7-3 and in Orillia, the Terriers stopped Cambridge Hornets by the same score.

Pat Monahan led the Barrie attack with two goals, with Bob Baird, Doug Acomb, Brian Curtis, Dave Richelhieu and Ron Robinson adding single markers.

Stu Davison, Bill Simpell and Al Osborne scored for Brantford.

The Flyers outshot the Travelers 48-35.

Gord Davies, playing his first home game for the Terriers since respectively the season with the University of Toronto Blues hockey team, scored two goals to pace the Orillia victory.

Jim O'Brien, Garry Marsh, Henry Mosteith, Mike Draper and Grant Moore added single Orillia goals.

Mike Zettel, Steve Hunt and John Brenneman scored for the Hornets.

Playoff action continues tonight, with Orillia taking on the Hornets at Cambridge, and Brantford playing at home against Barrie.

Quinte Saints Meet Hamilton

WATERLOO — Ottawa Lisgar collegiate is the only undefeated team entered in the 23rd annual Golden Ball AAA high school basketball tournament which starts Monday at the University of Waterloo.

The Lisgar team, sporting a 32-0 won-loss record, will meet Eric Sandford Fleming secondary school of North York in the opening game at 9 a.m. Monday.

Toronto De La Salle collegiate (29-3) will play Brantford secondary school of Sault Ste. Marie in the second game at 10.45 a.m., Niagara Falls collegiate and Red Raiders, winners of the Southern Ontario secondary school Association will take on Kipling collegiate Wildcats, standard bearers of the Toronto District Intercollegiate Athletic Association, for 12.30 p.m. The Wildcats are 22-4.

Hamilton Cathedral high school Gaels, champions of the Hamilton Intercollegiate Athletic Conference sporting a 20-3 record play Quinte secondary school of Belleville (25-7) in game 4 at 2.15 p.m.

Kingston collegiate Blues, champs in the Eastern Ontario Secondary School Association play Asumption high school Purple Raiders. South Western Ontario Athletic Association champs at 4 p.m.

Oakwood collegiate Barons (21-2), winners of the Toronto Secondary school Athletic Association clash with the Twin City Athletic Association representatives, Waterloo collegiate Vikings, at 5.45 p.m.

Glendale high school Griffins, winners of the Western Ontario secondary schools Association play Burlington Nelson high school in one of the two night games. The Tillsonburg-Simcoe game will start at 7.30 p.m. followed by the game between Hillcrest high school of Thunder Bay and Brantford collegiate at 9 p.m. Brantford represents the Central Western Ontario Athletic Association, while Hillcrest are the North Western Ontario Secondary School Association champions.

The tournament, being held at the 1,000 seat athletic complex of the University of Waterloo for the first time since 1969 has 16 teams entered.

Five teams will be making their second trip to the all-Ontario's at Waterloo. In 1969 Bewating, Hamilton Cathedral, Oakwood, Kingston and Assumption were entered in the tourney. Assumption won the tournament that year.

The all-Ontario AAA finals, held last year at York University, was won by Eastwood collegiate Rebels of Kitchener.

A total of 72 games will be played during the three-day tournament with eight games slated for Monday, eight for Tuesday and six on Wednesday.

Brooke Bond Upsets Rovers

Brooke Bond staged an upset at the Ellis Rink, Friday night, edging the Rovers 1-0 at the Belleville Broomball League semi-final playoffs opened.

Don Goodfellow potted the game's only goal.

In the second half of the twin bill, Northern Electric topped Union Carbide 3-0 on goals by Ron Ellis, Ron Lessels and Jerry Genereaux.

The semi-finals wind up at Memorial Arena Wednesday night when the teams compete their two-game, goals to count sets.

Game time Wednesday is 8.30 for the Northern Electric-Union Carbide match while Rovers and Brooke Bond book up at 9.30.

Goegan Makes Hustle Pay

Belleville Bobcat, Grant Goegan, proves that hustle always pays off Friday night as he bangs the puck in behind Bramalea goalie, Barrie Oakes. Goegan built the play past two Blue defencemen before faking Oakes and scoring. Grant also had an assist. Belleville won the game 5-3 to take a 1-0 lead in the finals of the Metro Junior B League.

Bobcats Take Opener 6-5

By MIKE BRADSHAW
Sports Staff

The Belleville Bobcats have taken a 1-0 lead in the Metro Junior B finals against Bramalea Blues with a 6-5 win.

Friday night's game at the Memorial Arena was somewhat surprising to the 1,000 fans who went to cheer their team to victory.

The game, up until the final minutes, was nothing to cheer about.

"It was hardly what you would have expected to see in the first game of any league final," said Bramalea coach, Rick Hay. "We played a terrible game. None of the guys on the team could do anything they were supposed to."

Belleville's coach, Moe Hunter, commented "For most of the game it looked as though nobody wanted to win it. We didn't play well at all."

Between the sloppy pass plays and the unorthodox style presented by both teams, a handful of players stood out on the respective squads.

The Cats' Kevin Joudrey kept Belleville in control of the game every time he took to the ice with good forechecking and consistent backchecking. Joudrey also led the Bobcats on the scoresheet with two goals.

Dave Flesch played well for the locals in his defensive position keeping the blues in check on their rushes.

"Neither team played well," said Belleville defenceman, Dave Yohn. "I don't think we were up for the game, but it just goes to show you. We played poorly and still won."

The Cats controlled most of the game, but never really took advantage of their edge.

"These boys just play as hard as they have to," added Hunter. "Bramalea was only doing anything so we didn't either."

Whenever Belleville needed a goal, they simply skated down the ice and scored it. It appeared as though the Cats knew they could score whenever they had to, but they just couldn't get up the energy to rush all the way down to the Blues net.

The locals jumped into an early lead when Mark Coates deflected Very Amey's blueline shot at 1:32 of the first. John Sergeant also got an assist on the play.

At 6:36, Jim Richardson scored on a good pass play around the Blues goal. Paul King and Wally Dalnard picked up assists.

Dean Hartwell scored the first goal for Bramalea at 19:19 of the first when he beat Rob Duncan. Cats' goalie to the short side. Steve Beasley assisted.

Apparently the Cats didn't appreciate only having a one goal lead that early in the game, so at 55 seconds of the second period Kevin Joudrey tallied an unassisted marker to put them in front 3-1.

Grant Goegan followed suit at 3:17 on a good individual effort after taking a pass from Richardson.

The Blues came back to make it 4-2 at 8:36 when Tom McLeod scored the first of his two. Ted Bonham drew an assist.

McLeod got his second at 16:16 to put Bramalea within one goals on a good pass play with Bonham and Don Walker.

A little over a minute after Goegan had been made 4-3, Joudrey tallied to make it 5-3 Cats. Dave Taylor assisted.

At 5:18 of the third it was 5-4 with Doug Crawford scoring. Dean Popiel and Bill Joyce got assists.

The Bobcats must have felt the pressure Bramalea was starting to exert half way through the final period so they just skated down the ice and tallied another one.

Rob Foster scored at 12:18 with assists going to Richardson and Goegan to relieve the pressure.

It went back to a one-goal margin again as Rob Duncan fired an unassisted marker at 15:45 to make it 6-5.

The most exciting part of the game came in the final 1:20 when Bramalea called the goalie and Tim Yohn got a penalty to give the Blues a two man advantage.

During those dying seconds, even the fans found it in them to cheer in unison.

Bramalea did score while they had a two man advantage, but the play had been whistled dead by the referee a few seconds before.

There were five penalties assessed to Belleville out of a total of nine in the game. The Cats outshot the Blues 46-42.

Anyone wishing to travel to Sunday's game in Bramalea may purchase bus tickets through the Bobcat Booster Club for $3 each at McKnight's Variety.

Game time Sunday is 8.15.

No Winner Yet In QHL Series

Cornerstone Builders figured they had finally won their Quinte Hockey League semi-final series with Stinson's Construction, but the League executive decided that two of the games would not be counted.

Thursday night, Cornerstone and Stinson's battled to a 3-3 tie, the second tie in the seven games the two semi-finalists had played.

Up to Thursday's game, the series stood at 3-2-1 for Cornerstone and the Builders thought a tie would be enough to win it since a draw would give them eight points and the series is the best four out of seven.

The League executive decided that since the series reads the best four out of seven games in their constitution, then eight points is not enough to win the series by two of the points come on tie games.

The two ties were cancelled out and now the series stands at 3-2 Cornerstone.

This Thursday night at 8.15 the two teams will play the eighth game of the best of seven, but it will only count as their sixth.

Dave Jones, Kevin Allen and Dave Horwood scored Stinson's goals Thursday and Paul Padden, John Valvasori and Phil Meeks tallied for Cornerstone.

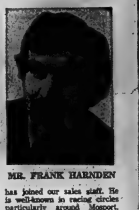
The executive will count all scoring statistics from the-tie games.

Commercial League Officers Are Elected

George Rutledge was elected for his fifth consecutive term as president of the Commercial Softball League when the group held a Thursday meeting.

Also returning to the executive are vice-president Harold Sweden (four years) and Vern Whalen, secretary, (five years).

Bill Shaw is treasurer and serving in the newly created position of registrar, is Mel Eckford.



The league will again operate as a six-team grouping Back for 1974 are Rolling Construction, Howard and Robert Printing, Dryolin Motors, Barden Supplies, Ellis Andrew and Trenton Auger's.

A Madoc intermediate team and a Picton junior squad were represented at the meeting, but Darryl Kramp, Madoc and Ted Thompson, Picton, both showed interest in entering their teams in the league.

The requests were turned down and the league will continue to run its schedule of games with two double headers each week at Alemite Park.

A spokesman for the league said that the consensus was if possible teams were added to the league there was the possibility of travelling to other communities in order to get league games in, support for the idea of road games was minimal.

Dance Your Way to Fitness

Canadian Olympic diver Beverley Boys demonstrates some of the dance-like movements in Lloyd Percival's new rhythmics program for keeping fit. The movements are done in time to two songs written by Percival and recorded by a group called Olympus.

Twins Are Having Their Problems

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Every other major league baseball team has at least two exhibition victories to its credit, but Minnesota Twins still are looking for that elusive No. 1.

Friday's 5-0 loss to St. Louis Cardinals made it nine defeats in a row for the Twins.

"I'd like to see us start to execute and make the plays we're supposed to make," said Twins manager Frank Quilici. "We spent five of our first seven days on the road and it's tough to get your work done under those conditions. Now that we'll be home for a few days we'll have a chance to work on fundamentals."

But even playing at home didn't help Friday.

Lynn McGlothen hurled five scoreless innings and Ted Simmons hit a home run to pace the Cardinals.

Steve Blass of Pittsburgh Pirates, the 1971 World Series pitching hero, also is having troubles. He walked 10 batters in four innings in the Pirates' 6-1 loss to Atlanta Braves.

Ken Brett and Blass held the Braves hitless until the seventh inning when Hank Aaron got a single. However, Blass had walked two runs home in the sixth. Mike Lum then tagged him for a three-run homer in the seventh to snap a 3-3 deadlock.

Mark Bomback allowed one hit in five innings and Juan Marichal made a successful debut with Boston in the Red Sox' 11-1 triumph over New York Mets. Marichal pitched the Mets' run but surrendered only two hits in three innings.

Tommy Davis' bases-loaded triple highlighted Baltimore's four-run outburst in the sixth inning and helped Orioles beat the Reds 10-9.

Ex-Dodger Willie Davis opened the bottom of the ninth inning with a triple and Ken Singleton homered on rookie Eddie Solomon's next pitch, giving Montreal Expos a 4-3 victory over Los Angeles. Davis also had two singles and started a triple play against his former team-mates.

Rookie Cliff Johnson lashed two singles, a double and a home run in leading Houston Astros past Detroit Tigers 6-1.

Consecutive eighth-inning doubles by Tim Johnson, Rob Ellis and Steve McCatfrey helped Milwaukee Brewers defeat Oakland Athletics 8-6.

Pitchers Bob Johnson, Mike Kekich, Ken Sanders and Cecil Upshaw collaborated as Cleveland Indians blanked California Angels 3-0 on seven singles.

Terry Whitfield's three-run homer in the eighth inning sparked New York Yankees over Texas Rangers' B squad 5-2.

Jeff Burroughs drove in three runs with a pair of singles and rookie Jim Sundberg's eighth-inning single sent home the eventual winning run as the Rangers' main unit outlasted Kansas City Royals 9-8.

Chicago Cubs scored four runs in the seventh inning, two on Vic Harris' triple, to defeat Arizona State University 10-7.

Reserve Player Paces Warriors

LOS ANGELES (AP) — If George Johnson was allowed to play full time, he might be one of the National Basketball Association's top rebounders.

Instead, the Golden State Warriors' reserve plays only when Nate Thurmond is out because of injuries.

Johnson grabbed 30 rebounds Friday night and scored 14 points to help the Warriors take first place in the closest of the NBA's divisional races with a 113-107 victory over Los Angeles Lakers.

Johnson got help from another reserve, Cazzie Russell, who scored 35 points.

Elsewhere, Detroit Pistons beat Milwaukee Bucks 92-89, Cleveland Cavaliers edged Boston Celtics 104-103, Chicago Bulls dumped Buffalo Braves 114-97, Houston Rockets defeated Capital Bullets 114-105, Philadelphia 76ers downed Phoenix Suns 108-101, Portland Trail Blazers downed New York Knicks 108-105, and Atlanta Hawks romped over Seattle SuperSonics 136-109.
